NAVAL AIRMAN FLIES 259 MILES AN HOUR FOR WORLD'S RECORD

Lieut. Brow Races Lieut. Williams, Who Beat Him at St. Louis, at Mitchel Field.

PLANES FASTER THAN EYES

Spectators Unable to Follow Swift Flights Over Three-Kilometer Course.

NEW MARK POSSIBLE TODAY

Lieutenant Williams, Congratulating His Rival, Says "But I'm Going to Beat You Tomorrow."

Flying at one time at the rate of nearly five miles a minute, Lieutenant H. J. Brow of the Naval Air Service, in the Navy-Curtiss racer with which he won second place at the international airplane races at St. Louis last month, established a new world's official speed record of 259.15 miles an hour at Mitchel Field, near Garden City, L. I., yesterday afternoon. On the fastest leg of the four times he flew over the measured three-kilometer straightway course, twice with and twice against the wind, Brow attained a speed of 265.21 miles an hour, or faster than any bird or human being has been propelled through the air.

Taking his maximum speed as a basis of calculation, Brow could have negotiated the distance between the Battery and Time Square in one minute. Kelly and Macrady, army pilots, flew from New York to San Diego, Cal., in 26 hours 50 minutes. Brow, with a sufficient fuel and oil supply and traveling at the speed he made yesterday, would cover the distance in 10½ hours.

Yesterday's race, timed by officials of the National Aeronautic Association, American representative of the International Aeronautic Federation, recognized as the official organization to homologate flying records, was the result of a friendly rivalry between Brow and Naval Lieutenant A. J. Williams, former pitcher of the Giants, who won first place at the St. Louis meet. Williams at St. Louis covered the triangular course of 124.27 miles at the rate of 243.67 miles an hour and Brow at 241.78 miles an hour. Brow forthwith challenged his successful brother officer to a race, and Navy Department officials sanctioned the event.

Rival Out to Beat Brow.

After Brow's achievement yesterday, Williams said:

"I congratulate you. You did fine work, but I'm going to beat you tomorrow."

Army and navy officials among the 800 spectators at the field agreed that it was the most keenly contested race in the history of aeronautics. Taking off first, Lieutenant Brow began breaking existing international speed records by flying at 257.42 miles per hour. Williams jumped this figure to 258.61. Brow, cometlike, increased his speed to 259.15 miles per hour. Unfortunately, darkness was beginning to set in and Williams had to stop, as it was impossible for the timers to catch his plane as it darted across the starting and finishing points.

Officials of the National Aeronautic Association said that praise was due to the timers who electrically clocked the fliers as they darted over the lines. It was a task that tested the limits of human perception as Brow and Williams flew over the lines at lightning-like speed, and it required perfect coordination between brain and finger to escape losing a few fractions of a second in pressing the key.

Every precaution was taken by the National Aeronautic Federation to insure against error. C. F. Schory, Secretary of the contest committee, designated Major William N. Hensley Jr., commanding officer of the Army Air Station at Mitchel Field, as directing officer in charge of the trials. Mr. Schory and Major Hensley laid out a three-kilometer course stretching from the southeast corner of Mitchel Field to the northwest corner of Curtiss Field. Five hundred meters beyond each control observation posts were established, thus making the course virtually four kilometers, although the timing was taken only over three kilometers.

Flew at Height of 164 Feet.

Under the rules of the International Aeronautic Federation contestants were required to fly not higher than 50 meters, approximately 164 feet. By virtue of this the spectators were enabled to appreciate the amazing speed which the fliers were makink over the course.

"It simply took my breath away," said one Mitchel Field observer. "Brow and Williams attained speeds that simply were faster than the eye, when looking overhead to catch them as they passed the line. I tried to take a snapshot of them with my camera, but my hand was not quick enough."

The pilots were not permitted to enter the course in a dive whereby they could gain a speed in excess of what their engines developed. The rules were specifically obeyed, said Major Hensley, who described the flight as "almost unbelievable."

"Today's result is additional evidence of American aircraft engineering," said Frank H. Russell, Vice President of the Curtis Corporation, which built the machines used by the two pilots. "The Army-Curtiss racer of last year held the world's speed record when Lieutenant Russell L. Maughan made 236.587 miles per hour. That this speed could be increased by more than twenty-two miles per hour is due to a year's intensive work in one American organization building both plane and motor."

Brow went up at 1:30 P. M., encircling the field several times until he was satisfied his machine was in condition and then he signaled his readiness to be timed to William Wait, one of the designers of the plane and he winged his way over the starting line on his first trip over the course. He finished four trips in thirty minutes. Williams in his trial made an average of 258.61 miles an hour.

Rebukes Old Boston Families For Bad Example on 'Dry' Law

BOSTON, Nov. 2.—Members of the oldest Boston families who violate the prohibition law are setting a poor example to immigrants, Mrs. Mabel W. Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, said in an address at a luncheon of the Boston Chamber of Commerce today.

"We are menaced by a 'No Man's Land' in America," said Mrs. Willebrandt, "* * * the 'upper crust,' which feels itself above and superior to the law, and the 'dregs,' who strike beneath the foundations of American liberties. * * * These two classes exist everywhere, especially in Boston, where the oldest families, on whom the nation looks as representative of the finest in American life, violate the law, and in New England, because of the large foreign population."

Mrs. Willebrandt said that "repeal or respect" was the proper attitude toward the prohibition law.

WIDOW OF CARUSO WILL WED SCOTSMAN

Her Marriage to Captain E. A. Ingram Is to Take Place in England Within Three Weeks.

SWIMMING LESSON ROMANCE

Pair First Met on the Lido in Italy—Family Here Confirms Engagement.

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—It is learned here that Mrs. Enrico Caruso, formerly Dorothy Park Benjamin of New York, is engaged to Captain E. A. Ingram, a wealthy Scotsman.

Mrs. Caruso and Captain Ingram will be married within three weeks in England. They are now visiting in Paris, where they recently arrived from London.

The pair first met in August on the Lido, in Italy. The romance began when Captain Ingram gave Mrs. Caruso swimming lessons.

Members of the Benjamin family here confirmed the Paris report of the engagement of Mrs. Caruso, but declined further comment for lack of authority to make anything savoring of "official announcement."

"If Mrs. Caruso had wished it announced," one said, "she would have so instructed us."

Mrs. Enrico Caruso, as Dorothy Park Benjamin, made her début in 1914. Her marriage to the famous tenor on August 20, 1918, came as a surprise, and was contrary to the wishes of her father, Park Benjamin, the late patent attorney, and editor of The Scientific American from 1869 to 1878.

The pair, attended by only a few friends, motored from the County Clerk's office in the Municipal Building to the Marble Collegiate Church at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Oliver Paul Barnhill. The age of Caruso was given as 45, and that of the bride as 25.

Caruso died in his native Naples Aug. 2, 1921, after a long illness, in which Mrs. Caruso had been his constant attendant. He left an estate in Italy valued at 20,000,000 lire, with property in New York State valued at from $150,000 to $200,000. His annual income in New Jersey from his phonograph records, held in perpetuity, was appraised at about $250,000.

Settlement of the estate was agreed to by all the heirs in Italy in December, 1921, whereby half the Caruso estate went to the daughter, Gloria, who is now 4 years old, and the other half was divided equally among Mrs. Caruso, his natural sons, Rodolfo and Enrico Jr., and his brother, Giovanni. Details were filed in the Surrogate's Court here when Mrs. Caruso asked for ancillary letters of administration to expedite the collection of the American assets.

Park Benjamin's disapproval of the marriage of his daughter was later lost sight of in the estrangement which developed between him and his entire family. He cut off all his children with a single dollar in a will filed in August, 1922. He bequeathed the bulk of his estate to Anna Bolchi Benjamin, for many years the Italian nurse and companion of Dorothy. Mr. Benjamin had formally adopted the governess as his daughter in 1919. The disinheritance of the children was explained in the will as "because of their long continued, persistent undutiful and unfilial conduct toward myself."

After their marriage the Carusos took a country home at East Hampton, L. I., which was later the scene of a jewel robbery in June, 1920, when $400,000 worth of gems were said to have disappeared. The singer was on a concert trip in Havana at the time.

CROWN PRINCE GETS LEAVE TO RETURN TO THE FATHERLAND

German Government Directs Its Amsterdam Consulate to Give Him a Visa.

CHRISTMAS MAY END EXILE

Frederick William Is Expected to Go Into Retirement as a Silesian Farmer.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—The German Government has instructed its consulate in Amsterdam to give the ex-Crown Prince a visa to enter Germany if he applies for one, according to information emanating from official quarters. According to the same authority, the ex-Crown Prince recently applied to the Government for permission to return to Germany. In view of the fact that other German princes continue to reside in Germany, the Government could see no reason for rejecting the application and gave permission both for his return and for his residence in Germany.

It is expected that Frederick William will hasten to rejoin his wife and children at his estate at Oels, Silesia, and will lead the quiet, retired life of a farmer if his ultra-reactionary "friends" will let him do so.

Had Leave to Return in 1922.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 3.—The Berlin correspondent of The London Times telegraphs:

"I learn that the former Crown Prince Wilhelm has definitely arranged to return to Germany from the Island of Wieringen before Christmas. Nothing is said about the length of his stay, and it is generally believed that when he leaves his exile will be at an end.

"A report has been current that he had applied to the present Government for leave to return to his estate at Oels, in Silesia. This is only in part correct. As far as Germany is concerned, the Crown Prince at the end of the war remained abroad because he wished to avoid causing trouble for his country. For more than three years he had the right to return when he liked. In May, 1922, he informed the Chancellor, then Dr. Wirth, that he wished to come back. The Chancellor brought the matter before the Cabinet, and formal assent was given to this wish. In effect, the Crown Prince was thus accorded whatever permission was necessary.

"At the end of June, 1922, however, just before he had arranged to leave for Germany, the murder of Rathenau caused a political upheaval which culminated in the Reichstag's passing a 'law for the protection of the republic.' This contained a clause stating that those members of the former German reigning families living abroad were not allowed to return to Germany without special permission. It was, of course, directed against the ex-Kaiser and his eldest son. The latter was then informed by the Government that his visit must be postponed while conditions were so unfavorable.

"The Crown Prince has now written to Chancellor Stresemann, stating that he desires to avail himself of the permission granted by the Wirth Government, pointing out that he will have been in exile for five years at the end of November, and that he considers it necessary for the sake of his children, and that it is also his right, to return to his wife and family.

"The present Government has granted him permission to return for Christmas. No date has been fixed, but it is certain his arrival will not be long delayed."

THE HAGUE, Nov. 2.—In spite of many reports from Germany, there is no truth in the story that the ex-Crown Prince has left Holland. The Amsterdam Telegraaf learns from Berlin that the permission given him to return to the Fatherland, which was granted by the Cuno Cabinet, has been approved by that of Stresemann, and that he has a passport for his return.

Fishermen's Races Off as Bluenose Bolts; Columbia Refuses a Technical Victory

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 2 (Associated Press).—The international fishermen's race committee today formally declared off the entire series between the Lunenburg schooner Bluenose and the American challenger Columbia. The decision was reached after considerable wrangling and after Captain Angus Walters, of the Bluenose, had declared that he would not race tomorrow.

The trophy will be held by the trustees for competition off Gloucester, (Mass.) next year. The action of Walters in defying the committee has caused considerable resentment here. He sailed out of the harbor at 2 o'clock this afternoon. When some one on the dock called for three cheers for the Bluenose as she was casting off there was no response.

Captain Ben Pine of the Columbia will leave for Gloucester in the morning. The right was given to him to sail over the course alone tomorrow and thus technically win the race, but he refused.

While the Bluenose sailed away without the Fishermen's Trophy Cup and without the long end of the purse, $3,000, which were considered as good as hers after the fine sailing qualities she displayed, Captain Pine will get $2,500 awarded by the committee as expense money. The loser's end would have been $2,000.

Today's controversy was the outgrowth of the international committee's decision late last night awarding yesterday's race, the second of the series, to the Columbia although the Bluenose crossed the finish line with a lead of two and three-quarter minutes and apparently had captured the title. The race was awarded to Columbia on the ground that Bluenose had passed one of the marks on the landward instead of the seaward side in violation of the race rules.

The Bluenose, which was defending the trophy, had won the first race while one race was called off because the schooners failed to finish within the time limit. Captain Walters's refusal to finish the series was adhered to despite eleventh-hour appeals by Premier Armstrong of Nova Scotia and other high officials.

"I'm going home, the Bluenose has won, and I'll do no more racing this year," Captain Walters was quoted as having declared. I'm going home just as sure as the sun is going to rise in the East tomorrow."

Aboard the Bluenose throughout the morning the crew was busily engaged in preparing to put to sea. A few blocks away the perturbed members of the international committee were trying to compose the difference.

Captain Walters's defiance recalled similar declarations last year by Captain Clayton Morrisey, of the Gloucester schooner Henry Ford, the 1922 challenger, who expressed the same sentiments under similar circumstances, but recanted later.

Mussolini Relaxes Cafe Hours For Tourists' Convenience

ROME, Nov. 2.—Premier Mussolini today showed deference to the thirst of foreigners in Italy. While there is a drastic decree restricting the sale of liquors to certain hours, the Premier issued a note to the Prefects directing them to use their judgment in its enforcement, having due regard for the presence of foreigners in their respective localities.

The Premier said in his note:

"I beg of you to take account of the following in regard to the closing hours, namely, where conditions of public order are absolutely normal and the economic conditions of the population are satisfactory, you may disregard the hours of closing, taking into consideration the importance of your city as well as the presence of foreign visitors. All other requirements of the law remain."

LIFE WITH STOKES UNHAPPY, SAYS WIFE

Steuer's Sharp Crossfire of Questions Fails to Shake Her Previous Testimony.

WALLACE ONLY 'MR.' TO HER

Says She Never Refused to Marry Corespondent Because He Never Asked Her.

Throughout an all-day cross-examination yesterday by Max D. Steuer, counsel for W. E. D. Stokes, Mrs. Stokes defended herself against the charges made by her husband in his divorce suit now being tried before Justice Mahoney in the Supreme Court. She retained her composure on the stand, answered the fire of questions promptly and clearly, and Mr. Steuer's ingenuity did not lead her into any material contradictions of her testimony at the first trial. She admitted at the outset that her life with Stokes had been completely unhappy.

"From the day you married Mr. Stokes, you regretted it, did you not?" was Mr. Steuer's opening question.

"Yes, I did," she replied.

"You always felt unhappy about the marriage, isn't that so?"

"Yes, I felt unhappy with Mr. Stokes."

"That you had made a [illegible] from the day you married?"

"I wouldn't say from the very day."

"But you've never been happy with Mr. Stokes, have you?"

"I can't recall that I have been."

"Your state of mind about the marriage was the same in 1917 and 1918 and in the beginning of 1916?"

"Yes."

"You were in Long Branch in January, 1917, within easy access of New York?"

"Yes, I was."

Denies Visits to Wallace.

"You went to Denver in February and returned to New York in October, 1917, and were in easy access of 13 East Thirty-fifth Street?"

"Yes, I was."

She denied, however, just as she did on direct examination and as Wallace did when he testified, that she had ever visited Wallace's apartment at 13 East Thirty-fifth Street.

"You heard Anna Francese testify she saw you at 13 East Thirty-fifth Street?" continued Mr. Steuer.

"She did not see me," replied Mrs. Stokes, "because I have never been there."

"You heard Lillian Payne testify that she worked for Mr. Wallace at 13 East Thirty-fifth Street, and you heard Mr. Wallace's admission that she worked there, did you not?"

"Yes."

"You heard her testify that she saw you enter the apartment on Dec. 24, 1917?"

"I don't care what she said. She never saw me there because I never went there."

Always Called Him Mr. Wallace.

During her acquaintance with Wallace, she said, which began at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, in 1906, she had never called him by his first name.

"When he called at your home in Denver, he was 'Mr. Wallace'?"

"Absolutely."

"And when he left your home in Denver, he was still 'Mr. Wallace' to you?"

"Yes, he always has been."

"And when he left your home the second time and left with you a very valuable diamond ring?"

"Only a loan."

"Did he take a receipt for it?"

"He did not."

"And even after leaving this ring, he was 'Mr. Wallace'?"

"He certainly was."

This ring, which she said had been given her in 1908, was returned in 1909. She could neither recall how long she had worn it, or on what finger.

"Did you refuse to marry Wallace?" Mr. Steuer asked.

"He didn't ask me," replied Mrs. Stokes.

"But did you refuse to marry him? I think I should have a direct answer."

"How could I refuse to marry a man who never asked me," replied the witness. "There was neither asking nor refusing."

Didn't Ask Her to Marry Him.

M. Steuer later referred to testimony she gave at the first trial, when she said he had asked to marry her, saying "in fact, he spoke to mother about it," and that she refused. She asked permission to explain this remark, and when Mr. Steuer consented, she declared:

"When I came downstairs, in our Denver home, Mr. Wallace was speaking to my mother and father. After he left mother said that she took from what he had said that he would like to see me more often, with the idea that if I could care for him and he fore me, it would be his idea to marry me. He never said he loved me but said, maybe if he saw me more often, I could learn to love him and he would care for me. He never asked either my

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Nov. 2.—The campaign of the Separatists which began this morning under the personal leadership of Matthes with the capture of Aix-la-Chapelle was ended unexpectedly this evening by the expulsion of all the Separatists under a Belgian military guard from the city.

After the capture of the Rathaus and the occupation of the Government building, from which Deckers had fled meanwhile, Matthes suddenly was sent for by the Belgian Military Governor at Aix, who intimated that the seized buildings must immediately be evacuated and that all Separatist forces must leave Aix.

Matthes could do nothing but acquiesce, and toward 4 o'clock this afternoon the disconsolate victors of this morning's battle marched to the station amid the howls of the populace, who did their best to attack them, the Belgians having great difficulty to protect them. It is reported that several, despite the efforts of the Belgians, were caught and beaten to death.

The reason for this unexpected end of the capture of Aix was the démarche of the British and Dutch Consuls, who, on behalf of their Governments, demanded the expulsion of the Separatists, whose presence endangered the lives of British and Dutch subjects residing in Aix. After telephonic conversation with Brussels the Belgian General acceded to the request.

Led by Matthes in person, picked Separatist storm troops this morning captured the Town Hall after very severe fighting. Deckers remained locked up in the District Government building with a handful of die-hards.

Separatist forces, some 2,000 strong, coming from Crefeld and Düsseldorf, reached Aix district and rallied outside the city. They waited patiently all night.

When the first Separatist column debouched in the market place—where Matthes already had taken up a convenient position of command—a steady fire at once was opened from the building. The Separatists, nothing daunted, dashed across the open ground and took cover behind a large stone fountain, suffering only one or two light casualties. The second and third columns soon followed. These, pursuing different tactics, waited until a street car, arriving on the scene without warning, reached the centre of the square, then rushed the car and stopped it, using the big vehicle as a convenient cover and good position from which to snipe.

It was a real battle in miniature. From the Rathaus the defenders replied with a steady fire while the firemen for the first time introduced chemical horrors into the Separatist war. From firehose they sprayed the attackers with ammonia and sulphuric acid. Several times the storming troops were driven back to shelter before finally able to place a bomb at the door of the Rathaus and blow it in. Then they rushed the building. A little before 10 o'clock the green, white and red Rhineland Republic colors again flew on the Aix Rathaus, in which the local government had been sitting while Deckers held the Government building.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—A Havas dispatch from Aix-la-Chapelle says the action of the Belgians in ejecting the Separatists from Aix was taken without the Interallied High Commission being consulted.

Orders Sent From Brussels.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Nov. 2 (Associated Press).—Aix-la-Chapelle again is in the hands of the authorities of the Reich Government, and the Separatist factions have been driven out of the town.

Several persons were killed in the fighting, exactly how many has not yet been established, and a score wounded. Throughout the battle Belgian officers

Shoe Lace Betrays a Versailles Thief; Leads to Recovery of Gobelin Tapestries

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—Two famous Gobelin tapestries which were stolen last week from the Versailles Palace were recovered by the French secret police today, but one of them had been cut in twelve pieces by the robbers. The police have not yet stated whether the damage can be repaired.

One of the thieves, Prosper Charles, was arrested last night with a woman. He is a militant Communist and until this afternoon refused all information regarding the theft. This evening he confessed and confided to the police the identity of his accomplice. This man, Gaston Nauvien, had fled when the police arrived at his home, but the tapestries were found in his barn.

An important clue leading to the arrest of Charles was that one of his shoes had a new lace. A broken lace was found under the window through which the treasures, worth 1,000,000 francs each, were taken.

The police also broadcast photographs of the fingerprints found on the window. Charles had been arrested only a few weeks ago for an attack on an Indo-Chinese working in the same factory with him. At that time his fingerprints were taken.

As yet Charles has refused to say why he cut the tapestries or why he stole them, and the police are still at a loss to understand the reason for the double crime. It was suggested that the gold thread in the two tapestries is worth some 200,000 francs, and perhaps the mutilation of the tapestry was the first step toward the extraction of this gold. On the other hand it is thought probable that the men as militant Communists were seeking only to destroy two works of art dear to people composing organized society.

LLOYD GEORGE URGES HUGHES TO PUSH ON; DECLARES CIVILIZATION IS THREATENED; COOLIDGE BARS FRENCH CURBS ON INQUIRY

PARIS GETS COOLIDGE'S VIEW

OUR DECISION IS HELD UP

FRENCH CURB IS REVEALED

But Reply to British Invitation Is Held by London to Be Fairly Satisfactory.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—That the limitations reported to have been insisted on by Premier Poincaré with respect to the proposed committee of inquiry into the capacity of Germany to pay reparations are unsatisfactory to this Government has been made known informally by the American Government to the Paris Government through the French Embassy at Washington.

It is understood that it was pointed out that the proposal of the American Government was for an impartial inquiry by a commission of experts into the general subject of the capacity of Germany to pay and the question of an adequate financial plan for securing such payments, and further that this Government regards it as quite useless to undertake an inquiry if the commission is to be so restricted in advance that its efforts are likely to prove abortive.

It was also intimated that the Government had no idea of developments refusing to recognize the treaty rights of France or any other Government, and emphasized that the American proposal contemplated a commission of a purely advisory nature, the recommendations of which would be accepted or rejected as the interested Governments saw fit.

Definite Action Waits on Reply.

The Government is now awaiting definite word from the French Government, and it is understood a decision as to whether the United States will or will not participate hinges upon the nature of that communication.

It was made known by the White House spokesman that in any event the Government would not participate officially as such in the inquiry and it is not the idea of this Government to name experts to serve on the projected committee. While the American delegates, however, would go merely in their capacity as private citizens, this does not necessarily mean their work would not have the approval of this Government, provided the inquiry were conducted along the broad lines favored by it.

There is no certainty, even in the event that the inquiry is not limited, that the American Government will assist in the selection of the American expert or experts, it was emphasized when it was suggested that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon might be chosen to represent the United States.

It was pointed out by the White House spokesman that Secretary Mellon would find it difficult to leave the Treasury for the length of time required by such an inquiry and that it would also be extremely difficult for him to divorce his Secretaryship of the Treasury from his personality so as to be able to participate purely in the capacity of a private citizen.

Unofficial Information Lacking.

There has been so far no further formal communication between the American Government and other powers on the subject of the reparations inquiry since the correspondence between Secretary Hughes and Lord Curzon recently was made public. It was repeated today at the State Department that so far there is no very definite information as to the exact nature of the limitations reported unofficially to have been proposed by Premier Poincaré. The French Government, it was stated, had not communicated formally with the United States Government on the subject, though it had replied officially to the British note, and the contents of that reply had been communicated informally to this Government.

It was likewise said at the White House that President Coolidge was not officially aware of the terms of limitation on the inquiry unofficially reported to have been laid down by Premier Poincaré. The President had seen only press reports of the reported terms of limitation. All the official notes brought to the attention of the President and Secretary Hughes had indicated an acceptance along the lines for an inquiry as proposed by this Government.

'Follow Through,' Says Ex-Premier to Hughes

Of the Hughes reparation proposals, Lloyd George at the Metropolitan Opera House last night said:

"Your Chairman has referred to the great step taken recently by your Government to try to restore order out of chaos in Europe. I acclaim that step with full enthusiasm. When it was first proposed a year ago I felt it was the right step to take.

"I have only two things to say about its future course. I do not know how many ladies and gentlemen there are here who play golf. Just a few I see. There are two principles which are constantly dinned into the ear of the golfer which I will apply to Mr. Secretary Hughes's proposal now. The first is, follow through. The second is, keep your eye on the ball. It might get lost. You are playing in rough country, full of bunkers, part of it a wilderness. There are some who might try and get the ball into the rough and once it is there they might even substitute another. Follow through. Keep your eye on the ball, once you have begun. And if you do that I believe this great play will be won. Europe will be better for it, America will be better for it. The world will be better for it. Humanity will be better, civilization will be better for it. The world is better because America at one moment took an interest in enforcement of right beyond its own frontiers. The world will be better tomorrow when it knows that the interest of America in human right has not weakened."

IRISH RIOT IN STREET OVER LLOYD GEORGE

Crowd With Hostile Banners Fights Police in Front of Opera House.

ROUTED WITH NIGHTSTICKS

Four Women and Three Men Arrested After March From Bryant Park.

Four women and three men, Irish sympathizers, were arrested last night in West Fortieth Street, east of Broadway, when they attempted to break through the police lines and parade past the Metropolitan Opera House with banners praising Eamonn de Valera, "President of the Irish Republic," and denouncing David Lloyd George, former Premier of Great Britain, who had just entered the building.

About 250 men and women, who were recognized by the police as leaders of the sporadic outbursts in this city heretofore against England and prominent English visitors, had assembled in Bryant Park an hour before Lloyd George, escorted by motorcycle policemen and detectives, had been driven to the opera house. At the Bryant Park meeting plans were laid for the descent on the place where the audience was awaiting the speech of the former British Premier.

Policemen and detectives had been assigned to watch the gathering, but, in groups of two and three, the women, with banners folded up under their cloaks and coats, managed to make their way to the east side of Broadway between Forty-first and Fortieth Streets, where they had their first clash with the cordon of police.

This attempt on the part of the disturbers proved of short duration, for policemen and detectives gently but firmly shoved the men and women back to the corner of West Forty-first Street, and east in the direction of Sixth Avenue. Quiet reigned among them for about fifteen minutes. Then they formed in a large group in West Fortieth Street near Sixth Avenue.

Women Carry Banners.

At a word of command from one of the women they started to march in the middle of the street toward Broadway, the women unfolding the banners and holding them aloft. Most of the banners contained caustic references to the attitude of Lloyd George and the Black and Tans toward the De Valera followers in Ireland before the agreement which brought about the Irish Free State. Others contained pictures of DeValera.

Before the marchers had got within 150 feet of Broadway, however, a detail of policemen and detectives, under Sergeant Daly of the West Thirtieth Street station, advanced in a line stretched across the street toward them. Daly ordered the woman at the head of the marchers to turn about and lead her followers back to Sixth Avenue, but she refused to do so, and at the same time a woman carrying one of the banners brought it down on a policeman's head.

Sergeant Daly shouted to the policemen and detectives to remain cool and drive the disturbers back toward Sixth Avenue, but hardly had he spoken when several other women and men among the disturbers began to pummel the policemen and detectives with the banners and canes, which some of the paraders carried. This attack resulted in the caps of many of the policemen being knocked off.

Sergeant Daly then ordered his men

EX-PREMIER SAYS FAREWELL

DOESN'T DEFEND TREATY

But Believes Versailles Compact Is Not Responsible for Europe's Plight.

RADIO AUDIENCE OF 1,000,000

Great Gathering in Metropolitan Opera House Applaud Statesman's Pleas for Europe.

Civilization is doomed and within the present generation—unless the United States and Great Britain acting in concert and close co-operation go to the rescue of torn and nerve-racked Europe.

This was the burden of a message delivered last night by David Lloyd George, former Prime Minister of Great Britain, at the Metropolitan Opera House in his final public address before leaving America.

It was the old message to which he has given voice repeatedly before audiences he has addressed during his visit to the United States and Canada. But last night it was delivered with greater emphasis than ever—to the voice of a prophet he joined the air of an exhorter, speaking with great earnestness and punctuating his remarks with animated gestures into which he seemed to throw all the tremendous energy of his personality.

His final message to America was delivered before an audience which filled the Metropolitan Opera House from pit to topmost gallery. Beyond the walls of the ornate auditorium in which he spoke a larger and—as he characterized it—an "invisible audience" listened in as the speech was broadcast locally through amplifiers and to more remote points by radio. Officials concerned in the installation of these devices estimated that approximately 1,000,000 auditors were brought within reach of the British statesman's voice in that manner.

The Metropolitan Opera House was en fête for the occasion. It was a typical first night opera audience that greeted the British War Premier as he was escorted to the stage by John W. Davis, former United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James's and host of the Lloyd Georges during their brief stay in this city, and Irving T. Bush, Chairman of the Citizens Committee, under whose auspices the meeting was held.

The famous diamond horseshoe was filled with men and women in evening attire and evening dress was the rule rather than the exception in the orchestra and on the stage where members of the committee were seated. The balustrade of the lower tier of boxes was gaily festooned with American flags and the Union Jack looped together.

Spoke for an Hour.

Mr. Lloyd George spoke for an hour—an unusually long address for him. He began by expressing his appreciation for the welcome he has received in this country and telling the large audience which had come to bid him godspeed, how greatly he had been impressed by the vastness of the United States and of Canada and their almost endless resources. But from this point he rapidly worked up toward the climax where he pictured the plight of Europe and stressed the necessity for intervention by the United States and Great Britain in the affairs of Europe.

"Civilization," he exclaimed with solemnity as he was drawing toward the end of his address, "is doomed within this generation to a catastrophe such as the world has never seen unless something is swiftly done to save it."

With this dire prophecy of despair he coupled a message of hope. He declared that if without flinching the United States and Great Britain came to the rescue he had no fear but a lively hope that "humanity would climb to new altitudes of prosperity, security and happiness than any ever yet reached."

Mr. Lloyd George, who guided the destinies of the British Empire as Prime Minister during the most critical years of the World War and afterward during the negotiations which led up to the promulgation of the Treaty of Versailles, declared that the treaty was the best that could have been negotiated under the circumstances. It was not the treaty, but the results of war, he added, that were responsible in large measure for the present ills of Europe.

But in a large measure, he added, psychology, the outgrowth of old hatred engendering wars and quarrels, was responsible for them. Europe, he said, was nerve-racked and in a state of mind where the nations of that Old World had become convinced that not through justice but through force and only through force could they obtain what they regarded as rightfully belonging to them. Force, he said, brought Alsace back to France, where justice had failed; forced open the prison door to Poland, and delivered her from foreign oppression and made her free.

Two Nations Can Do It.

"We must give Europe a conviction that right is supreme over force," he added. "Only two nations can do it—the United States of America and the British Empire. Unless it is done, I do not know what is going to happen."

In explanation he said that the United States and Great Britain were the only two nations that came into the war with the prestige of having gone in not for selfish purposes but in vindication of liberty and justice. He did not include France.

"France," he added, "at the present moment—and I am sorry to see it because I have always been the firm friend of France—is committed to holding the wolf by the ears. She cannot let go—but ultimately it may tear and rend her."

He said that only yesterday he had heard by a returning traveler of the state of mind of Germany. A few months ago it was common that German working men gave every assistance to the representatives of the allied commission entrusted with the disarmament of Germany. Now there is no such co-operation.

"They used to say to the Allied Commissioners: Destroy these guns and armaments; they have only brought ruin to us and to our country. Now there is a change. Now they say: 'We cannot trust justice; we cannot trust treaties. We may have to depend upon force.' Unless you stamp out that conviction civilization is doomed."

Lloyd George said the impulse that sent Great Britain and the impulse that sent the United States into the war came from God—it was a divine command. "You responded to the invisible messenger in 1917 as we had responded in 1914. The work is only half done. The commission we received has not been fulfilled."

It was at this point he voiced the prophecy that it would be wiped out within the present generation unless something was quickly done in vindication of justice and human rights.

Mr. Lloyd George repeated what he has said on many occasions—that he acclaimed the Hughes proposal and its acceptance by the Allies as a step in the right direction. Here he provoked merriment in the large audience by a homely simile which every golf player within reach of his voice must have appreciated when he gave solemn warning to "follow through" and "keep an eye on the ball," or some one may get into the rough or even change it for another.

Mr. Lloyd George's speech follows:

The Address in Full.

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I thank you, sir, for your very kind and indulgent introduction. I thank Mr. Davis for his much too flattering observations about myself. He and I worked in close association and, may I say, in friendship while he was Ambassador to our country.

"One of those political changes that will occur in democratic countries (Laughter) and for which we are not all of us responsible, made it necessary for him to recross the Atlantic, and that gives me the advantage of renewing my acquaintance with him and my friendship on American soil.

"I want to thank you who are present for coming here to bid me a courteous farewell on my leaving your hospitable shores. I want to thank the very considerable number who were anxious to come here; and through the instrumentality of this mechanism (indicating radio instruments), the acquaintance of which I have made, I think, for the first time on this side of the Atlantic, I wish to thank my invisible audience for the warmth of their reception in the various parts of the country which I have visited.

"I leave this land with regret. I leave it filled with gratitude for the great kindness, great cordiality, great hospitality, which has gone to my heart. I thank you all.

"Mr. Davis rather reproached me for not having visited this great land before. I plead guilty. I feel I ought to have, and it was my intention to do so, but during the last fifteen or sixteen years I have been so occupied by affairs on the other side that, although there are a good many there who would have been very glad to see me go, and to have antedated this visit, and who could have easily spared me (Laughter). I did not share their point of view.

Impressed by Vastness.

"I have traveled in the course of the month I have been on this side of the Atlantic some thousands of miles in Canada and in the United States of America, and my first, and I think my deepest impression is the vastness of these two great countries, countries of infinite resources and of endless possibilities. There was an old Welsh peasant who had lived inland all his life and had a very hard time of it on his small farm, who, in his old age, came for the first time to the seaside, and when he saw the sea he said, 'Thank God for something of which there seems to be plenty.'

"I had that feeling in crossing your plains and prairies. It is a gigantic country, with possibilities which are beyond the dreams of men. May I say that one thing has—I will not say surprised me, but has given me great delight—and that is the great beauty of your country in its Autumn robes. I had heard of the grandeur of the Far West, but I had no idea that the Eastern portions of Canada and of the United States of America were so beautiful, and certainly not as beautiful as they are at this time of the year. The profuseness, the variety, the brilliance of coloring—the oak and the maple, clad in splendor, even little shrubs, the mere weeds of the wilderness, arrayed in radiant glory. I felt that the great King must be holding his autumnal court in the great forests of the West. It is a beautiful sight, and one I shall never forget.

"I came here to address eight meetings—I believe this is my seventieth. It is not in mortal man to deliver seventy speeches without saying something for which he is sorry, and I have known men who were not able to deliver one speech without committing an indiscretion for which, if not they, a good many other people were sorry; and if I have said anything in the course of these numerous speeches that is apart from the strict rules, that has given offense ,to any one, that has transgressed any of your party controversies—well, please put it down to my ignorance and pass it over.

"I did not willingly trespass. The frontiers between parties are not always very clearly marked and I may have missed the posts now and again, but I did not deliberately introduce contretemps. I came on no mission, but being asked to speak I have spoken frankly. I have spoken what I believe. I have spoken what I am convinced of. I have seen a suggestion that I was in collusion with Lord Curzon in something which I said. Well, I haven't the honor of having any consultation or communication or previous arrangement with Lord Curzon. I am a member of no Government. I am simply a private citizen. But in the things I have said I had a certain sense of personal responsibility, having regard to the part which I had played in the war and in the making of the peace.

"We have all had our responsibility—all had our responsibility. During the war I stood for the ruthless prosecution of the war to a triumphant end.

Ruthless for Peace.

"The moment the war was over I equally stood for a ruthless prosecution of peace to an even more glorious end. Those who make war, whether they are individuals or nations, cannot escape responsibility for the peace.

"Europe is in a deplorable condition. Who is responsible? What is responsible? Some say it is the Treaty of Versailles. Well, I am not here to defend the Treaty of Versailles; I am quite willing, on an appropriate occasion, to do so, and to say that it was the best treaty that could be negotiated under the conditions of the time. But it is not the Treaty of Versailles! Every treaty depends not merely upon its intrinsic merits, but upon the methods and manner of its execution.

"When I was driving out of Washington I noticed warnings to motorists on the roadside. Evidently motorists give some trouble in that city if in no other. The road was a winding road; it could not go absolutely straight from point to point. What road can? It had to dodge hills and difficulties; it had to cross ravines and rivers, and it was a road that was adapted, like every other road, to the configuration of the country. And motorists, evidently some, drove recklessly, drove wildly, drove injudiciously, and there was this notice on the road-side: 'This road is not foolproof.'

"I put that on the front page of every treaty and statute.

"But the condition of Europe was not created by the Treaty of Versailles. The difficulties were not created by that treaty. They were created by the war. They were created by the completeness of the victory. It was the most complete victory that has almost ever been won in wars between great nations. Germany, Austria, were shattered, demoralized, disarmed, prostrate; we left them like broken-backed creatures on the road for any chariot to run over. We created the responsibility. Who did it? Who did it?

"Who smashed Germany? Who destroyed Austria? Who created this impotence which makes it difficult to execute treaties? Well, if you had asked it on Armistice Day, we all would have gently hinted that it was really done by us.

"There was an old preacher in our country who, going on the Saturday night to his preaching engagement, saw on the roadside a haystack, very neat, very well put together; it looked very firm. And he saw a farmer standing alongside it, and he said, 'Who made that excellent haystack?' "Oh,' he said, I did it; I did it.'

"The following day there was a great storm, and on Monday morning, when the old preacher was returning that way, the haystack had been scattered all over the field in hopeless confusion. And he saw the same farmer standing there, and he said to him, 'That was very badly put together; that was not very well done. Who did it?'

"'Well,' he said, 'we did it somehow between us.'

"That is really true of the condition of things in Europe, we were all responsible for the victory, we each contributed his part, we each did something toward shattering the fabric and we have got our responsibility for what follows. It is easier to make war than to make peace. In the Civil War in America there were millions of men who were prepared to sacrifice their lives to wage successful war, but there was only one man who was prepared to risk his career to make a successful peace, and he was shot down. You say, 'Yes, by an unbalanced mind.' All vengeance is unbalanced. Every vindictive man or woman is partly insane.

"Your Chairman has referred to the great step taken recently by your Government to try to restore order out of chaos in Europe. I acclaim that step with full enthusiasm. When it was first proposed a year ago I felt it was the right step to take. It is suggested that I have been using flattering words since I came here about that proposal. The moment it was published in December of last year I wrote an article supporting that proposal—I thought it was the right course to take, and I am glad that at last there is some prospect of its being acted upon.

Tells Hughes to "Follow Through."

"I have only two things to say about its future course. I do not know how many ladies and gentlemen there are here who play golf. (Laughter.) Just a few, I see. There are two principles which are constantly dinned into the ear of the golfer which I would apply to Mr. Secretary Hughes' proposal now. The first is, follow through. The second is, keep your eye on the ball. It might get lost. You are playing in rough country, full of bunkers, part of it a wilderness. There are some who might try and get the ball into the rough and once it is there they might even substitute another. Follow through. Keep your eye on the ball, once you have begun. And if you do that I believe this great play will be won. Europe will be better for it. America will be better for it. The world will be better for it. Humanity will be better, civilization will be better for it. The world is better because America at one moment took an interest in the enforcement of right beyond its own frontiers. The world will be better tomorrow when it knows that the interest of America in human right has not weakened.

"You sent millions of your most gallant young men, brave, dauntless. I saw them in France; I knew their quality. The mere sight of them gave confidence to us, who had been for three and four years going through the valley of despair. You sent millions of them to enforce justice. Justice is not sporadic. Justice is not an explosion which spends its force on a single outburst, and then vanishes into thin air. Justice is the steadfast will to see right done in the world. That is why I hail this step with acclamation, and I wish it, from my heart, success.

"Your country and ours have very largely the same problems to consider and to confront. There is a natural disinclination in England to get entangled in European politics. It is traditional. We have always stood more or less by the policy of isolation. We have said, 'We are an island in the Atlantic. We have got the sea between us and you,' and in the past it has proved to be just as difficult to cross the Straits of Dover as to cross the Atlantic Ocean, when the British fleet is about.

"So there is a very strong section, a powerful section of opinion, which pleads for leaving Europe alone. They say, 'Turn your eyes away from that confusion; give your minds to developing the resources of the British Empire. Leave that turbulent continent and don't worry about it.' Well, it is no use getting angry with Europe. It has passed through a terrible time.

Why Europe Gets in a Panic.

"Supposing you had had an earthquake which swept over America and either killed or crippled every young able-bodied man in the whole of the Eastern States of America from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico; supposing you had had enormous accumulations which had been the result of the industry of generations scattered and destroyed—that will give you an idea of what Europe has passed through. Between those who have been killed and those who have been mutilated, Europe has lost over 20,000,000 of her best young men, and the destruction of property, of wealth, of the accumulated fruits of industry has been gigantic. No wonder Europe is distracted, Europe is nerve wracked, when she hears a rumble; no wonder she gets into a panic. Don't think harshly of Europe.

"There are events in the lives of men and in the lives of nations which are like the fall of the Autumn leaves. They fall by the myriad to the ground. They are swept by the breezes into unconsidered corners, where they are forgotten, they sink into the soil and form part of the earth. We cultivate, we dwell upon them, or tread upon them. Nothing more of them is heard, they are indistinguishable from others.

"But once in a century there are events which are like the fall of the stars, the fragments strike the earth and send it rocking and reeling out of its course. Look at Europe before the war, study the map of Europe today, its geography, its frontiers, its currency, its condition, its people, its Governments—study its pension lists. There were empires that were like the planets in the heavens that have been rolled down into utter endless darkness. There were countries that were like the fixed stars in the firmament, they have crashed into atoms. The earth quivers in Europe, and no one can tell how far it has been shocked out of its course. Don't be hard on Europe.

"But they say to us in Britain and they say to you here, 'Keep clear of the wreckage.' Yes, but there are millions underneath. There is Scriptural precept for it. It has only happened on the Continent of Europe. Great nations cannot say, 'Am I my brother's keeper?' Europe has played a great part. There would have been no known America had there been no Europe to find it. You have got a great, virile population. It came from Europe. You have got great names that inspire your people, and will continue to do so world without end—George Washington, Franklin, Jefferson, Hamilton, Lincoln. They all sprang from European stock. Your free institutions in this country—and well you may be proud of them—the great struggle for civil and religious equality, came from the long agony of Europe. May I say with reverence, when the cross was turned out of Asia and hunted out of Africa, Europe stood by it, carried it through the Viadolorosa of the Dark Ages, and if it is planted firmly on American soil, Europe carried it here. Don't be hard on Europe!

Problem in Europe Today.

"What is the real problem in Europe today? I will tell you. In spite of the war, because Europe has been left so much to herself, she still believes in force. Why?

"France says: 'Alsace Lorraine was torn from our side fifty years ago. It was unjust; it was wrong; it was cruel; it was oppressive. Justice never gave it back to us. We had to lose 1,400,000 of our young men. You, in the British Empire, had to lose 900,000 of your young men. Force gave it back to us.'

"Poland! Poland says: 'One hundred and fifty years ago our nationhood was destroyed. We were locked in the prison of great autocracies. We waited for justice. We thought we could hear possible footsteps, but they were simply the footsteps of our jailers outside. Force came at the end of 150 years and unlocked the door.'

"The Russian peasant says today: 'We never saw the light of liberty until the revolutionist came with his powder and blew our prison walls down.'

"What does Germany say? Germany says: 'We trusted to justice. We trusted to a treaty. We are broken; we are shattered. Why? We are disarmed. We have no force.' That is why Europe believes in force.

"That is why Europe believes in violence. What is the remedy? Give Europe the conviction that right is supreme over force. Who is to do it? There are only two countries on earth which can establish that conviction, and those are the United States of America and the British Empire.

"Unless it is done I don't know what is going to happen. France, at the present moment—and I am sorry for it; I have always been a friend of France; I have always been a believer in French democracy; during the thirty-four years I have been in the British Parliament I have always supported France when she had few friends—at the present moment she is committed to holding the wolf by the ear. She cannot let go, but ultimately it may tear and rend her.

"I heard yesterday from a man who had just returned from Germany, who met one of the officers who had been appointed at the Treaty of Versailles to break up the cannon and the machine guns and the torpedoes of Germany. He said up to the last year the German workmen, whenever he went to the work shops and arsenals, used to help him to destroy these guns and say, 'For God's sake, destroy them; these are the things that brought ruin on our country.' Now he says there is a change. There is a change. They say, 'We cannot trust justice, we cannot trust treaties, we cannot trust the word of great nations, force is the only thing that rules in the world.' Unless you stamp out that conviction, civilization's doomed on this earth. That is why I don't know.

Why England Entered the War.

"Why do I say that these great nationalities are the only two that can provide the remedy? These two countries entered the war for no selfish purpose. You came in to redress a great wrong. So did we. I remember a few days before the war—I was Chancellor of the Exchequer—I had to deal with the great financial interests in the City of London, and of one accord they came along and said, 'Keep out of this quarrel; we don't want to get mixed up in it.' There was no reason why we should. We had no quarrel at that moment with Germany. Germany was our best customer on the Continent of Europe. They were giving a guarantee that they would not send their fleet even down the English Channel. But—I think it was Saturday came the word that treaties were to be dealt with as if they were scraps of paper; that international right was to be trampled upon; that a little nation was to be destroyed purely because it was weak. From that moment the nation rose, forty-two millions, as one man, and we entered the war.

"Why did we enter the war? Why did you enter the war? Why did the unanimous impulse come to you? You cannot tell, you cannot tell—mystic—the wind bloweth where it listeth, and we know not whence it cometh nor whither it goeth. It was one of those great impulses which come when a nation's sense of justice is outraged. That is why I say that nations that are moved by such incentives are the only sure guarantors of freedom and civilization in the world.

"There have been times in the history of the world when you had two or three nations that for the time being have been the trustees of civilization. One after another they have failed. They have not discharged their functions, and in spite of the efforts and the power they enjoyed in the days of their might one after another they went and new nations sprang up to take their place. The commission of trusteeship for civilization does not come from kings; it does not come from rulers or princes; it does not come from Senates and Parliaments nor councils. It comes from on high. When it comes it does not come from the choice of the people; it comes from the will of God.

"That commission—that commission is yours and ours today. The scene is a divine one. You responded to the invisible message in 1917 and we had already done so; but the commission is not fulfilled. The work is only half done. If it is not discharged fully—fully—civilization is doomed within this generation to a catastrophe such as the world has never seen [striking his breast]. But if you here, this mighty people, if our people throughout the British Empire, resolutely, firmly, courageously, without flinching carry out the message, then I have no fear but what humanity will climb to higher altitudes of nobility, of security, of happiness, than any it has ever yet known."

Audience Gathers Early.

The Opera House auditorium began to fill an hour before the meeting got under way. The boxes in the first tier were the last to be tenanted. Dame Margaret and Miss Megan Lloyd George sat in one of the first tier boxes with Mrs. John W. Davis. Governor Smith and members of his family occupied a box near the stage on the left. Chauncey M. Depew, on the program as a speaker, sent a letter of regret, wishing Mr. Lloyd George, whom he had met the night before at the Lotos Club, a safe trip home.

Some of the box holders were Daniel Guggenheim, Colonel E. M. House, Thomas W. Lamont, Dwight W. Morrow, Frank A. Munsey, Bishop William T. Manning, Oscar S. Straus, Alton B. Parker, R. A. C. Smith, Felix M. Warburg, Frank L. Polk, Grover A Whalen and William H. Woodin.

Mr. Lloyd George, who came from the home of Thomas W. Lamont, where he had been resting after his trip from the Locust Valley home of ex-Ambassador Davis, was escorted to the stage by his host, Irving T. Bush and R. A. C. Smith. The audience arose and applauded the visitor.

Mr. Bush called the meeting to order and invited the audience to join in singing "God Save the King" and "The Star-Spangled Banner," as these were rendered by Miss Frances Peralta, a soprano.

Mr. Bush first introduced Mr. Davis, who spoke the formal welcome.

"Our visitor was the leading figure of the most momentous conference ever held," he said. "If he has played a bigger part on a bigger stage than any British statesman since Pitt, his coming is not an occasion but an event. But there is something personal in this gathering. I make bold to say that the message you have delivered during your all too short stay in this country has already gone home to the minds and hearts of the American people."

This sentiment was cheered.

Mr. Bush, in introducing Lloyd George, said he had been most frequently alluded to as the War Premier of Great Britain, but expressed conviction that a hundred years from now it would be found that his achievements in peace were greater even than in war. Regarding Lloyd George's presence in this country, he said that his public utterances here had contributed more toward the present accord in relation to the Hughes proposal than any other agency.

The audience again arose and cheered when Mr. Lloyd George arose and proceded to the speaker's desk, which was surrounded by a bank of Autumn foliage and huge chrysanthemums. The cheering lasted for a minute or more.

Mr. Lloyd George spent yesterday quietly at the home of his host, John W. Davis, at Locust Valley. A large part of his time was occupied in preparing his speech. Late in the afternoon he motored to the home of Mr. Lamont, who was in frequent contact with Mr. Lloyd George during the peace negotiations in Europe and afterward in the recurring attempts to bring about a settlement of Europe's shattered finances. He rested at the home of Mr. Lamont until he went to the meeting.

Mr. Lloyd George and his party will sail at noon today on the Majestic. His stay in this country has been almost a month—he arrived on Oct. 5. He undoubtedly would have remained longer and would have extended his tour to the Pacific Coast but for the fact that Parliament meets again on Nov. 13, when, as a member of the House of Commons, his presence is essential.

DAME MARGARET PLEASED.

Likes America and Hopes to Come Here Again Very Soon.

Dame Margaret Lloyd George and her daughter, Megan, spent their last day in New York in a busy round of visits, shopping and sight-seeing.

Early yesterday morning Dame Margaret and Miss Megan motored from the home of their hosts, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Davis, at Locust Valley, L. I., and called on Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson at 127 East Seventy-third Street to say good-bye. Miss Lloyd George remained with Mrs. Gibson to go on a shopping tour, while her mother went to lunch with Mrs. Andrew Carnegie at her home at Fifth Avenue and Ninetieth Street.

"I have had a wonderful time," said Dame Margaret yesterday. "And we hope to come again very soon. Nothing I could say would adequately convey my impression of American welcome and enthusiasm and the overwhelming hospitality with which we have been received all over the country."

Miss Megan spent more than an hour in sight-seeing with Mrs. Gibson and in visiting various Fifth Avenue shops. She bought several pairs of silk stockings, a hat or two and some gloves, and, after she had an opportunity of gazing on the leading features of New York, had luncheon with her hostess at a downtown restaurant. This was followed by a visit to "Scaramouche" at the Morosco Theatre with Colonel and Mrs. H. W. Owen.

Remembering that she had omitted to buy gifts and souvenirs for her many friends in England, Miss Lloyd George, after the matinee, went again on a hasty visit to the shops.

"It has all been like a wonderful dream," she said yesterday. "The American people are too kind, and I have never had such a delightful experience as I have had in this country. I can hardly realize it all just now to be able to say what my impressions are, but I do think the shops and theatres are more splendid than they are in any European capital. I must confess that this morning I had an 'outburst of extravagance.' I wish I could have bought everything I saw. I shall never forget my American trip if I live to be 80."

Dame Margaret stayed with Mrs. Andrew Carnegie during the early part of the afternoon and then took tea with Mrs. E. M. House, wife of Colonel House. Miss Lloyd George called for mother and they both went to the Waldorf-Astoria to prepare for a dinner party there. While Mr. Lloyd George was dining with Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co., Dame Margaret and her daughter entertained in their suite Sir Harry and Lady Thornton and their daughter, who were their hosts in Canada, and Mr. and Mrs. Davis.

Dame Margaret Lloyd George entertained at dinner in her apartment at the Waldorf-Astoria last evening. Among her guests were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davis, Colonel and Mrs. W. H. Owen, Sir William Sutherland, Sir Henry Thornton, Lady Thornton and Miss Thornton and Miss Megan Lloyd George. Following the former Premier's speech at the Metropolitan Opera House last night, Sir Henry and Lady Thornton entertained at supper in their suite at the Waldorf for the Lloyd George party.

1,000,000 HEAR EX-PREMIER.

Telephone Officials Estimate Number Who Listened by Radio.

Officials of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in charge of the broadcasting of Mr. Lloyd George's speech at the Metropolitan Opera House last night, estimated that more than a million persons throughout the eastern and mid-western sections of the United States were "listening in." It was highly probable, they said, that Mr. Lloyd George had been heard in his own country 3,000 miles away, as well as in continental Europe. Or even more than 5,000 miles to the westward, in Hawaii.

A crowd estimated by the police at 5,000 heard Lloyd George's address over the radio at the Mall in Central Park. Amplifiers had been set up to swell the voices of the former British Premier and other speakers as they were transmitted by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company over WEAF and the result was most satisfying. There was no difficulty in hearing even the lowest tones of the speakers. The applause in the Opera House which punctuated the telling points of Lloyd George's addess was answered by handclapping by the outdoor listeners.

Lloyd George's unseen audience listened with rapt attention to his address and the score of police, detailed to the Mall for the occasion, had nothing to do but become part of the audience. Around the fringes of the Mall were parked scores of automobiles whose owners were grouped around the amplifiers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Members of the staff of the British Embassy assembled on the tenth floor of the building of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company tonight and there heard by radio from New York the farewell speech of David Lloyd George, delivered at the Metropolitan Opera House.

LODGE BACKS COOLIDGE.

Says in Providence Speech That the President Will Be 1924 Nominee.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 2.—In stating his belief in an address here today that President Coolidge would be the choice of the Republican Party to head its ticket in 1924 Senator Lodge of Massachusetts urged that a vigorous campaign be waged in New England to elect a "New England President." He said there was no doubt that the six States in this section, including Mr. Coolidge's native Commonwealth, Vermont, would stand solidly behind the President in the event of his nomination.

More than 1,000 persons, comprising members of the Republican Women's Club and their guests, cheered Senator Lodge.

In recounting the accomplishments of the Republican National Administration he emphasized its work in reducing expenditures, taxes and the national debt. He highly commended the Fordney-McCumber tariff, which he said has been a benefit to American industry. In all, he said, the record of the party in handling the finances of the country had been extraordinary.

FRENCH HAVE PLAN TO CONTROL INQUIRY

Could Raise Allied Debt Question to Halt Discussion of Reparation Total.

SEEK RECOGNITION IN RUHR

Experts Will Face Question of Calculating Germany's Capacity to Pay Under Occupation.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—Premier Poincaré is expected to endeavor to get from the proposed expert inquiry on reparations ratification of the occupation of the Ruhr on the part of the United States and, more important for him, on the part of the British Government, which up to the present regards the occupation as illegal. In advance he takes the position that France has no intention of getting out of the Ruhr until paid, and he limits the inquiry by the reservation that it cannot go into the total of reparations, but can only consider the capacity payment of Germany at the present time and for the next few years. The findings of the experts must go before the Reparation Commission, which up to the present the French Government has controlled.

When the experts meet they will, then, be confronted with the alternatives of calculating what Germany can pay annually with the Ruhr under Franco-Belgian control, or calculating what Germany can pay without the Ruhr being occupied. If they proceed on the latter basis, their findings, it is believed here, will go into the waste basket, since the French will be able to block their application. If they follow the former course the French will see British and American experts figuring on German capacity with the Ruhr occupied, which would constitute at least de facto recognition of Ruhr occupation. This would be a result well worth while for M. Poincaré, his supporters say.

Has Two Cards to Play.

To prevent the experts disregarding his restrictions and estimating the total German reparations and leaving France to accept or "defy the world" by rejecting their conclusions the French Premier has two cards to play. In the first place, he can use the French expert, who will certatinly be under his control, to halt the proceedings, as in the case of the Bankers' Committee last year, or he can propose consideration of the Allied debts to America.

Debt discussion is barred by America, but the reparations total is barred by France. Either move would probably be successful in halting the inquiry.

In pursuance of this idea it is regarded as probable that M. Poincaré will make a move before the meeting of the experts. This would consist in submitting to the Reparation Commission the accords made by the French with the Ruhr industrialists, along with some form of accounting for the coal and stocks seized during the Ruhr occupation. This would call for a decision by the British.

On the one hand, the British would have to refuse to receive their share of the proceeds from the Ruhr occupation, which they call illegal, or they would have to give tacit approval to the Ruhr occupation. On the other hand, were they to persist in holding the Ruhr occupation illegal, it is argued that they might well ruin in advance any hopes of the exert committee accomplishing anything.

Pertinax, in the Echo de Paris today, demands that M. Poincaré hold up his note to Washington until he has put the British to this proof, arguing that if the British still disapprove the Ruhr occupation the whole inquiry should be called off.

A Semi-Official View.

The semi-official Temps tonight sees the possibility of America being disinclined to accept M. Poincaré's limitations, and asking that the whole reparations problem be reviewed. The Temps recalls that while the American position is one of unwillingness to discuss the interallied debts, the French position is just as firmly that there can be no discussion of the reparations total without discussion of the interallied debts, and that as long as American claims against France may not be touched, France's claims against Germany may not be touched. It adds:

"It will be seen that it is most difficult for the American Government to take a hand in reparations without bringing up the question of interallied debts."

The Temps thinks the best thing is to leave aside the amount of the Allies' debts to America, and the amount of Germany's debt to the Allies, which the French hold correlated, and for the Governments to oblige their nationals to cease for the moment trying to get advantages in Germany while the experts study the problem of how Germany can pay.

The Temps makes the veiled charge that just after the armistice America sought to get rid of her surplus stocks on the humanitarian plea of feeding Germany, refers to the disposal of American canned meats and British sardine stocks to the Germans, and uses the word "pillage." Today, says the Temps, there is talk in America and England of wheat and coal for Germany, but it argues that Germany needs neither wheat nor coal.

The point of the Temps argument is that aiding Germany after the war took a billion gold marks which might have gone for reparations.

It thinks the experts may be useful if they will study the escape of German capital, making inquiry both in Germany and the countries into which this wealth has been sent; if they study control of German finances, insisted on by England; if they study fiscal reform of the Reich, and if they study the methods by which Germany might turn over industrial securities for reparations payments. The paper thinks the experts' committee might have several subcommittees.

In other words, the attitude of the French may be summed up as follows:

"We intend to stay in the Ruhr and collect what we can there. If the committee of experts, or any one else, can show us how to collect any more from Germany, let them do it, so long as they do not interfere in our Ruhr business nor cut anything off our claim."

HOPE TO GET FRENCH TO MODIFY CONDITIONS

British Believe No Restrictions Will Be Insisted on That Bar Our Co-operation.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The French reply to the British note inviting France to join in the invitation to the United States to participate in an expert inquiry into German financial ability, which was received here today, is understood to be fairly satisfactory. It does contain two suggestions to which the British Government will not accede willingly, but both of them, it is believed here, may be modified as a result of friendly representations.

The first of them is a limitation of the work of the experts to the "present capacity" of Germany to pay, and the second is an explicit statement concerning the power of the Reparation Commission under the Treaty of Versailles.

As regards the first, while Great Britain has always taken the position that it would be unwise to attempt at present to estimate Germany's ultimate financial capacity and has expressed the opinion that it would be foolish to draw up a definite schedule of reparation payments extending over a long preiod of years, considering no one today can tell how rapidly Germany may recover or what resources she may develop in a few years' time, yet it is contended in political circles that there is no reason why in setting up a commission of qualified financial experts they should be limited in the way France suggests. It is held they should have a free hand to cover the field of inquiry in their own fashion and ought not to be restricted in any manner.

As for the second point inclusion in the invitation to the United States of America reference to the position of the Reparation Commission is thought here to be both unnecessary and unfortunate. It is felt that it can accomplish nothing and seems to prejudice the general situation.

But apart from these details the French note has created a good impression. It is believed that it shows that M. Poincaré is preparing to meet the wishes of his allies and that he is realizing that he cannot maintain much longer such a stiff attitude as his war memorial speeches suggest. Belgium in accepting the British proposals has shown a willingness that may make him suspect that she is no longer prepared to be so subservient to French direction as in the past. She has for some time been uneasy as to where the Ruhr occupation would lead her, and seems very glad to find a new method of liquidating the German situation presenting itself.

In this connection attention is called here to a remarkable vote of the Reparation Commission on Tuesday, when it declared its own right to interpret the sections of the Treaty of Versailles under which it acts. The resolution, although proposed by Sir John Bradbury, was adopted unanimously. This means that M. Barthou, the French representative, voted for it.

M. Barthou has been the faithful agent of M. Poincaré and would never have cast such a vote without the French Premier's approval. So it is suggested that M. Poincaré is preparing for a new phase in the European problem. He sees, it is urged, that France can no longer play high hands, and he is willing to bolster up the authority of the Reparation Commission as a force independent within its province of any individual Government so that he may have a larger field in which to manoeuvre.

Consequently it is expected here that France, realizing that the appointment of the expert committee is inevitable, will not insist on the imposition of any limitations which would make it unacceptable to the United States. She will probably, it is suggested, prove even at this stage amenable to representations from her Reparation Commission and discover other means to influence the experts to bring in findings satisfactory to herself.

BELGIANS FOR FULL INQUIRY.

Take Issue With French and Fear Conference Is Jeopardized.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 2.—Certain difficulties have arisen in regard to the creation of the committee of experts to be entrusted with an inquiry into Germany's capacity to pay.

On Wednesday the British Government submitted to the Belgian Government the text of the proposed invitation to be addressed by the Allied Powers to the United States Government in order that the latter should be represented on the committee of experts to be nominated by the Reparation Commission. The same evening the Belgian Government informed London that it accepted the text, but proposed a few modifications in form to which it is believed the British Government has already agreed. But from the French side difficulties are appearing and it seems working the machine en arrière in regard to the experts.

The French Prime Minister remarks that the experts will have nothing to do but to fix Germany's present capacity to pay, which in the view of Great Britain, Belgium and the United States is not the sole object. These three countries, in fact, consider that the problem should be widened. To fix only the present capacity of payment, it is said here, would be of no service at all. It is necessary to arrange for stages of payment and to estimate Germany's capacity not only today but also tomorrow.

In Brussels it is beginning to be thought that the idea of forming the committee of experts is likely to miscarry, and great regret is expressed at the prospect. M. Herbette, the French Ambassador in Brussels, had an interview today with M. Jaspar, the Foreign Minister, at which these divergencies of view were discussed.

ITALY WANTS AMERICA IN.

But Regrets That Hughes Bars Action on Debt to United States.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 2.—With the celebrations of the first anniversary of the Fascista revolution engrossing the Italian nation, the note of Secretary Hughes signifying America's willingness to interest herself in a settlement of Europe's outstanding economic problems passed almost unnoticed here. It is only today that official circles and the press seem to have awaked to its significance.

Italian public opinion, taken as a whole, is much pleased with the Hughes note. By this it must not be understood that Italy agrees with all of it, but having been one of the first powers to insist on the advisability of America being consulted on any step to be taken for a final determination of the questions of interallied debts and reparations, she is now gratified at the fulfillment of her desires.

Criticism of the Hughes note here centres chiefly on the Secretary's refusal to consider German reparations and the interallied debts as intimately connected problems. This is naturally disappointing to Italy, as Premier Mussolini has insisted that debts and reparations cannot be discussed separately. The question is asked how Italy, with her State budget still showing a yearly deficit, with taxation raised to its highest possible limit and with the burden of some 200,000,000,000 lire of internal and foreign debt, can be expected to show leniency toward Germany unless some corresponding concessions are made by her creditors.

Des Moines Invites Republicans.

IRISH RIOT IN STREET OVER LLOYD GEORGE

to charge on the crowd with their nightsticks and to arrest those who had attacked them with the banners and canes. Most of these, however, managed to crawl among their fellow-marchers and get to the rear of the crowd, where they bolted for Sixth Avenue, after having dropped the banners.

The policemen arrested eight of the disturbers and marched them to the West Thirtieth Street Station, where they said that they were:

Mary Logan, 39 years old, of 155 East Seventy-fifth Street; Helen Vigon, 50 years old, of 1,177 Third Avenue; Mary McGee, 40, of 143 East Fifty-third Street; Sarah Roche, 49, of 628 Lexington Avenue; Thomas Roche, 27, of 346 West Fifty-first Street; Patrick McGovern, 39, of 1,678 Third Avenue, and Deunas Meager, 27, of 954 Eighth Avenue. All of the prisoners shortly after were placed in a patrol wagon and taken to the Night Court in East Fifty-seventh Street, where charges of disorderly conduct were lodged against them by Sergeant Daly.

Magistrate Barrett in the Night Court dismissed the charges against the prisoners. He said that the police had not proved that the Irish sympathizers had been guilty of disorderly conduct under the law, and that he did not think they had meant to be disorderly.

Hurl Missiles at Police.

The arrest of these prisoners did not bring about a cessation of hostilities between the police and the paraders, however. Those of the men and women in the rear of the group of paraders who had not turned on their heels and run to Sixth Avenue continued to bombard the police with missiles they had gathered in the street until five minutes after the five women and three men had been hustled into Broadway and south to the station house.

With the departure of Sergeant Daly with the prisoners, a lieutenant, with a rich Irish brogue, took command of the policemen dealing with the disturbers. He sternly ordered the policemen "to lay the stick on them if they don't stop this nonsense and get on their way."

This command evidently made a deep impression on the remainder of the disturbers, for they broke and scampederd toward Bryant Park, where they reorganised, evidently with the intention of making another attempt to invade the police lines, which had been thrown around the Metropolitan Opera House.

The police descended on them again here, however, and drove them east to Fifth Avenue, where they started in a northerly direction. Some of them managed to get back to the Broadway and Forty-first Street corner about an hour before Lloyd George left the opera house at the finish of his speech, but before they could "get into action" the police were upon them again and they were driven off.

Remnants of the disturbers eventually found their way to the rear of the opera house in Seventh Avenue, between Thirty-ninth and Fortieth Streets, and hid behind a crowd of about 1,500 persons who had gathered on the sidewalk on the west side of the thoroughfare.

When Lloyd George was coming out of the West Thirty-ninth Street side of the opera house later, they began to shout in derision of the former British Premier. However, the disturbers were at such a distance that Lloyd George apparently did not hear their clamor, the police stationed there quickly subdued them and drove them west in the direction of Eighth Avenue, amid the plaudits of the other spectators there.

Chief Inspector Lahey, who was in charge of the police arrangements had about 100 policemen and detectives stationed at this entrance, and as the distinguished British visitor stepped into an automobile two files of motor cycle policemen closed in on him and, with Secret Service men standing on the running board of his automobile and detectives following in other cars Mr. Lloyd George started back for the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

No untoward incident happened on the trip to the hotel, however. Nor, in fact, during any of the time that the former British Premier was going and coming from the Metropolitan Opera House did anything happen in his presence that in the slightest led him to know of the presence of the small group of disturbers along the route.

Solid lines of policemen had been stationed on both sides of West Forty-second Street from Fifth to Seventh Avenue fully an hour before the time set for the appearance of the visitor at the Opera House. Two other lines of policemen were stretched along West Thirty-ninth Street from the Opera House to Fifth Avenue. Along both these thoroughfares 150 detectives mingled with the crowds on the sidewalks to prevent any hostile action on the part of onlookers when Lloyd George passed in his automobile. All of these police were under command of Deputy Chief Inspector Dominick Henry.

The police had expected trouble from Irish sympathizers and had taken elaborate precautions for Mr. Lloyd George's protection. About 1,000 policemen were posted all around the Metropolitan in cordons, or posted inside of it. There were 500 uniformed policemen, 250 plain-clothes detectives, fifty motorcycle officers who acted as an escort, and fifty or more mounted policemen. No one without tickets for the meeting was allowed on the sidewalk surrounding the opera house, either on Broadway, Seventh Avenue, Thirty-ninth Street or Fortieth Street. People on the other side of these streets had to keep moving, and the police lines were extended a block in each direction from the Metropolitan to stop invaders.

SOCIALISTS QUIT BERLIN MINISTRY

Coalition Is Finally Broken Up as Stresemann Rejects Demands of Ultimatum.

CABINET LIKELY TO RESIGN

Chancellor May Then Form a New Government, With the Socialist Party Left Out of It.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—After one hour's session in the Reichstag caucus room the Social Democratic faction at 5:30 o'clock this evening voted to withdraw the party's three Ministers from the Stresemann Cabinet, thereby smashing the big coalition.

Two immediate courses are open. The Cabinet, minus its Socialist members, may dissolve the Reichstag and stay in office till the new election returns are in, or it can resign. This latter is thought to be the more probable eventuality, and it is taken for granted that President Ebert will ask Dr. Stresemann to try and form a new Government.

Fresh time-consuming manoeuvres would undoubtedly then ensue, but for party political reasons the Social Democrats are not considered to be in position to make material concessions. The possibilities, therefore, simmer down to Reichstag dissolution or the formation of a new Stresemann little Coalition Government of bourgeois middle parties, Centre Democrats and the German People's Party. This would command no certain majority in the Reichstag, but there would be hope of dickering for enough Socialist or German Nationalist votes in each critical case as it arose to pull through.

Cabinet's Dictatorial Powers.

One outstanding feature in connection with the resignation of the Socialist Ministers from the Cabinet is that should it resign the recent Constitutional amendment passed by the Reichstag conferring "extraordinary" near-dictatorial powers on the Stresemann Government would automatically become null and void, though the ordinances promulgated under this new law would remain in force till abrogated by the Reichstag. Also the thesis still holds good, in fact even more so tonight, that Germany for all practical purposes is under military dictatorship.

The break-up of the big coalition came as the climax to Chancellor Stresemann's ruse of feigning illness to delay answering the Socialist ultimatum. This morning a Cabinet Council was held regarding the Socialist demands, but no action was taken pending the result of a subsequent conference between the Chancellor and the leaders of the coalition parties. The latter failed to effect a compromise and the Cabinet Council decided to notify the Socialist leaders that their demands were rejected. This had been expected and the Social Democrats met in caucus, with the result already stated.

It was Bavaria's firm reactionary attitude that dynamited the big coalition. Bavaria refused to submit to Socialist dictation or to bow to a Reisch Government in which Socialists sat. Powerful forces in the Stresemann Cabinet and the coalition parties were therefore at work to squeeze the Socialists out of the Cabinet as a postulate to a future agreement with Bavaria.

On the other hand, equally strong forces were at work within the Social Democratic Party against continuing in the Government. It was argued that by staying in the party would incur the odium of the working masses of voters for participating in a Government too tolerant toward Bavaria and too stern toward Saxony.

STORM REICHSBANK FOR GERMAN 'DOLLARS'

Frenzied Germans Bid Up Price to Twice That of the American Dollar.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—The Reichsbank this morning called out police reserves, who closed the gold loan and gold treasury note section and cleared out the crowds after this popular new Reichsbank department literally had been stormed by the public until the wearied bank officials, who had been working twelve and fourteen hours, had been forced to shut up shop and close all paying tellers' windows. The hunger of the German people for real money was pathetically illustrated by today's Reichsbank picture, yet what these thousands were clamoring for was not real money but something expediently called "stable currency," because the Reichsbank printers had printed on these poor cheap-looking scraps of paper the magic legend "One Dollar equals 4.20 Gold Marks," and on others 10, 25, 50 cents with the mathematical equivalent of gold marks.

This "made in Germany" dollar currency is being sold across the counter to all comers who are permitted to buy these dollar denomination notes with paper marks if they are patient and lucky enough to get up to the selling tellers' window.

The German dollar and gold loan currency to a face value of 80,000,000 gold marks has been placed in circulation to date and the Reichsbank is feeding it out slowly with infinite red tape though the vaults of the Reichsbank are bursting with these German dollar notes.

The dollar exchange rate was officially fixed today at 320,000,000,000 paper marks to the dollar, while the ingenious new Teuton substitute for the genuine Uncle Sam dollar sold in the open market for as high as 800,000,000,000 paper marks. In other words, Germany's all-paper dollar substitute was at a premium of 100 per cent. and more over the real thing.

A German financial specialist, analyzing the frenzied dance around the gold-loan calf, comments:

"We enjoy the comic spectacle that a money issued by the State with the worst currency on earth, and whose coverage and intrinsic security hitherto have appeared not wholly above suspicion, should suddenly outsoar the best currency on earth and threaten the standard money of recent years, the dollar."

A specimen in my possession is printed in ordinary black type, without ornamentation, on a plain yellow paper, and bears the legend "4 marks 20 pfennigs gold equals one dollar, which, with premium of 70 per cent. face value, will be repaid the bearer on Sept. 2, 1935, according to conditions on the back."

The principal condition is repayment in paper marks at the then dollar rate.

WORK IN THE RUHR TO START NEXT WEEK

Final Agreement Between French and Stinnes Is Expected by Monday.

DUESSELDORF, Nov. 2.—Negotiations were resumed here this morning between M. Frantzen, chief of the French Technical Mission; M. Sannegat, representing the Belgian Government, and the Stinnes group of Ruhr industrialists which now has been joined by Fritz Thyssen. Yesterday the Germans met at Unna while Hugo Stinnes conferred with the German Chancellor in regard to financing of coal deliveries by the Reich.

While there is every reason for optimism, favorable outcome of the negotiations now appearing absolutely certain, I learn from the highest French source that it is unlikely final signature will take place before Monday.

Herr Krupp von Bohlen having signed late yesterday evening, the whole Ruhr situation will therefore enter an entirely new phase next week, with general resumption of work. Everything will then depend on the carrying capacity of the railroads, without which a return to normal output is impossible. Reports in this direction are not unfavorable and here, too, the reputation of many gloomy prophets seems likely to suffer.

Meanwhile the atmosphere generally is much clearer and the hope of a speedy resumption of work is encouraging to those unemployed today. In the Krupp mines and plants intense activity prevails, everything having been prepared, with the co-operation of French engineers belonging to the Control Commission, to begin work the very moment the contracts were signed, all restrictions being removed automatically.

At a meeting between General Degoutte and labor union leaders a few days ago, the General's exposition of the situation was very favorably received, and yesterday, during numerous workers' meetings throughout the whole Ruhr, General Degoute's words were freely discussed with much approval. Therefore there is every reason for greater optimism.

DUESSELDORF, Nov. 2.—A general treaty of peace in the Ruhr was brought near to completion at 7:30 o'clock tonight when Herr Krupp von Bohlen accepted the French terms and signed a definite accord establishing conditions under which the Krupp mines throughout the Ruhr will resume work tomorrow.

The terms include complete acceptance of the French railway operations, reparations in kind, payment of the coal tax and acceptance of the Ruhr blockade, although the French agree to give easy terms on payments in arrears on both the coal tax and reparations coal.

ANSWERS M. POINCARE.

Chancellor Stresemann Denies His Assertions in Nevers Speech.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—Chancellor Stresemann replied today to a number of questions put before him on the subject of M. Poincaré's speech at Nevers. In summarized form his answers were to the following effect:

Chancellor Stresemann contradicted the statement of Premier Poincaré that France had derived no advantages in territory as a result of the war. Through the incorporation of Alsace-Lorraine France, he said, had enormously increased her economic power. Compared with 1914, her capacity for production of iron and steel had been doubled. France had developed her powerful economic position still further in respect of Upper Silesia and the Sarre.

In reply to a question in regard to German capital abroad, Dr. Stresemann declared that Germany had left no stone unturned to stem this tide, and, for his part, he desired to attract German property abroad back to Germany, down to the last penny, for purposes of State. Estimates of German capital abroad, he said, were certainly excessive, but, unfortunately, various attempts to get hold of them had hitherto been without success.

With regard to a question on the point that Germany was systematically bringing about her own bankruptcy, in order to escape her treaty obligations, the Chancellor said he would content himself by quoting the view of M. Loucheur, who when asked whether he believed in the intentional and calculated bankruptcy of Germany, had declared most emphatically that he did not. M. Loucheur, added Dr. Stresemann, had further declared Germany was not a flourishing country; that her prosperity was only a façade and that if assistance was not forthcoming she was heading for disaster.

Dr. Stresemann then said that when M. Poincaré tried to justify his policy of pledges first, on the ground of Germany's lack of good-will to fulfill her obligations, and subsequently by Germany's continued resistance in the military field, he was contradicting himself. Both these assertions were in conflict with the facts. Germany had done everything possible to keep up the stipulated deliveries in money and in kind, but the sums demanded by France had been recognized on all sides to be impossible and this had compelled Germany to ask for a moratorium.

LUXOR, Nov. 2.—A band of young natives scampered up and down to and from the mouth of Tut-ankh-Amen's Tomb today, clearing remnants of sandy earth and stones from the door guarding the tomb's descending passage.

The door is almost completely freed from the barrier of earth which hedged it in, but though it is now for Howard Carter simply to open the locks and swing back the doors in order to enter the tomb, it is not likely that he will hurry to enter the kingdom of Tut-ankh-Amen's Ka. He is still without some leading members of his staff, and all his preservative substances have not arrived, though consignments are coming daily and proceeding to the tomb piled high on the backs of camels.

A few tourists arrived yesterday and today, but it is weather, and not visitors, which makes Luxor's season, and the weather is oppressively hot.

CROWN PRINCE GETS LEAVE TO RETURN

Crown Prince have chiefly to do with his return to Germany, I learn that he is extremely anxious to go to Switzerland and is highly desirous of arriving there in time for the Winter sports, at which he was formerly an adept.

There are two reasons for this change. In the first place, the life and climate of the bleak, deserted island in the middle of the Zuiderzee has become unbearable to the exile, as he openly states. In the second place the ex-Crown Prince hopes that he will be less in the public view in Switzerland; that his movements will attract less attention than they do in Holland; that he will be able to return to Germany later with less commotion and ostentation than at the present. I am moreover informed that the Swiss Government would offer no objection to a similar arrangement and, in view of the unpleasant notoriety the Hohenzollerns have made for Holland, the Dutch Government would undoubtedly welcome the departure of one of them from Dutch soil.

Premier Seeks Duties Only on Those Imports That Cause the Greatest Unemployment.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Stanley Baldwin, speaking at Manchester tonight, made the outlines of the changes he plans to make in the British fiscal system a little clearer, but again abstained from going into details. He summed up his ideas by declaring that he intended to put a tax on manufactured goods, with special regard for those imports that caused the greatest amount of unemployment among the British people; to give substantial preference to the Dominions; to put no tax on wheat or meat; to have investigated most carefully the best way to help agriculture and maintain the tillage of the nation; to examine and co-ordinate and improve existing schemes of insurance against those evils that affect the life and health of the people, such as old age, ill health and unemployment, and to develop the empire.

The rest of the Premier's speech was devoted to an argument to show that the war had altered economic conditions, and even the stoutest believer in the free-trade theory might accept some departure from practice.

The situation was piquant, as he was speaking in Free Trade Hall, the headquarters of Cobden in his great fight eighty years ago against the protective system, and he was surrounded by master cotton spinners, who have always been considered the stoutest champions of free trade in Great Britain. The cotton industry has been built up entirely on free-trade lines; it has flourished through the free import of raw cotton from the United States, and it has made great sums through the export of cotton-spinning machinery.

Mr. Baldwin referred to both of these facts and showed that Lancashire's faith in them had been proved baseless in the last few years. Speaking of the export of cotton-spinning machinery, he said:

"It has been a lucrative trade, but a trade not wholly beneficent to this country. Although for the time being it swells our export figures, it is putting the weapon of competition into the hands of cheap labor, and at the same time that you have a condition of affairs in China that is making trading very difficult, you are confronted in your greatest market in India with two factors—one, the poverty of your customers, and secondly, and this is by far the more alarming of the two, that India which you had looked upon as a market for all time, in her natural process of evolution is now able to control for all practical purposes her fiscal system, and, like the rest of the world, she is going protectionist."

The Premier then turned to the supply of cotton and Lancashire's dependence upon the United States for it. What pity it is, he said, that the British Empire Cotton Growers' Association had not taken thirty years ago the action it was taking today! England had always been too likely not to bother about the future when things were going well, but now it was time to act.

"I shall not be satisfied, if I have any responsibility for the Government of this country," he said, "until we have so developed our empire and our dependent empire that we shall be absolutely independent of America. [Prolonged cheering.] We can grow all the cotton we want, and the more of that and other raw materials we grow the cheaper we shall get supplies, and the greater capacity shall we have to supply the world, and with greater ease shall we be able to pay our American debt. And of cotton, sugar and tobacco—we can grow all those; we can cheapen them for the world, and we can ease our own shoulders from debt at the same time."

One more allusion to the United States was made by the Premier. He was speaking of the necessity of developing the resources of the British Empire and he drew a lesson from the history of America.

"In the early days of the United States," he said, "the original States quarreled among themselves over their tariff and many other things, and it was the genius of her statesmen in those early days that mapped out for her her course, by safeguarding her people in their home market and giving them that great territory in which to trade with perfect freedom. And in those days and for many years afterward it was a far greater task to journey into the West than it is to take a steamship across the seas to any part of the British Empire, and what the United States has achieved the commonwealth of nations of the British Empire can surely achieve."

Almost as much interest was taken in political circles in the speech of Lord Derby as in that of Mr. Baldwin. Lord Derby was chairman of the meeting, and, as he is a great political power in Lancashire and has always been known as a free trader, there was much curiosity as to how he would speak at the meeting, which, it was understood, was to be devoted largely to the setting forth of the Protectionist program. For the defection of Derby at this moment would be a serious blow to the Ministry.

He gave, however, no hint that any such course was in his mind. He was a free trader, he said, but not a bigoted one. He recognized the exceptional circumstances of the times, and no free trader could sit by while manufactures produced by labor earning only slave wages were dumped on British shores. He hoped, however, that the Premier would make it clear that there was no question of taxing bread there was no question of an immediate and meat, and he was convinced that election.

AGREE TO CONFER ON IRISH BOUNDARY

Ulster and Free State Accept Invitation Sent by the London Government.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Irish boundary question is coming up again. It was announced today from Downing Street that a new conference is to be called at which representatives of the British Government and the Governments of the Irish Free State and of Northern Ireland will seek to discover a solution. Neither the personnel of the conference nor the date of the meeting has yet been settled.

Under the Irish Treaty the final delimination of the boundary between Ulster and Southern Ireland was to be left to a commission of three, one member of which should be appointed by each of three Governments concerned. Moreover, the requirement for the appointment of this commission is embodied in the act of Parliament setting up the Irish Free State. But it has long been recognized that the difficulties in establishing such a commission and still more in the task which would be set it is practically insuperable.

It is admitted that there is no possible logical solution of the boundary question. Protestants and Roman Catholics are intermingled not only all along the frontier but all through the interior of Ulster in an inextricable fashion and there are hundreds of farms which are actually both in North and South Ireland.

Neither Sir James Craig in Ulster nor William T. Cosgrave in the Free State has been in any hurry to have the question raised, but both have been forced on by extremists among their own peoples. Cosgrave knows that as long as the boundary is merely provisional there will be danger of raids, and Craig has found the first move he made to reach a settlement fiercely resented by some of the Orange lodges. A few weeks ago he spoke of appointing the boundary Commissioner whom the treaty calls for and was forced to back down at once by the storm of protest the suggestion raised.

The result is that leaders in Great Britain, the Irish Free State and Northern Ireland have decided that they must try to hit on some solution of the problem by consultation among themselves. It can only be a compromise and it is certain to be open to criticism from many points of view, but they believe they are far more likely to work out a boundary which both sides can accept by discussing the difficulties quietly among themselves than by the agency of any formal commission.

CITY WINS PAVING SUIT.

Trolley Company Liable for $100,000 Above Amount It Conceded.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court upheld yesterday a contention of the City of New York that the Union Railway Company is not exempt from provisions of the law requiring street railways to keep in repair not only the space between the rails of each track but the space between the tracks and for two feet on the outside of each track.

The suit heard by the court involved a claim of only $395 for work done on Melrose Avenue.

"The effect of the decision," said Corporation Counsel Nicholson, "is that the company will have to pay to the city the cost of paving its entire railroad area, which will amount to over $100,000 a year above the amount conceded by the company."

REBELS RETAKE AIX, BUT ARE DRIVEN OUT

and soldiers stood neutrally looking on. Shortly after 12 o'clock came the order terminating the brief triumph of the Matthesites. They were ordered to quit the building and leave the town. The origin of the order is uncertain. Notwithstanding a statement of the Belgians attributing it to the action of the Inter-allied High Commission, it is reported in reliable quarters tonight that the instructions were dispatched from Brussels, without reference to what attitude the Paris Government might adopt toward such a proceeding.

The ostensible reason given for the forced evacuation was that there had been loss of life in the taking of the Rathaus and that the British and Dutch Consuls had made it clear that the Belgian authorities would be held accountable for any further danger to their nationals under a Separatist régime. Competent observers express the belief that greater reasons than Government policy were behind the change in the Belgian attitude toward the Rhinelanders.

The evacuation of the Separatists was preceded by a hurried conference among the leaders, who had been informed that the Rathaus and other buildings held by them must be cleared by 2 o'clock. There was consternation in the camp of the Separatists, and the withdrawal began a few minutes afterward, the men leaving town in groups, unhindered by the populace, who, still dazed in consequence of the morning's fighting, did not seem to realize that a transformation was taking place.

After the battle the Rathaus Square presented a curious spectacle, the streets being covered with edbris. The remains of barricades and cartridges were scattered everywhere, in some places being literally in piles.

Having marched the captured loyalist city officials to temporary imprisonment under a strong escort, Major Boese, the Matthesite leader, lined up his men and thanked them for their victory. Four hours later his victorious troops were straggling toward the railway station on their way out of the town.

Belgians Refuse to Prevent Attack.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The correspondent of the London Times at Aix-la-Chapelle in a dispatch on today's events says:

"The German authorities hastened to the Belgians to beg them to disarm the gangs, in accordance with the inter-allied ordinances, but were rebuffed. Although when a week ago the German police ejected the Separatists from their stronghold without firing a shot the Belgian gendarmes ordered the German police out into the street and shot them down as they ran, afterward reinstalling the Separatists, and although only three days ago they searched the Rathaus for arms to insure that the firemen were defenseless, they declined either to take steps to disarm the attackers today or to authorize the German police to defend the building.

"An astonishing fact is that over the Rathaus waved the Belgian flag and that the Belgian guard stationed in the building quietly watched the shattering of that part of it occupied by German firemen.

"Instructions arrived from Brussels for Baron Radzinsky-Dostrovitch, the Belgian delegate, who lige many other high Belgian civil officials, including M. Rolin Jacquemyn, Belgian High Commissioner, has as far possible held himself aloof from the Belgian backers of the Separatists, that the disorder must cease. The Separatist gangs were told to their surprise to hand in their arms and to leave town by 3 o'clock.

"It is fresh proof that the whole thing has been in the hands of the occupation authorities from start to finish, in that the town was free of the ruffians an hour before the time fixed. They obeyed the order to leave as readily as the order to come. They are purely mercenaries, who had not even members of the Separatist groups. They marched off singing defiantly and left their mark on Aix by shooting down two harmless citizens on the way.

"I understand that the order for disarming the evicted gangs is to be made general throughout the Belgian zone."

DENIES TREATY IS INVOLVED.

French Reply Says Rhineland Movement Is Internal Affair.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—Premier Poincaré this evening dispatched to London his reply to the British note of Wednesday which asked "in very courteous terms" for some statement of the French attitude toward the Separatist movement in the Rhineland. Neither the British note nor M. Poincaré's reply is being published, for the present at least, and the exact nature of the British observations on the situation are not known. All that the Quai d'Orsay will reveal is that the note was of the nature of a friendly inquiry as to the French attitude.

To this M. Poincaré has replied in effect that the international political arrangements of the former empire are not the affair of the Allies. In the British note it is believed attention was called to the fact that Article XXVII of the Treaty of Versailles lays down the frontiers of Germany, and the question was raised whether the establishment of an independent Rhineland Republic would not be an infringement of this article.

To this suggestion the Quai d'Orsay replies with an analogy between the Rhineland and Bavaria. Should, as is considered possible, Bavaria break away from the Reich the frontier of Germany would be changed, but it is the French argument that the change would in no way concern the Allies. It would be purely an internal German affair, and the same attitude must in fairness be adopted with regard to the Separatist movement in the Rhineland. It may be that the British will reply that, while it is within the power of the Reich to dispute Bavaria's right to break away, she is powerless with regard to the Rhineland, as under the treaty terms no troops can be sent into the area and the police have been in large measure disarmed by the French, to avoid bloodshed in conflicts with Separatists.

WILSON A NEUTRAL IN PRIMARY FIGHTS

McAdoo's Supporters Understand Ex-President Won't Help His Son-in-Law's Campaign.

NOT AGREED ON THE LEAGUE

Former Secretary Confers With Leaders Preparatory to Active Work for the Nomination.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Former President Woodrow Wilson will remain neutral in the pre-convention Democratic campaign, it became known today, when it was asserted on good authority that Mr. Wilson intends to exert his influence strongly as to policies and platform declarations. The ex-President's attitude became known in connection with reports that he intended to lend his support to his son-in-law, William G. McAdoo, who is here this week conferring with his leaders preparatory to formally opening Washington headquarters. Responsible McAdoo leaders said today they had not sought the support of Mr. Wilson and had not expected him to do anything in behalf of his son-in-law.

No explanation is given for the reported determination of Mr. Wilson to remain aloof during the primary fights. According to some Democratic politicians, he has never shown any interest in the political ambitions of his son-in-law.

While the situation is different today, there are reports that Mr. Wilson is not keen on McAdoo as the Democratic candidate. One story is that the former President is not inclined to aid McAdoo because the latter's attitude on the League of Nations is not pleasing to him, and Mr. McAdoo is credited with asserting that the League would not figure in the Democratic campaign.

Some of the old-time leaders in the McAdoo camp are saying they are glad that the ex-President will remain neutral. If he should come out for McAdoo, they assert, it would be necessary for the candidate to make the League of Nations one of his issues. This, it is believed, Mr. McAdoo does not desire to do. He does not want to be placed in a position of openly declaring against the League, it is understood, but wishes to accept a less pronounced attitude on international affairs. The chief leaders among the McAdoo forces say the League of Nations is a dead issue and that the issues which will win for the Democratic Party are domestic.

During Mr. McAdoo's presence here there have been many conferences between him and his leaders. The latter report great confidence and say that nothing discouraging has arisen in his campaign. They are counting upon the support of William J. Bryan, because of Mr. McAdoo's dry declarations.

Vance C. McCormick of Pennsylvania is among the admirers of ex-President Wilson who is expected to be found fighting strongly for Mr. McAdoo.

Despite rosy reports, the McAdoo leaders admit privately that he cannot win the nomination without New York, New Jersey, Indiana, Illinois, Maryland and the New England States, all of which, or nearly all, are not counted now as favorable to him.

The Democratic campaign is opening in earnest. Headquarters will be opened here for both McAdoo and Underwood in the next few weeks.

NANSEN PREDICTS A GERMAN FAMINE

Only an International Loan Can Save Her, Says Arctic Explorer.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, arctic explorer and winner of the Nobel Peace prize in 1922, arrived yesterday on the Cunarder Berengaria from England to deliver a series of addresses in the principal cities in the United States under the auspices of the World Alliance for International Friendship and the American-Scandinavian Foundation.

Dr. Nansen was met at quarantine by a committee representing various associations, which took him off the ship, with his wife and daughter, landed the party at the Battery and escorted them to the home of Dr. Harvey G. Leach at 170 East Sixty-fourth Street. Dr. Nansen told the reporters that his mission to America was to tell what had been done in reconstruction and relief work in Europe and what can be done.

"What is the big issue there?" he was asked.

"Germany," replied Dr. Nansen. "If she goes to pieces there is no telling what will happen. You can't take an important industrial cog out of industrial Europe and not reap chaos by doing so. "He added that Russia would not be so badly off this Winter, but that Germany faced a famine. In his opinion the only thing to do to save Germany was an international loan, and to put the currency on a firm basis. He did not believe that Germany would go Soviet if the worst happened and the country went to pieces. Imperialism was not dead, he said, and if the Separatist idea developed he believed that there would be more German monarchies than Soviet States. When asked about the League of Nations, Dr. Nansen said:

"I know what happened in the last assembly of the League is in the eyes of the world, and many people in the world lose confidence in the League, contending that the League had not acted up to the mark. I think that the League proved that it is a world force. Any one who has studied the Greek-Italian situation will come to understand that the League throughout all this question was a moral force, which eventually prevailed, even if Italy chose to act through the Council of Ambassadors, though in doing so Italy deferred to the League.

"I have followed the work of the League for four years. My view is that the League is developing all of the time, and is becoming more and more important in the whole social fabric of the world."

EARTHQUAKE IN PHILIPPINES

Fourth Shock in Three Days Does Little Damage.

MANILA, Nov. 1 (Associated Press.)—Another earthquake shock, the fourth in three days, lasting about ten seconds, was felt here at 2:43 o'clock this afternoon.

No damage of any importance has been reported.

The origin of the shock is believed to have been near Taal volcano, which is located on a small island in Bombon Lake, Batangas Province, Luzon.

The walls of the Masonic Temple, one of Manila's tallest buildings, were cracked by the shock.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Severe earth tremors were recorded late today on the Georgetown University seismograph.

Beginning at 4:29 P. M., they reached a maximum intensity between 5:19 and 5:30, and were still registering at 7 P. M.

Father Tondorf, in charge of the instrument, estimated the centre of disturbance at 7,600 miles from Washington.

LA FOLLETTE BACK, URGES GERMAN AID

Hunger There Is a Menace to the Whole World, Wisconsin Senator Says at Portland.

TO COMBAT REACTION HERE

He Will Spend His "Remaining Days to Bring Government Back to the People."

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 2.—Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, returning to America today, after three months of travel and investigation in Europe, told newspaper men who met him aboard the liner George Washington here today that what he had seen overseas made him "more determined than ever to devote whatever powers I possess to bringing our Government back to the people and to spend the balance of my life in combating with renewed energy the forces that are tending to undermine and destroy in the United States the American tradition of government."

The Senator issued a prepared statement on his conclusions on the world situation, declaring it was all he had to say.

In the statement the Senator indicated, however, that when ready to do so, he would deal with European conditions in a somewhat thorough-going way, and he made an earnest appeal to the men and women of this country to help the people of Germany, telling of some of the scenes that he had witnessed in that land.

Asked if he cared to make any comment on the choice by President Coolidge of former Senator Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota as Ambassador to Great Britain, Senator La Follette raised his hands and replied:

"No, no, no," he replied to this question. "I haven't a word to say about that subject. I don't want to talk about it."

Says He Found Germany Starving.

The Germans, he said, have enormous shortage in their potato crop—their great staple and the only food that is now within reach of the workers and the impoverished middle classes. Their transportation system is dislocated and their currency is worthless.

"They have been underfed for seven years," he went on. "They are suffering for want of food, fuel and clothing. Young children and old people are dying daily from hunger and disease induced by hunger.

"I saw food lines where thousands of men, women and children formed in line as early as 3 o'clock in the morning—the sidewalks packed for blocks—waiting through the long hours for the meager ration served them.

"I have visited the homes of the middle class—formerly in easy circumstances, now in abject want. They have no employment, no food and no fuel in the house, which had been stripped bare as piece after piece of furniture had been sold to sustain life.

"Emaciated, despairing, they are waiting the end.

"The situation is desperate in the large cities, where food riots are common.

"The crisis which is at hand involves possibilities too awful to contemplate. It menaces more than Germany.

"Hunger is the firebrand of revolution. There is no time for protracted debate.

"Delay means the possible overthrow of Governments, dissolution, chaos, civil war and hell let loose in Europe.

Appeals to American People.

"No part of a great, industrious people should be allowed to perish when help is available. The efficient aid rendered to Russia by America in her frightful time of famine has created a sense of basic amity and regard that can be understood only by actual contact with the Russian people.

"The need of Germany is no less elemental and no less urgent than if caused by famine or earthquake. The response from the outside world should be as spontaneous and immediate.

"The American people should not wait on Government. I appeal to them to organize for action at once.

"Every American citizen who believes in the fundamental principles of democracy—of government by the people—is deeply interested in saving the German republic.

"If the democracy which Germany has established, with its enlightened Constitution, fails, the inevitable alternatives are communism or monarchy.

"Not only in Germany but in many other European countries that I have visited the institutions of democracy are being crushed or rent asunder by dictatorships of various forms.

"While this madness is upon the world the greatest contribution that America can make to Europe and to civilization is to develop and perfect her own democratic institutions and traditions, so that during the dark days that are ahead they may stand as a beacon, lighting the way to all people.

"What I have seen in Europe makes me more determined than ever to devote whatever powers I possess to bringing our Government back to the people and to spend the balance of my life in combating with renewed energy the forces that are tending to undermine and destroy in the United States the American tradition of government by the people."

SHUBERTS WIN APPEAL.

Appellate Court Upholds Contract With Gallagher and Shean.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court voted yesterday four to one to reverse the judgment of the lower court dismissing the injunction suit of the Shubert Theatrical Company against Gallagher and Shean to restrain them from appearing with Ziegfeld's "Follies" or any other management than that of the Shuberts. The Court ruled that Gallagher and Shean knew what they were doing when they signed the contract with the Shuberts, and that there was no legal justification for their action in ignoring the contract.

When the case was tried before Supreme Court Justice Delehanty much testimony was offered in behalf of the contention of Gallagher and Shean that their services were not of such an unusual nature that they were unique and extraordinary. On this subject the Court said:

"The record demonstrates that their talent is peculiar and unique; that even the defendants' witnesses did not, when their testimony is analyzed, deny that they have had unusual success. A vaudeville manager on the stand testified that their names have been 'on the top' for years and they had an established meaning to the public; that big type has been used for them. * * * It is abundantly apparent to us that these defendants come within the class whose services are of such a character that they will be deemed practically irreplaceable."

Tobias A. Keppler, counsel for Gallagher and Shean, who are now appearing with the Follies in Philadelphia, stated yesterday that he has been instructed to appeal at once to the Court of Appeals, on the ground that their services are not unique and extraordinary, and that the parties to the contract did not contemplate that they would be required to work for the Shuberts in vaudeville.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 2.—Minta L. Arbuckle has filed in the Superior Court here a petition for a divorce from Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle. The petition is brought on the ground of desertion and neglect to provide. Notice was served on Arbuckle at a hotel here on Oct. 22.

$151,260 DAY'S LOOT OF BANDIT BANDS

MOTHER AND CHILD SLAIN

$3,300 Gone From Pennsylvania Home—Philadelphia Paymaster Loses $4,700.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Kan., Nov. 2.—Four unmasked bandits soon after 9 o'clock today forced nine employes of the First National Bank here to lie face downward on the floor, robbed the safe of $25,000 in cash and about $100,000 in bonds and escaped after locking all the employes in the vault.

The bandits overlooked approximately $20,000 in cash, which was in the safe and in the cash drawers behind the cage.

The hold-up was coolly staged and in plain view of pedestrians passing in front of the building. Many persons were in the street during the hold-up. The robbers stopped their car in front of the bank soon after it was opened.

Men and women employes of the bank were at work when the robbers entered. Their first command was for the employes to lie face downward on the floor.

After looting one cash drawer behind the cage, the desperadoes asked who could work the combination of the safe. When no one answered, one forced R. S. Hanes, assistant cashier, to open the safe.

Two of the bandits went into the safe and scooped up money and bonds from its compartments. Then they forced all nine employes into the huge vault and locked it.

Special to The New York Times.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 2.—Five men, one of them dressed in the uniform of a United States soldier, and all armed with rifles, entered the First National Bank of Bakerton, thirty miles from here, at 11 A. M. today, and holding the tellers at bay, seized and escaped with $2,000 in cash.

Prior to the hold-up the men had stolen an automobile owned by Albert Kaylor of Bakerton. After backing out of the bank the bandits entered the car and fled in the direction of Indiana County.

As soon as he learned of the hold-up Kaylor, with Harry Lacey, also of Bakerton, obtained another machine and followed in the direction taken by the robbers. Two miles out of the town they came upon the fugitives, whose car had stalled. On seeing Kaylor and Lacey the robbers opened fire, wounding Kaylor in the arm. Kaylor and Lacey were unarmed.

The desperadoes seized the car left by the two men and continued toward Indiana County.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—Five motor bandits, wearing handkerchiefs for masks, today held up the paymaster of the John Wyeth & Brothers Chemical Company and robbed him of a $4,700 payroll. The hold-up occurred a short distance from the chemical plant as the paymaster was returning from a nearby bank.

William Simpson, the paymaster, was in a small motor truck. The bandits' car shot out at right angles and forced his machine against a curb. Two of the robbers then ran at Simpson with drawn pistols. One seized the satchel containing the money and fled toward the motor car, the engine of which was running. The bandit slipped and sprawled, the satchel falling from his grasp. He pounced on it in a flash, however, and dived into the rear seat of the car, which dashed away.

HOLYOKE, Mass., Nov. 2.—Police in a wide area were assisting the local authorities today in an effort to capture two men who late last night held up Alexander Horowitz on the outskirts of the city, relieved him of $11,2?0 at the point of pistols and made their escape in an automobile. Horowitz told the police that as he was on his way home after cashing a certified check at a Springfield bank his automobile was passed by another machine, the driver of which signaled him to stop. As he did so two men leaped from the other car and covered him with revolvers, searched his clothing and found the cash.

WALKERVILLE, Ont., Nov. 2.—Smashing the windows of a sedan automobile, four armed robbers today took from two messengers of the Dominion Forge and Stamping Company $5,000 they were transporting from a bank. The robbers escaped in an automobile.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 2.—Mrs. William E. Robinson, aged 25, the wife of a building contractor, and her four-year-old son were found dead in bed in their home at Hays, near here, tonight by Robinson on his return from his day's work.

There was no tangible clue to indicate the circumstances of the crime, and $3,300, which had been placed in a dresser drawer, was missing.

SENATE REJECTS WALTON DEMURRER

Oklahoma Governor Plans Federal Appeal as Trial Is Set for Thursday.

COUNSEL PLEAD INNOCENCE

Deny Evidence Shows Impeachable Offenses, but Test Vote on All Is Heavy Against Executive.

Special to The New York Times.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 2.—The fate of John C. Walton, the suspended Governor of Oklahoma, was indicated tonight when by an overwhelming majority the Senate impeachment court rejected the Governor's demurrers to the more serious charges on which he had been brought to trial.

The test vote, which in the opinion of even the Governor's friends forecast his doom, came at 7:30 o'clock tonight on the demurrer to the twenty-second article of impeachment, which groups all charges and alleges general incompetency. That demurrer was rejected by a vote of 34 to 4.

The lawyers for Walton threw their cards on the table today, and in the seven hours they were allotted to argue the demurrers they brought out their whole case. The defense was not a denial of any of the charges but a general plea that the acts charged do not in themselves constitute impeachable offenses.

Walton's friends no longer entertain any hope, and his lawyers stated tonight that from now on they will shape their course so as to make possible an appeal to the Federal courts, where they will contend that Walton has been denied his rights under the provision of the Federal Constitution which guarantees to all persons equal rights before the law.

They will contend that in refusing to permit Walton to challenge the qualifications of certain Senators to pass judgment on him the Senate denied him that constitutional guarantee.

Counsel Assert Complete Innocence.

Judge E. V. Riddle and other counsel for the Governor denied that the Governor had placed himself under obligations, as the prosecution contends, to E. W. Marland, the Ponca City oil man, when Mr. Marland took up the Governor's notes for $30,000, which were used to pay for the Oklahoma City mansion purchased by Walton last Spring.

They contended that Walton had a right to try to stop the Oct. 2 election and that in pardoning murderers and other desperate criminals he had not violated any law. The same defense was interposed to all the other more important charges. In not one instance, they contended, had the Governor been guilty of any criminal act.

The Governor was not in the chamber during the twelve roll calls on the demurrers tonight. He was present at the morning session and for a short time during the afternoon session. He smoked his corncob pipe and was apparently unconcerned. His appearance was that of a man who knew his battle was lost. Only two or three times did he confer with his counsel. When the time for the defense to close its argument drew near he quietly left the chamber.

In their reply to the arguments of the Governor's counsel the House managers who are prosecuting the charges took exception to the contention of the defense that the trial is in the nature of criminal action.

Chairman Disney of the House managers closed for the prosecution. "Oklahoma," he said, "cannot endure three more years of what she has gone through in these last ten months.

Trial Proper to Start Thursday.

The voting on the demurrers began at 7 o'clock. On only two of them did the Governor develop any strength, and these were the demurrers to the charges involving suspension of the death penalty and the charge that Walton had sworn falsely when he took the oath of Governor. The death penalty demurrer was rejected, 23 to 17, and the one to the oath violation charge, 22 to 17.

It is the general opinion everywhere tonight that the Walton case is practically ended. The trial proper was set tonight to begin next Thursday when the prosecution will submit its proof of the allegation filed with the Senate. The program of the Walton forces will be to build up a case which will be the basis for an appeal to the Federal courts.

TAXI DRIVERS SHOT; POLICEMEN HELD

Two Patrolmen Accused of Assault After Two Chauffeurs Are Wounded.

ANOTHER IS SUSPENDED

Affray Outside a Harlem Cabaret—Police Surgeon Reports Men All Sober.

Two policemen were arrested and suspended and a third was suspended without arrest yesterday following a shooting affray in Harlem in which seven bullets were fired and two taxicab chauffeurs were wounded.

Patrolmen Daniel J. Griffin of 257 Hudson Street and Charles A. Lynch of 526 West Forty-sixth Street were held by Magistrate McAndrews in Harlem Court in $5,000 bail each for a hearing next Thursday on a charge of felonious assault. Patrolman George F. Mahoney was suspended. All are attached to the West 100th Street police station.

The two wounded men were Thomas Cayne, 26 years old, of 449 West 125th Street, hit in the cheek by a bullet, and John Maher, 41, of 2,386 Eighth Avenue, struck over the right eye. Both were able to go home after treatment at Harlem Hospital.

The three policemen, all in civilian clothes and off duty, were in the Rita Cabaret, at 126th Street and Seventh Avenue, with Betty Duncan, 22, of 408 Eleventh Avenue, a theatre usher, and Mary Vitters, 20, of 280 Linden Avenue, Brooklyn, a telephone operator. While Mahoney remained behind to pay the check at 3 o'clock in the morning the other two policemen and the women went to the street. Just as they emerged Louis Cangro, proprietor of the Fiume restaurant at 139 West 126th Street, passed.

According to the official report Griffin and Lynch halted Cangro and "frisked" him for weapons despite his protests. Cangro broke away and ran down Seventh Avenue to 125th Street, Griffin and Lynch, according to witnesses, firing seven shots after him. Mahoney was still in the cabaret. The taxicab chauffeurs dodged toward doorways, but ran into the path of bullets. Sergeant Francis P. Hughes came up just after the shooting.

"Did you shoot?" Hughes reported later he demanded of Griffin and Lynch. He said they replied they did not fire any shots, though Cangro, the taxicab drivers and others contradicted them. Sergeant Hughes examined their revolvers, reporting later that they were hot from firing.

Deputy Chief Police Inspector Dominick Henry, summoned from Police Headquarters, called for a police surgeon, who said that Griffin and Lynch were fit for duty and were not intoxicated. Thereupon Inspector Henry ordered the suspension of the three policemen and the arrest of Griffin and Lynch. There was no charge against Cangro.

Record Canadian Grain Shipments.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Nov. 2.—Carrying the record quantity of grain for any twenty-four hours in the present season, seventeen boats cleared local elevators today with 3,089,000 bushels of grain, of which all except 215,000 were wheat. With the regular navigation season closing Nov. 30, the grain movement has jumped from an average of 1,500,000 bushels a day to about 2,500,000 bushels, and it is expected even this will be increased as the season draws to an end.

MANAGERS REJECT EQUITY'S OFFER

But Decision on Peace Terms Extended Through Lee Shubert Not Final.

ERLANGER ALLIES OPPOSE

Old Alignment of Shubert Versus Erlanger Expected—Equity to Hold Mass Meeting.

After what was described as "a stormy two-hour session," the Producing Managers' Association, through its steering committee, voted to reject the peace offer extended by the Equity through Lee Shubert. The decision is not final, as there will be a full meeting of the association next week to consider the committee report.

At the meeting, it is understood, Lee Shubert came out flatly in favor of Equity shop, and last night there were repeated rumors that the Shuberts would make a separate peace with the Equity if the managers persisted in their refusal.

In a statement issued after the meeting Augustus Thomas said that those at the meeting had been sworn to secrecy. It was rumored, however, that the Equity-Shubert terms amounted practically to closed shop, since they called for the Actors' Fidelity League to close its membership rolls. Present Fidelity members, however, would be permitted to appear with Equity members.

It is understood that the chief opposition to the Shubert plan, at yesterday's meeting, came from the Frohman company and Henry W. Savage, who are allies of A. L. Erlanger. Mr. Erlanger himself resigned from the association several months ago. Sam H. Harris, President of the P. M. A., was another who was not at yesterday's meeting, nor was George M. Cohan. Arthur Hopkins and William Harris, who were present, were in favor of accepting the new plan.

As the two managerial wings are now lining up, the Shuberts and those allied with them in a booking way find themselves opposed by the Erlanger group. While it is not quite a clean-cut division, theatrical men felt last night that it would be the old alignment of Shubert versus Erlanger before long. In the event of a Shubert bolt from the association, which would mean also a bolt of the Shubert allies, it is thought that the ultimate result might be the formation of two distinct associations of managers.

It is generally felt that a split in the ranks of the managers could only result in an Equity victory, since half of the managers would be unwilling to face the rigors of a strike while the other half kept their playhouses open.

In the meantime, the terms have not yet been approved by the rank and file of the Equity. There will be a mass meeting tomorrow afternoon at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre to consider the agreement.

ELSIE JANIS DELIGHTS.

Her French Divertissement the Best of a Happy Recital.

Elsie Janis yesterday afternoon drew a large number of well-wishers to Aeolian Hall on the occasion of her New York début in the field of concert recital. It was, of course, in no way a concert recital that she offered,—a fact evident to all who witnessed the relish with which the audience really seemed to be enjoying itself. The program, too, was most catholic and ranged from a baritone ("Invictus") to imitations by Miss Janis.

Miss Janis was at her best throughout every moment of her contributions to the afternoon's entertainment, but she was probably at her best of that in her French divertissement. Here she appeared as a French soubrette but newly arrived on these shores and, with a minimum of English and a maximum of enthusiasm, resolved to sing the ragtime songs of the natives both in their impossible American and in her beloved French. Thus, among other things, the audience was treated to "Moi, j'ai un beguin pour 'Arry, et 'Arry a un beguin pour moi," to the Gallic swaying of American shoulders and the Jolson snapping of Montmartre fingers. She was Irene Bordoni and Elsie Janis, Elsie Janis and Mistinguet—and yet only ten minutes before she had sung "Nothin's Nothin' but You" in a manner that realized Bert Williams's dreams of immortality more completely than he could ever have dared to hope.

Lest there be any misunderstanding, then, let a clear statement of fact be added to the foregoing delicate innuendo—Miss Janis provided a deliriously happy afternoon. She was assisted, inconspicuously, by Rudolph Bochco, Walter Verne, baritone, and Lester Hodges, accompanist.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Lola Fisher will appear with Leo Ditrichstein in the latter's new play. It is an adaptation by Gladys Unger.

Mary Eaton has signed a three years' contract with Florenz Ziegfeld and will be seen this season in "Kid Boots," of which Eddie Cantor will be the star. The production will open in Cleveland Thanksgiving week, coming to New York at Christmas time.

A new play by Charles Mere, as yet untitled, has been obtained for America by Louis O. Macloon and Lyn Harding. It will be produced in London late this month.

Cyril Maude will be the guest of honor at a dinner of the Pleiades Club at the Hotel Brevoort tomorrow night.

Helen Tilden and Henry Crosby have been engaged for "The Failure," which will be produced by the Theatre Guild in two or three weeks.

MUSIC

Mr. Lamond's Recital.

By H. C. COLLES.

It seems to be decreed that whatever may be the deficiences of this season's musical repertory it shall not be said that New York concert rooms neglect Beethoven. Every pianist puts a sonata into his recital program, the orchestras compete in performances of at least the greater symphonies; a whole cycle of his symphonic work is to be begun next week, and last night Mr. Lamond at Aeolian Hall offered a whole program of the piano music, including three sonatas with a number of lesser things.

Mr. Lamond is known as a high priest of Beethoven and audiences both in Europe and America go to hear him with the feeling that they will get something authoritative, will hear from him the right way of playing Beethoven. This imposes a certain responsibility which may become irksome to the artist. In listening to Mr. Lamond recently, both in London and again last night, the thought has occurred that the duties of the high priest have become a very familiar ritual to him. Nevertheless he continues to do his duty faithfully. He does not, as some performers do, try to devise new readings or bring effects into the music which bear the stamp of the executant rather than of the composer.

On this occasion he played the last of the series of thirty-two sonatas, the magnificent work in C Opus III., the Pathétique (Op. 13) and the "Appasionata"; he disposed around them other works such as the Fantasie in G minor, the early Rondo in G and the "Andante Favori," originally written to be the slow movement of the "Waldstein" sonata, and added as an encore the "Rondo á Capriccio," known as "the fuss over the lost farthing." The absence of fuss was the most marked characteristic. It was the playing of a musician who has settled every problem and knows exactly what he means to give his audience, a straightforward performance, without adventure perhaps, but without affectation, of the work of a master.

THRONG AT DUSE MATINEE.

Many Stage Stars See Tragedienne in "Lady of the Sea."

The first matinee performance of Mme. Duse's American tour, held at the Century Theatre yesterday, was witnessed by a capacity audience, with many hundreds of unsuccessful applicants for seats turned away. Extra chairs were placed at available points to increase the normal seating capacity of the theatre. Mme. Duse repeated her production of Ibsen's "Lady of the Sea" which she gave at the Metropolitan Opera House Monday evening.

The performance was witnessed by a large number of prominent theatrical people, who took advantage of the fact that Mme. Duse was appearing on an afternoon on which they were themselves not called upon to play. At the conclusion of the performance an impromptu ovation was tendered Mme. Duse by her assembled theatre-folk, as a form of tribute to her art from her co-workers.

Among those present were Jane Cowl, Maria Jeritza, Ethel Barrymore, Lucrezia Bori, Gigli, Mrs. Fiske, Eva Le Gallienne, Laura Hope Crews, Henry Miller, Nazimova, Regina Wallace, Fay Bainter, Laurette Taylor, Philip Moeller, Margaret Wycherly, Ruth Chatterton, Ina Claire, Joseph Schildkraut, William Farnum, Martinelli, Fania Marinoff, Ganna Walska, Grant Mitchell, Grace Moore, Ann Mason and Charles Bryant.

FOREIGN STAGE FOLK HERE.

Elsa Erzi, Operatic Singer, and Two Producers With Plays.

Miss Elsa Erzi, operatic singer of Budapest, arrived late yesterday on the Cunarder Berengaria to sing the leading rôle in 'I Love You," which will be produced here shortly under the direction of Laurence Weber. Miss Erzi, although only 24 years old, has sung in the principal theatres in Hungary for five years. Besides "The Merry Widow," she sang for 400 nights in "The Golden Bird," a Vienesse operetta.

W. C. Gaunt, owner of the Gaiety, Adelphi and Apollo Theatres in London, also arrived on the Berengaria. He has brought over the play "Catherine," which he said he may produce here if he can get the right kind of a theatre.

Another theatrical manager on the liner was B. A. Meyer, who produced "The Return of Sherlock Holmes' in London and looks for an opportunity to put it on here. He came here in 1907. Mr. Meyer said, as the manager for Olga Nethersole.

Ilse Niemack in Violin Recital.

Ilse Niemack gave a violin recital at the Town Hall last evening after an absence of two years in Europe which she spent studying and appearing in concert. She chose works of Vitali, Wieniawski, Gluck and a transcription by Kreisler for the first part of her program and completed it with compositions by Burleigh, Tchaikovsky and Sarasate. There was a hardness of tone and lack of color in the Wieniawski concerto in D minor which gave the interpretation an impersonal effect. This was obviated later in the shorter works, which Miss Niemack gave in a spirited manner with an abundance of contrast of phrase and good musical discrimination. The violinist was ably assisted by Harry Kaufmann at the piano.

ZIONISTS ATTACK ZANGWILL'S VIEWS

"A Dr. Jekyll Among Jews and a Mr. Hyde Among Arabs," Says Bernard A. Rosenblatt.

HONOR TO LORD BALFOUR

Lloyd George Also Commended at Meeting of American Zion Commonwealth.

Israel Zangwill was criticized by speakers at the American Zion Commonwealth meeting yesterday at the Hotel Commodore. The meeting commemorated the sixth anniversary of the Balfour declaration and the dedication of the Palestine colony Balfouria, named in honor of the British statesman.

Announcement was made during the meeting of a cable sent to Lord Balfour as author of the declaration. The following resolution was forwarded to David Lloyd George as head of the Government which issued the declaration:

"This gathering of representatives of American Zionism assembled to celebrate the sixth anniversary of the Balfour declaration and the dedication by Sir Herbert Samuel of the Colony of Balfouria in Palestine, named in honor of Lord Balfour, rejoice in the fact that the same day marks the presence in our city of the peerless British statesman who was the head of the Government which issued the Balfour declaration, the Magna Charta of the revived Jewish nation in Palestine. We join with particular pleasure in enthusiastic welcome of which David Lloyd George is the recipient at the hands of all our fellow-citizens."

The Colony of Balfouria.

Former Magistrate Bernard A. Rosenblatt, who presided, said in part:

"In 1919 the American Zion Commonwealth began a piece of pioneer work on the plains of Galilee which reaches a climax today in the dedication of the colony of Balfouria. Four years ago last August I stood in the shadow of the ancient city of Nazareth, on waste lands—fields that had been devastated by the war and stricken by the neglect of eighteen centuries—and there, as the representative of over 1,000 investors, I announced that we would establish a new Jewish colony in the old land of Israel, to be named Balfouria, in honor of the man whose name will be forever linked with the fate of the Jewish national homeland in Palestine.

"Fifty months have passed—months of hard work, of partial failure, of some successes—but American grit and Jewish idealism have finally conquered, and today we here in New York meet in dedication of the premier colony in the north of Palestine which Sir Herbert Samuel dedicated last week.

"What is the significance, it may be asked, of a few hundred Jews established as farmers in a settlement 5,000 miles from New York? What was the significance of Jamestown or Plymouth to the London of King James? The fact is that in the restoration of the House of Israel the economic work of Jewish farmers and industrial workers in Palestine is the only work that really counts.

"The difficulty with us Jews is that we have too many statesmen outside Palestine, and too few farmers and manufacturers in Palestine. We are just now being entertained by a renowned British Jewish writer who might have filled the rôle of prophet, but who unfortunately attempts to play the double rôle of a statesman and a fortune-teller. It simply can't be done, Mr. Zangwill—this thing of being a Dr. Jekyll among Jews and a Mr. Hyde among Arabs. It leads to all sorts of unpleasant situations.

Criticism of Zangwill.

"For example, it has prompted Israel Zangwill to claim authorship of the Palestine resolution unanimously adopted by the American Jewish Congress. Now, I happened to be Chairman of the Palestine Committee that presented the resolution, and I can testify that we not only listened carefully to our great writer, but availed ourselves of his literary ability to the extent of using the greater part of his language. But this is only half the truth. Zangwill remembers what we used. He must recollect how much we threw out by the unanimous vote of the committee.

"The fact is that what we threw out represents the Zangwill who delivered his recent message to Zionism, and what we retained is the Zionist platform as adopted at Carlsbad, embellished by the beautiful words and phrases of Israel Zangwill. And so, I can prove that after all we Jews are better writers, business men and even farmers than we are statesmen. 'Shoemaker stick to your last.'"

Emmanuel Neumann, Secretary of the Palestine Foundation Fund, called Mr. Zangwill a clever stringer of phrases and referred to the "stream of poisonous propaganda against Zionism." Other speakers denounced him in equally bitter terms.

AIR TRAFFIC VIOLATOR ARRESTED IN SKY RACE

Aerial Policeman Takes First Prisoner for Stunt Flying Over Okron, Ohio.

AKRON, Ohio, Nov. 2.—After chasing Pilot Howard Calvert and his passenger, Frank O'Neill, prominent Akron clubman, through the skies in an airplane today, Harold Kullberg, volunteer aerial policeman and former World War ace, made what is believed to be the first arrest of a violator of air traffic rules in this country.

Calvert and O'Neill were arrested after they landed at Stow Aviation Field. They were charged with stunt flying over the city in violation of an ordinance. Arraigned in Municipal Court, both entered pleas of not guilty and were released on their personal bonds pending their hearing tomorrow.

O'Neill, charged with dropping handbills from the air, also in violation of a city law, declares he will make a test of the validity of the ordinance. Kullberg used his own machine in the flight.

DEFENDS FRENCH COURTS.

Prosecutor Says American Divorce Applicants Get No Favors.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—Americans getting divorces in Paris have been made to comply fully with the French laws, it is shown by an investigation ordered by Premier Poincaré. The Chief Prosecutor, M. Lescouve, was instructed to make the inquiry when the American Embassy recently transmitted complaints from a number of leading lawyers in the United States to the effect that the Paris divorce courts had been grinding out separations too easily.

M. Lescouve reported to Premier Poincaré that the Americans were treated exactly the same as the French; that the cases were judged entirely according to French law, and that there was no favoritism.

Yale-in-China Not in Danger.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 2.—A cable message received at Yale University late yesterday from the Yale-in-China Mission at Changsha, China, in response to an inquiry as to reported danger to the mission as a result of the bombardment of the city, says: "Situation gives but little cause for concern. Does not interfere with work."

LIFE WITH STOKES UNHAPPY, WIFE SAYS

mother, father or me if he could marry me. I never refused him."

On her acceptance of the ring, which was a subject of searching inquiry by Mr. Steuer, the testimony follows:

Q.—Did Wallace ask you to wear the ring? A.—I don't remember if he asked me to wear it or if I asked him to let me wear it for a while.

Q.—How old were you when you got the ring? A.—I don't remember exactly, possibly twenty or twenty-two.

Wore Many College Rings.

Q.—Didn't you think it a serious thing to have a man of Wallace's age give you a ring? A.—Certainly not. I have worn many college rings and pins and fraternity rings.

Q.—And you compare these rings with the ring that Wallace loaned you? A.—Certainly; just about the same.

Q.—But this ring had two diamonds, each weighing a carat and a half, and you compare that with a boy's fraternity ring? A.—Yes, I do. I got other valuable rings for presents and from persons older than Mr. Wallace.

Q.—From whom did you get any other valuable ring? A.—I attended a house party once, and after it was over the guests gave me a ring. That didn't mean I was engaged and was going to marry the entire house party.

Q.—Were you in the habit of wearing men's rings? A.—Not in the habit; just like any other normal girl.

Much of the testimony concerned Mrs. Stokes' friendship with William Myer, a Denver man, described by her as an "old friend of the family."

Several photographs of Myer with Mrs. Stokes, at a house party at Ripon, Wis., in 1916 and at Grand Lake, Col., the following year, were produced.

Pajama Picture Introduced.

One of the snapshots introduced by Mr. Steuer showed Mrs. Stokes, wearing pajamas, perched on Myer's shoulders. The picture, she said, was taken at the Ripon house party.

"You said you were fully dressed when this picture of you in pajamas was taken?" Mr. Steuer asked.

"Yes, I had a thin summer dress on," said Mrs. Stokes.

Holding up another photograph, Mr. Steuer said:

"You look very much younger today."

The courtroom audience laughed when Mrs. Stokes responded:

"You flatter me."

"I don't flatter you," said Mr. Steuer; "the photograph does."

"I only wish I did look as young," the witness declared.

Mr. Steuer's attempt to introduce letters he said Stokes wrote to his wife in 1917 and her replies, proved unsuccessful. Upon Mr. Untermyer's objections, the letters were excluded, either as immaterial or as privileged correspondence between man and wife. Stokes, his wife said, wrote to her sometimes two and three times a day while he was in his Seventy-second Street office and she was a block away at the Ansonia.

A point upon which Mr. Steuer laid emphasis was that she had received $9,000 in 1917. Under redirect examination by Mr. Untermyer, however, Mrs. Stokes said that this was a legacy.

"If you want the truth of the matter," she added, "I've used it to pay to defend myself from Mr. Stokes's charges."

The trial will be resumed on Monday morning.

50,000 TO WITNESS ZEV-MY OWN RACE

Great Crowds Are Arriving at Cincinnati for $50,000 Latonia Championship Today.

THREE-YEAR-OLDS ARE FIT

Championship of America Is at Stake Over Route of 1¾ Miles at Latonia Track.

MY OWN'S JOCKEY IN DOUBT

Apprentice McLane May Be the Rider—Zev Expected to Be Favorite at Odds of 7 to 10.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 2.—Zev and My Own meet at the Latonia track tomorrow in the $50,000 Latonia championship over a course of one mile and three quarters to decide which is the better horse. Both are on the scene and both are fit. The track was almost fast this afternoon and the sunset was clear. Unless the unexpected happens the most-debated question in the recent history of the American turf should be satisfactorily answered a few minutes after 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Zev arrived this morning from New York on the Cincinnati Limited. As Trainer Sam Hildreth remarked as he pulled the heavy blanket off him, he looked "just like a peacock." He will be breezed tomorrow morning and will go to the post ready to defend the laurels he won in the Kentucky Derby and the international race against Papyrus.

My Own has been here since yesterday, and this afternoon he galloped a mile in 1:40 2-5 as his final preparation for the race and then went on to the mile and an eighth pulled up in 1:56. He ran the first eighth in 0:12 3-5, the quarter in 0:25, three-eighths in 0:36 2-5, half in 0:48 3-5, five-eighths in 1:00 3-5, three-quarters in 1:13 3-5 and seven-eighths in 1:26 4-5.

There was some question as to whether such a severe workout on the day before the race was wise, but P. M. Burch, who looks after the training of My Own, has been handling horses ever since the Civil War and must know what he is about. Certainly, if the test told on My Own he did not show it, for Simon McLane, who rode him, had all he could do to take him in after he had flashed past the mile pole. McLane broke him from the eighth pole and as he went past the crowded grand stand he was simply "crying to run," as the rail birds say.

That Zev will go to the post a favorite around a price of 7 to 10, with odds of 2 to 1 against on My Own, was the guess of turf experts tonight. The price against In Memoriam, it was figured, probably would be about 12 to 1, with 15 to 1 against Rialto and 200 to 1 against Taylor Hay.

My Own's Jockey in Doubt.

Every detail in connection with the running of the Latonia Championship, which will be the medium of the Zev-My Own meeting, has been arranged except a jockey for My Own. Admiral Cary T. Grayson, who owns the big bay colt, said here today that he had made unsuccessful efforts to secure the services of C. Kummer, T. McTaggart and McAtee, and that unless something developed tonight McLane, the exercise boy, would get the mount. McLane is an apprentice rider of some ability, but Admiral Grayson feels that the best in the way of experience and horsemanship will be none too good for My Own tomorrow.

All the riders whom Messrs. Grayson and Burch endeavored to secure have mounts in the Pimlico Futurity at Pimlico, Md., tomorrow.

Jockey Ivan Parke, the 16-year-old lad who has been riding so sensationally here, was suggested to Admiral Grayson, but when the Admiral arrived here he found that Parke had been suspended for ten days for rough riding. It has been suggested that an appeal might be made to the stewards to lift the suspension for this one race and that may be what Admiral Grayson had in mind when he said that McClane would ride My Own unless something developed.

Tomorrow is Parke's birthday and at the track this afternoon he told reporters that he would give most anything to ride in the big race against Sande, but that he did not have much hope that he would be permitted to.

In Memoriam Hope of the West.

While Zev and My Own are claiming most of the attention there will be two and possibly three other starters in the contest. In Memoriam, the hope of Kentucky and the West in the Kentucky Derby, is entered and Bob Gilmore his trainer will not be written out of the race before it is run.

He contends that if the track is fast In Memoriam will lead the others to the judges' stand, and that even if it is slow he will still have an outside chance to win. In Memoriam will not lack for supporters. Kentucky stands by its own and Kentuckians say that the Wiedemann three-year-old did not have a fair chance to show his ability in the Kentucky Derby.

Then there is Rialto, the Greentree Stable's entry, which won the Washington Handicap in such impressive fashion last Saturday. "Don't overlook Rialto," Trainer Jimmy Rowe Jr. was heard to say tonight. "Remember he ran a mile and a quarter in 2:04 last Saturday on a track which was at least a second and a half slow. What he really needs is a pasteboard track and if he gets it he can go on to the mile and three-quarters just as easy as any of the rest of them."

The fifth starter is an extremely doubtful one. It is Taylor Hay, a plater belonging to C. W. May. His owner knows that Taylor Hay has no business tryin gto beat the others, but he figures that if the track is heavy Rialto will be withdrawn and that would levae Taylor Hay a substitute for fourth money, and fourth money in this race will amount to $1,000.

The race will be worth $58,000 to the winner, acording to an announcement made by Colonel Matt Winn of the Kentucky Jockey Club, under whose auspices the contest is being held, $3,000 going to the second horse, $2,000 to the third and $1,000 to the fourth. To the winner also go a gold cup worth $500.

Crowds Arriving on Scene.

Thousands of turf followers from all parts of the United States are already coming into Cincinnati for the race. During the day delegations arrived from as far west as Kansas City, while others came from St. Louis, Chicago, Pittsburgh, New York and other eastern cities. There will be a special train from Chicago tomorrow morning and regular trains are carrying extra accomodations. The manager of the Union Station said today that ten private cars, the largest number which had ever been in Cincinnati at one time, were expected for the race.

Among those who are expected to come in private cars and bring parties are H. F. Sinclair, iwner of Zev; Mrs. Raymond T. Baker, Barney Baruch, E. W. McLean and J. S. Cosden. Manager Winn estimates that if the day is pleasant more than 50,000 persons will see the championship decided.

The big race has superceded everything else as a subject of conversation in Cincinnati tonight. The lobbies of all the hotels are crowded with turf enthusiasts and wherever lovers of the turf get together the burden of their talk is horse. But discussion of the race is not confined to followers of racing. It has spread until there are hundreds of men, women and children who are feverishly proclaiming the merits of their favorite while they have yet to see a horse race.

Zev and My Own Unconcerned.

Zev and My Own—the names are heard and seen on every hand, while all this chatter, some of it amicable, some of it bitter, goes on in Cincinnati. Across the Ohio River Zev and My Own, the horses, contently munch their hay in the same barn and live together in peace and quiet accord.

Statements of Trainer Hildreth and Jockey Sande of the Zev camp and of Admiral Grayson, Trainer Burch and Jockey McLane of the My Own stable, follow:

HILDRETH—I hope the track will be dry. My Own is an admirable colt, but I believe Zev will beat him, and if he does I prefer that it be under conditions which are equal and fair to both.

SANDE—It looks life a tough race, but I naturally think Zev will win. He has never failed me yet when he had a chance and I think we will be out in front at the finish.

ADMIRAL GRAYSON—Colonel Winn has promised a clear day and a fast track. That is all we ask. I think I have the better horse, but what I want to do is to find out for sure.

BURCH—If I had Sande to ride My Own tomorrow I would count the race already won. The colt needs a strong boy, But he may pull through without an experienced rider.

McLANE—I know My Own and he is a great horse. If I get the chance to ride him in the race, as I have in his training, I will do my best to bring him home the winner, but I believe he will come on at the finish to win, no matter who is up.

HOMESTRETCH WINS AUTUMN HANDICAP

Beats Gadfly and Ten Minutes at Pimlico After Making Poor Start.

JOCKEY ROWAN BREAKS LEG

Is Thrown by St. Lawrence in Steeplechase Event—Chacolet Takes Wicomico.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 2.—Although shuffled back at the start and meeting with early interference, H. Alterman's three-year-old colt, Homestretch, got up in time to beat the Whitney filly, Gadfly, by a length for the winner's share of the purse in the Autumn Handicap, feature event at the Pimlico course here today. The Glen Riddle Farm Stable's Ten Minutes took third, two lengths behind Gadfly. The race, which was over a mile and a quarter route, attracted a field of ten three-year-olds, J. S. Cosden's Dunlin, coupled with Golden Rule, being heavily favored in the mutuels. A. C. Bostwick's Broomstick colt, Spot Cash, ruled the second choice, and Homestetch, making his first appearance since the Fall Jamaica meeting, ranked third in the wagering.

Misfortune still followed the steeplechase events here when St. Lawrence, going to the third jump the first time around, hit the wing and bolted, throwing Jockey J. Rowan violently to the ground. Rowan was rushed to the hospital at once, where an examination showed that his leg had been broken by the fall.

That Hal Price Headley added a consistently good performer to his stable when he acquired the imported five-year-old mare, Chacolet, was again borne out when the daughter of St. Amant and Martial Note won the Wicomico Handicap, last on the card, from Sun Thistle and Miss Smith. Chacolet, which enriched her owner to the extent of $62,950 by galloping to an easy victory in both the Kentucky Special and The Latonia Cup races on the Kentucky course, broke slowly but moved up smartly under the mild urging of Lang, and, although obliged to take the overland route on the turn into the stretch, closed resolutely to win by three-quarters of a length from Sun Thistle. Chacolet paid only $3.40 on a $2.00 ticket, the equivalent of 7 to 10 in oral quotations.

Jockey Lang fattened his percentage during the day by bringing home three winners with five mounts. He scored victories with Noel, Yankee Princess and Chacolet.

UNITED HUNTS MEET WILL START TODAY

Five Events on Opening Card at Belmont Park—Society to Attend.

A big crowd of society folk is expected to be on hand at Belmont Park this afternoon to witness the opening card of the two-day meeting of the United Hunts Racing Association. The second set of races will be held at the same track next Tuesday. Today's program will consist of only five events instead of six, as previously announced. The featured event will be the first part of the United Hunts Double Event Steeplechase for hunters which will be held over a timber course of approximately three and a half miles.

The first race will start at 2:15 this afternoon. Special trains will be run to the course from Pennsylvania Station at 12:30 and 1:20, connecting at Jamaica with trains leaving the Flatbush Avenue station in Brooklyn. The opening number on the card is for two-year-olds and will be held over the main course at a distance of six furlongs. Thirteen entries have been received for this event.

The first part of the double event will be the second race on the list. The list of entries for this race totals fourteen. The second part of the event will be held on Tuesday.

The third race will be a steeplechase handicap for three-year-olds and upward at about two miles over the brush course. The fourth race, which will be run over a distance of about one mile and a half on the flat, is for hunters registered by the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association. BUCKNELL ALUMNI DENY YALE CHARGE

New York Body Says Football Team Was Not Guilty of Unfair Playing.

A protest and denunciation of the recent attack on Bucknell's football team in an editorial in The Yale Alumni Weekly was voted at the annual banquet of the Bucknell Alumni Association of New York City at the Machinery Club. The local association numbers 450 alumni living in or about New York City, most of whom were outspoken in their protest of The Weekly's statement that the tactics of the Bucknell players were outside the pale of good sportsmanship, and they demand either a retraction or open proof of the charges made.

The resolution follows:

"The Bucknell Alumni Association of New York City, comprising 450 graduates living in and about the city, protests and denounces the ruthless, unfair and untrue editorial attack of The Yale Alumni Weekly Oct. 26, which asserted that the tactics of Bucknell football players in the Yale-Bucknell game were beyond the pale of good sportsmanship and insinuated, rather than openly stated, that O'Hearn and two other Yale players were injured in the game by foul tactics of Bucknell men. We demand that The Yale Alumni Weekly either retract its statement or establish its proof forthwith.

"We have only praise for the attitude of the student body in general and the athletic authorities at Yale and of the townspeople of New Haven."

Dr. Emory W. Hunt, President of Bucknell, in an address at the banquet stated that he had before him Captain Reed of the Bucknell team, who was put out of the game for slugging, and that Reed had declared, supported by his teammates, that he had slugged only after his Yale opponent had twice struck him.

"The Yale editorial failed to mention," continued Dr. Hunt, "that two Bucknell men were carried off the field and that their injuries were such as could result only from unfair tactics."

CONNECTICUT SHIFTS MEN.

Aggies Replace Injured Players for C. C. N. Y. Game Today.

Special to The New York Times.

STORRS, Conn., Nov. 2.—Three changes will be made in the Connecticut Aggie line-up in tomorrow's game on Dow Field with City College of New York, it was revealed in this afternoon's practice. Nanfeldt, who has been playing right tackle, was injured last week and probably will be unable to hold down his berth in the line. His place will be taken by Eddy, who is a valuable fullback. Brinck, left end, is out of the game indefinitely with a wrenched ankle.

Shifting Eddy from fullback to right tackle leaves a hole in the backfield. Coach Dole will probably reconstruct his running trio by entering Swem, Purple and Donahue in tomorrow's fray with Filmer in reserve. Swem is recovering rapidly from a bruise received in last Saturday's game. Captain O'Neill is playing only part time in daily scrimmage at centre in order to favor a sore knee.

The lineup:

3:30 P. M.—Hoppe vs. Conti.
8:15 P. M.—Schaefer vs. Cochran.

Young Jake Schaefer of Chicago won his third straight game in the world's 18.2 balkline billiard championship last night when he defeated Erich Hagenlacher in the tenth game of the tournament to progress at the Hotel Pennsylvania, 500 points to 173.

The former titleholder ran out in twelve innings, setting a new high average of 41 8-12 for the tourney. The game was the shortest thus far played, only two hours and twenty-three minutes being required for the Chicagoan to gain his total. He made 82 caroms in the second inning, 85 in the fifth, 104 in the sixth, 91 in the seventh, and an unfinished run of 68 in the twelfth.

As a result of this victory Schaefer has increased his lead over the field with a perfect standing of three games won and none lost. Willie Hoppe and Welker Cochran are tied for second place with two victories and one defeat, and Hagenlacher now takes fourth place with two games won and two lost.

Edouard Horemans is fifth in the standing. The Belgian champion defeated Roger Conti of France in the ninth game yesterday afternoon, 500 to 475. It was Horemans's first victory in three starts and Conti's fourth successive setback.

The game between Schaefer and Hagenlacher, although the fastest of the five days of play, was not the most interesting. Schaefer played championship billiards, as his runs indicate, but the spectators never warmed up to the play for more than a few minutes at a time and the end came quickly and quietly, almost as a disappointment, to them, so it seemed. Hagenlacher had their sympathy throughout, and when he made a run of 103 in the sixth inning, his only good one of the night, applause was louder than it had been on any other night.

Plays Fine Billiards.

Hagenlacher played fine billiards in making this run and showed that he has the strokes to compete in the same class with the topnotchers if he can only find himself. In both close order work and in open table shooting his performance in the sixth inning compared favorably with the work of his opponent. But, whereas Schaefer was able to sustain his fine playing over a period of innings, the German champion found himself only this once.

The Chicagoan's first good string of 82 was a fine exhibition of balkline play in the lower left-hand section of the table. With a hair-trigger touch he flecked the ball so lightly that over a stretch of thirty-five caroms he kept the globules straddling the intersection of the balkline.

Schaefer's other big runs were the result of a combination of line nursing and brilliant open-table shooting. His gauging of speed was not so good in the other innings, except for the last, and again and again he lost perfect position by an inch, finding it necessary to go to the rail to get them grouped properly for the employment of the nurse.

In the last inning Schaefer's cue charmed the balls in the upper section of the table and before the gallery could realize it he had raced through sixty-eight caroms and brought the game to an end.

Five hundred billiard followers were in the gallery when Schaefer and Hagenlacher began the evening game. Hagenlacher won the bank and missed the opening shot.

Schaefer ran 19. The German champion collected 25 on his second turn and then Schaefer came up to give a pretty demonstration of balkline play, running 82 carroms and gathering 35 of them straight with the balls straddling the intersection of the balklines in the lower left-hand side of the table. The score was 101 to 25 in Schaefer's favor.

Both men resorted to safety play in the next two innings, Hagenlacher drawing two blanks and Schaefer getting a zero and a 1. The German champion drew his third straight blank in the fifth.

Schaefer Has Good Inning.

The Chicagoan had his second good inning in the fifth when he ran 85, bringing off several massé shots that were gems of execution.

Hagenlacher then came to the table for his sixth inning and for the greater part of his run of 103 kept the gallery in an almost continuous state of applause with the brilliancy of his shots. His forty-sixth was a kiss shot off the side rail. His ninetieth was a dead ball drive for perfect position at the top of the table, and on his ninety-first, when he was compelled to drive hard to avoid a kiss, he again came back for a close gather at the head of the table. Failure to touch the first ball on a massé sent him to his seat, leaving Schaefer with a set-up.

The Chicagoan now began his third session of nursing and when he stopped he had collected just one more carrom than had his opponent, making 104 counts. He was frozen to the red ball after making the 104th and a bank shot failed to get him out of the difficulty. The score was now 291 to 128 in Schaefer's favor in six innings.

Hagenlacher added 31 to his total in the seventh bringing it to 159. Schaefer found the balls spread. With a few strokes he brought them down to the lower end of the table and repeated his exhibition of balkline play of the second inning. But his touch was not so sure now, nor was his gauging of speed so accurate, the balls slipping out of position by an inch again and again. The Chicagoan, however, kept the caroms adding up and went on to 91 before he missed.

The German champion failed on an easy draw shot in the eighth and drew a blank. Schaefer got 28 in his half of the inning, losing control of the globules when his cue ball hopped. Hagenlacher, after getting the balls together in the eighth, ran into a freeze on the sixth shot. The balls were spotted and the seventh carom was made, but he missed on the eighth, a three-cushion effort.

Schaefer added 16 to his total on open-table shooting, finding it impossible to hold the ivories together. The score was now 426 to 166 in his favor.

The score by innings:

Schaefer—19 82 0 1 85 104 91 28 16 6 0 68—500. Average, 41 8-12; high run, 104.

Hagenlacher—0 25 0 0 0 103 31 0 7 4 2 1—173. Average, 11 5-12; high run, 103.

Edouard Horemans of Belgium retained fifth place in the standing of the players yesterday afternoon when he defeated Roger Conti of France in the ninth game of the tourney which was decided in twenty-four innings at the close score of 500 to 475 after three hours and thirty-five minutes of play. To gain the victory, which was his first in three starts, and which marked the fourth set-back for Conti, Horemans was compelled to make the same sort of pull up in the concluding stages that carried Hoppe to triumph over the Belgian on Thursday night.

In the twentieth inning Conti made a run of 126, the longest in a game that was perhaps the least interesting of the nine played. This fine string put him into the lead at 468 to 349. Horemans then stepped to the table and ran off 112 caroms, putting him on even terms with his opponent, the totals reading 468 to 461. Conti had three more chances to run out, but each time he came to the table he found the balls widely scattered and drew two successive blanks and a seven, while Horemans was getting a blank one, and an unfininshed run of thirty-eight for 500.

Bad Freeze Stops Conti.

A bad freeze along the top rail brought Conti's run of 126 to and end in the afternoon game when he had the balls closely gathered and seemed to be on the verge of running out. So well was he going at the time that there appeared to be little chance of Horemans having another turn at the table. After making his one hundred and twelfth carom Conti found his cue ball frozen to the white along the upper rail, with the red ball less than half an inch behind the white. He resorted to the massé and made the carom, but failed to get away clean, touching the white ball first. A foul resulted and Horemans came to the table with the balls clustered and made his run of 112.

The match was a see-saw affair throughout the twenty-four innings. Neither player performed in a style befitting a championship tournament, and it was only an occasional rally by either that lent any interest to the game.

Horemans won the bank and by a consistent stretch of fair billiards went into the lead at 116 to 62 in the first five innings. He increased his lead to 252 to 125 by the tenth, in which inning he made a run of 73, nursing the balls in the unrestricted area near the top of the table.

Conti, beginning with the eleventh inning, played good billiards for four innings, running, in succession 48, 42, 60 and 53. He now lead at 328 to 269, but lapsed badly in the next five innings, getting a total of only 14 caroms for an average of 2 4-5.

The Belgian went into the lead in the eighteenth with a string of 60 and led, 347 to 330. Both had been missing shots of the simplest character, Horemans showing a weakness on his draw effects, and Conti using the rail badly. A freeze brought the Belgian's run of 60 to an end, after he had spotted the balls, and three innings later Conti made his run of 126, ending just short of victory.

The score by innings:

Horemans—10 7 25 10 64 26 33 0 4 73 1 2 3 0 2 27 0 60 1 1 112 0 1 38. Total, 500; high run, 112; average 20 20-24.

Conti—13 30 0 1 18 58 0 2 2 1 48 42 60 53 0 0 2 8 4 126 0 0 7. Total, 475; high run, 126; average 20 15-23.

Referee—Albert Cutler.

Cutler Stands by Decision After Horemans Disagrees

In the eighteenth inning of his game with Roger Conti yesterday in the world's 18.2 balkline billiard championship Edouard Horemans got into a freeze. The referee, Albert Cutler, examined the balls closely and declared them frozen. Horemans then looked at them and asked Cutler to examine them again, asserting that there was no freeze. The referee looked again and admitted that he now could see light between the balls, but stood by his ruling. Horemans then had the balls spotted and, after making two more caroms, missed on his sixty-first shot.

COLUMBIA TO MEET MIDDLEBURY TEAM

Close Contest Predicted at Baker Field Today in Second Annual Battle.

One of the closest games of the season at Baker Field is expected this afternoon when Middlebury visits the home gridiron of Columbia for the second annual contest between the two elevens. Columbia won last year's contest, 17 to 6. The game will be Columbia's last test before the Cornell battle next Saturday, and in Middlebury the Haughton machine will meet a team that held Harvard to a 6—6 tie earlier in the season.

Both elevens worked out on Baker Field yesterday. Coach Dave Morey had his aggregation of Vermonters out for a private practice in the morning behind closed gates and revealed a squad of big men who combined weight and speed. Later in the day Percy Hoaghton marshaled his Columbia eleven for a light signal and kicking. Both teams will be in full strength, the Columbia coaches announcing that Captain Walter Koppisch and Larry Tiihonen, the end, would be in shape to start today's game.

In addition to this, Coach Haughton expected to have Walder ready to play his first game of the season. Walder has been out with an injured shoulder since the early practices, but it is expected that he will be in condition to face Middlebury this afternoon.

The probable line-ups follow:

HARVARD SWITCHES LINE-UP

Moves Evans to Tackle and Combs to End for Tufts Game.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 2.—The past week has been the hardest of the season for the Harvard squad, there being three days of genuine driving and all to the purpose to develop speed. To help this cause Dunker has been shifted from tackle to guard, where he is much more active than was Grew, and the shift has brought "Buck" Evans, the former Marquette player, who starred on the Harvard scrubs last year, to a regular place on the first team line.

Evans seems permanently located at left tackle, after having put in more than five weeks of the preliminary season at end. A new left end, Combs, will be tried against Tufts tomorrow.

Joe McGlone is to have his fling with the varsity at the start of a game. On his work tomorrow will depend his chance for starting at quarter down at Princeton next week.

RENAULT KNOCKS OUT JOHNSON IN THE 15TH

LOSER TAKES BAD BEATING

Towel Thrown In With Only 30 Seconds to Go—Cheered for His Game Stand.

GODFREY STOPS BILL TATE

Scores Decisive Victory in Seventh Round Over Harlem Negro in the Semi-Final Bout.

The championship aspirations of Floyd Johnson, young Iowa heavyweight, were crushed in the dust of defeat last night by Jack Renault, Canadian boxer, before a crowd of 13,000 in Madison Square Garden. After one of the most spectacular heavyweight battles ever seen in this city, a clash that was punctuated with enough thrills and exciting moments to satisfy even the most exacting fan, Johnson was knocked stone cold in the fifteenth round, two minutes and twenty-nine seconds after the final session started.

Manager Charley Cook tossed a soggy towel into the ring in token of defeat for Johnson after the Iowan had been floored twice. The ring's token of surrender, however, did not come in time to save Johnson from a third knockdown. He crumpled under the terrific driving power of Renault's right-hand uppercut.

It was fully ten minutes before Johnson could be revived suficiently to leave the ring. He had taken an unmerciful beating without a backward step, without even a whisper, through the last half of the battle. Renault's decisive punches rendered Johnson in a precarious condition.

It required the expert handling of his manager and seconds to restore the Iowan's scattered senses. Johnson, as a matter of fact, was so badly beaten that Dr. William H. Walker, official physician for the State Athletic Commission, clambered into the vanquished fighter's corner at the suggestion of Chief Deputy Walter G. Hooke, to investigate the extent of the beating Johnson had received. Johnson, however, regained enough strength, without the aid of Dr. Walker, to walk from the ring to his dressing room amid a demonstration of applause which seldom has been exceeded.

Crowd Cheers Johnson.

Johnson earned that demonstration of applause—earned every bit of it. He fought one of the pluckiest battles ever seen in the Garden or any other arena. He was beaten until his senses were numb under the impact of Renault's savage attack. He fought on with an exhibition of courage and determination which inspired as it thrilled. But this game showing of Johnson was a losing one after the seventh round. Save for a startling recovery in the eleventh session, when he threw his all into one final, desperate effort for victory, Johnson was a badly beaten boxer. The crowd sang Johnson's praises after Renault had left the ring. Johnson, his brain still numbed from the beating he had received, could not acknowledge the cheers which rang in his ears from all parts of the arena.

Johnson was in a squatting position in Renault's corner when the finish came. He had been knocked down for the third time with Renault's right-hand uppercut, a blow with which Jess Willard battered the Iowan into submission in the memorable battle in the Yankee Stadium last May. It was with the same right uppercut that Renault accomplished the downfall of Johnson and it is believed wrote finish to Johnson's ring caree.

From the tenth round it seemed that Johnson must go down under the power of Renault's sporadic, though accurate punches. For six rounds Johnson led in the battle only because of the unquenchable fury of his attack. He charged Renault with a varied assault for which Renault had no counter offensive. In the seventh session, however, Renault began meeting Johnson's rushes with left hooks and jabs to the face, and right crosses and uppercuts to the jaw which stung.

Through the eighth and ninth rounds Renault continued this assault and by the time the tenth round ended Johnson was in a bad way. Both his eyes were blackened, and his face was a bloody smear from a cut under the left eye. He had another on the left corner of the upper lip, a gash an inch long under the chin and his face was bruised and battered. But his fighting heart carried him on. His courage was undimmed. And in the eleventh round Johnson electrified the gathering with a sensational rally in which he swept Renault before him with a furious attack. It was the last flash for Johnson, however. It was a dying effort which failed.

Through the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth rounds Renault kept hammering away mercilessly with that crushing right uppercut, meeting every rush of Johnson with a blow to the body or face. The effect was plainly seen. Johnson's knees sagged ominously. He began holding for a respite, something that is unusual for Johnson. He answered the bell for the last round weary and dog tired. He was hurt, too, but he went in gamely, though blindly, at Renault.

Waits For Opening.

The Canadian bided his time looking for an opening and when it came, a left hook swung Johnson's head into position for a crack of the right on the jaw. Johnson crumpled but struggled to his feet at the count of four. He was immediately floored again, and again it was with a left hook to the jaw, followed by a right uppercut. This time Johnson dragged himself erect by gripping the middle ropes of the ring and pulling himself up. He was helpless and in no condition to continue.

The fight should have been stopped then and there, but Referee Lou Magnolia signaled a resumption of hostilities and Renault sailed in to complete his task. Johnson was rushed to the ropes near Renault's corner and then a towel was tossed into the ring from Johnson's corner as a token of defeat, but Referee Magnolia's back was to Johnson's corner, as was Renault's. Neither saw the towel and in the hubbub of excitement they could not hear the warning cries of the ringsiders.

Renault crashed home a final right to the jaw and Johnson went down in a sitting position in the Canadian's corner. Then Johnson's seconds leaped into and across the ring and dragged their beaten idol to his chair. Renault weighed 196½ pounds and Johnson 196. It was announced that the paid attendance was 10,978. The receipts were $50,683.

George Godfrey, negro heavyweight sparring partner of Champion Jack Dempsey, knocked out Bill Tate, the Harlem negro boxer, in the seventh round of the semi-final bout which was schedued to go ten rounds. The end came after 2 minutes 48 seconds of fighting in the seventh round, when Godfrey sent a left hook to Tate's chin and followed it with a sharp right to the jaw. Up to the time of the knockout the bout was uninteresting, the crowd jeering the efforts of both fighters.

The first bout of the night was an eight-round tilt between Ed Keely of Bridgeport and Dan Bright, English heavyweight. Keely received the decision when the final bell ended the contest.

MANY BIG CONTESTS IN FOOTBALL TODAY

Attendance Records for Season Expected to Be Set in Numerous Stadia.

YALE AND ARMY TOP LIST

Lafayette-W. & J. and Dartmouth-Cornell Games Also Among Outstanding Engagements.

The present football season, which already has been marked by many notable games, will offer another splendid set of contests to followers of the sport in the East and the West today. Despite the immense crowds that have turned out for many of the October games it is almost certain that the first Saturday of November will see new attendance records for the season established at more than one of the big football stadia. Outstanding among the games in the East today are the Army-Yale contest at New Haven, the Dartmouth-Cornell battle at Hanover and the Penn State-Syracuse match at Syracuse. In addition to these there are also many other games which are attracting widespread interest, including the contest between Lafayette and Washington and Jefferson at the Polo Grounds.

Undoubtedly the biggest crowd of the day will turn out at New Haven to see Yale and the Army in their annual clash. From present indications more than 77,000 persons will witness this game. This contest also promises to develop into a hard struggle. It will be the most severe test that the unbeaten Yale team has encountered this season. The Elis have triumphed over North Carolina, Georgia, Bucknell and Brown thus far, but none of these teams is as strong as the Army.

Judging on the form shown by today's two rivals in their earlier games, Yale probably has a slight edge on the Cadets. The West Point team has defeated Tennessee, Florida, Auburn and Lebanon Valley and lost to the great Notre Dame team. Today's contest will be the second of the season for the Cadets away from their home field, as their contest with Notre Dame was played at Ebbets Field.

Cornell to Face Dartmouth.

The Cornell eleven, which has been idle since it scored a decisive victory over Colgate two weeks ago, will get into action again when it meets Dartmouth in the latter's new stadium at Hanover today. The result of this game seems to be pretty much of a toss-up. Both teams have shown great power in their previous games and neither has suffered a defeat thus far this year. Dartmouth defeated Norwich, Maine, Boston University and Vermont and then followed wtih an impressive victory over Harvard last week. Today's game will be by far the most severe test that Cornell has received this year. The Ithacans already have beaten St. Bonaventure, Susquehanna and Williams in addition to Colgate.

Another pair of unbeaten elevens will meet at Syracuse when Penn State encounters Chick Meehan's strong team. Both of these teams have made a splendid showing in their October games, but the odds today seem to be slightly in favor of Penn State. The Nittany Lions have won from Lebanon Valley, North Carolina State, Gettysburg and the Navy and have played a tie game with West Virginia. Syracuse has been victorious in five games, including one with the University of Pittsburgh.

Today's program also includes four games on various fields in this city. The feature of the local card is the clash between Lafayette and Washington and Jefferson at the Polo Grounds. These two teams put up a stirring battle at the home of the Giants last year, W. and J. winning by the margin of one point.

Presidents Have Good Record.

From present indications W. and J. is likely to repeat its victory of last season. The Presidents already have beaten several strong teams, including Brown, Carnegie Tech and the University of Detroit. Lafayette's only defeat this year came at the hands of Pitt.

In addition to the Polo Grounds contest the Third Corps Area team will play the Argonauts of Toronto at the Yankee Stadium. The Middlebury eleven, which recently held Harvard to a tie, will meet Columbia at Baker Field. Of their five games played thus far Percy Haughton's players won two, lost two and tied one. St. John's College of Brooklyn, which triumphed over Fordham last week, will meet Springfield College at Ebbets Field.

In some of the other important Eastern games, Amherst will meet Wesleyan at Amherst, Penn will play Pitt at Philadelphia, Harvard will clash with Tufts at Cambridge, Princeton will oppose Swarthmore at Princeton, Georgetown will encounter Boston College at Boston, the Navy will meet Colgate at Annapolis and Lehigh will play Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh.

PENN STATE READY FOR SYRACUSE GAME

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 2.—With both teams unbeaten and each anxious to keep its slate clean, Syracuse and Penn State are on edge for the whistle which will send them into action in Archbold Stadium tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Up-State football followers regard this as the biggest game of the season in this section and the turnout of fans will probably be greater than ever seen at any game staged in Syracuse. The sale of seats is big and tonight only a few seats behind each of the goal posts remained.

The Penn State team will not come to Syracuse until 1 o'clock, or just in time to dress for the game. The team arrived at Skaneateles, eighteen miles from here, at 11 o'clock today and this afternoon the players were sent through a snappy signal drill. After the practice Bezdek played nine holes of golf to forget about the impending contest.

Penn State will not have its strongest possible team on the field as Captain Bedenk will not start because of an injury to his back and Palm, quarterback, did not come with the team.

"The boys will try hard to keep their record for the year clean," said Bezdek. "There is no overconfidence in the camp. We realize that Syracuse is strong, but we also figure that we have a powerful aggregation."

Coach Meehan put his Syracuse players through a signal drill and then gave them a lecture on Penn State plays.

"We are on edge and expect a real battle. We will do our level best to score a victory. All the boys are ready to fight to the bitter end and that is all I want them to do," he said.

Syracuse will weigh about four pounds to the man more than Bezdek's team.

ILLINOIS-CHICAGO TOPS BIG TEN GAMES

60,000 to See Opening of Stadium at Urbana Today—Michigan to Meet Iowa.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Four of the undefeated Big Ten elevens will be in action tomorrow, and unless Chicago and Illinois battle to a tie at Urbana the number of undefeated teams is sure to be cut to three or less.

Chicago will open the new Illinois Stadium at Urbana and close to 60,000 football fans have purchased tickets for the contest. Michigan journeys to Iowa City to clash with the much-improved University of Iowa. Northwestern plays Minnesota at Minneapolis.

The Chicago-Illinois game and the Michigan-Iowa contest seem to hold the spotlight of attention of the Big Ten fans, for aside from the age-old rivalry between them, neither team has been defeated this year and both are picked by their partisans to carry off the conference honors, while the knowledge that Iowa is exceptionally strong causes attention to be drawn toward the Michigan invasion of Iowa City.

Illinois was a problem to all students of football until Harold Grange, the Wheaton, Ill., boy, developed into a star and it has been mainly through his efforts that Illinois managed to barely outpoint Iowa and to overwhelm Northwestern. While Grange is a tremendous help to the Illinois team, the remainder of the squad has developed into a great football machine. On the other hand Stagg's team has a formidable set of backs in Zorn, H. Thomas, J. Thomas and Pyott and a couple of ends of the very highest calibre in Dickson and Lampe. The Maroon line has shown up exceedingly well. It seems certain that Illinois will use an open game and reports indicate that Chicago is preparing for it. Dickson and Lampe were injured last Saturday, but are expected to be in the line-up tomorrow, thanks to the efforts of a couple of doctors.

Out in Iowa City the two teams that came through undefeated last year will clash. Michigan has again gone through the first part of its season without being beaten, while Iowa has succumbed to Illinois, but has vanquished all other foes. In the Illinois game the Zuppke machine came through to victory in the last few minutes of play and there are those who contend that Iowa has learned much since then. Michigan, however, looms up tremendously strong. Yost has filled in his last year's losses in men with material that seems to be at least equal to any he lost.

Minnesota is the favorite over Northwestern. Wisconsin has an off day tomorrow, but Hanover will contest its annual game with Indiana and Denison will play its yearly game with Ohio State. Purdue tackles Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind., in an annual game.

PENN AND PITT ARE SET.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 2.—Penn and Philadelphia in general, pays its farewell tribute to Coach Warner on Franklin Field tomorrow when Pitt and the Red and Blue meet in their ninth annual game. Warner, who has brought fame to Cornell, the Carlisle Indians and Pitt, will be coaching Leland Stanford in California next Fall.

Coach Warner and his varsity squad of thirty-seven players arrived early this morning. Early in the afternoon Warner led his men over to Franklin Field and had things all to himself as Penn was putting on the final touches at Absecon, N. J. Warner used his new backfield combination of Colonna, quarterback; Flanagan and Bohren, halfbacks; Gustafson, fullback. Penn will remain at the Seaview Golf Club, near Absecon, until tomorrow morning.

There will be no change in the Red and Blue line-up with the exception of Stephens starting at right end in place of Westgate.

PENNSYLVANIA.		PITT.
Fairchild	L. E.	Jordan
Graf	L. T.	Akins
Kaufman	L. G.	Frank

YALE TEAM FORCED TO SHIFT FOR ARMY

80,000 FANS ARE EXPECTED

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 2.—Yale will be compelled by injuries to present a fundamentally altered line-up tomorrow against West Point, and the Eli coaches said tonight that they fully realized that they have the hardest game of the season ahead. Tonight the condition of the regular occupants of right tackle, Jack Miller and Ted Blair, was so unsatisfactory that it was decided to start Ben Butterworth in that berth.

With a year's freshman experience and two seasons of Exeter football, he is the most promising of the remaining tackle candidates. Ed Greene, his closest rival, is in the hospital. Tony Hulman, left end, has been below physical form most of the Fall and the coaches tonight decided to start Sherwood Bingham of Flushing, L. I. Bingham played tackle on the freshman eleven last year.

The punting game of Stevens, left halfback, has not developed the past week and the coaches tonight decided upon installing Billy Neale, who was regular halfback last Fall and who played right halfback this season until the coaches decided to switch him to the rôle of reserve punter because of the scarcity of kickers. They have finally rushed him ahead of Stevens in the punting rôle.

Only light signal rehearsal with punting practice was ordered for the Eli warriors this afternoon in the Bowl, the team awaiting the close of practice by the Army squad before it reported.

The Army squad, headed by Coach McEwan, reached Derby early this afternoon, transferred its equipment to the Hotel Clark, its headquarters during its stay here, lunched and took automobiles to the Yale Bowl, where it remained more than an hour in signal and punting practice. Coach McEwan insisted that his players were in excellent condition and that no changes were planned.

At the Yale ticket office it was stated that the attendance would be nearly 80,000, of whom nearly 77,000 persons have received seat tickets.

Yale bettors sought even terms in the light betting which prevailed, but West Point followers asked 10 to 9.

Both Secretary of War Weeks and Major Gen. Clarence R. Edwards will be in the Army stands tomorrow.

The line-up follows:

YALE.		ARMY.
Bingham	L. E.	Baxter
Milstead	L. T.	Goodman
Eckart	L. G.	Farwick
Lovejoy	C.	Garbisch
Diller	R. G.	Ellinger
Butterworth	R. T.	Mulligan
Luman	R. E.	Doyle
Richeson	Q. B.	Smythe
Neale	L. H. B.	Wood
Pond	R. H. B.	Hewitt
Mallory	F. B.	Gilmore

Referee—W. G. Crowell, Swarthmore. Umpire—Thomas D. Thorp, Columbia. Linesman H. R. Heneage, Dartmouth. Field judge—A. C. Tyler, Princeton. Time of periods—15 minutes.

CADETS TO FOLLOW TEAM.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 2.—The departure this morning of the Army football squad for New Haven, where it will meet Yale tomorrow in the Bowl, will be followed by the movement tomorrow morning of the corps of cadets, headed by the military academy band and field music. The cadets will go via boat to Beacon and from there in two special trains to New Haven. Colonel Merch B. Stewart, Commandant, will be in command.

Reveille will be sounded tomorrow morning at 4:40 o'clock, and the party is due home at 9:30 P. M., returning over the same route. The football men will go to New York following the game where they will spend the night, returning to West Point on Sunday afternoon.

An enthusiastic rally featured the Army team's get away this morning at 7:30. There was no sign of overconfidence, but a hopeful feeling prevailed that army would come home from this trip with Yale's scalp.

SPECIAL TRAINS TO GAME.

Six Will Leave Grand Central Station for New Haven Today.

For the convenience of New York football fans who desire to make the trip to New Haven today to see the Yale-Army game, the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company will run six extra special trains, leaving the Grand Central Station this morning at 9:15, 9:55, 10, 10:45 and 11 o'clock and at 12 o'clock noon, reaching New Haven at 11:09, 11:42, 11:47, 1, 1:05 and 1:43 respectively.

There will also be extra cars on regular trains leaving at 8:33, 9:15, 10, 11 and 12 noon, reaching New Haven at 10:25, 11:09, 11:47, 1:05 and 1:43 respectively.

The game will start at 2:30 P. M., but the drill of the cadets will begin half an hour earlier. It will be necessary to allow at least thirty minutes to reach the Yale Bowl from the railroad station in New Haven. Extra trains will be ready to leave immediately after the game for the return trip to New York.

N. Y. U. IN LONG WORKOUT.

Eleven Tries Out New Plays to Be Used Against Fordham.

It was not until long after sundown that Tom Thorp sent his New York University football team to the showers yesterday. The Violet football mentor held a long but not very strenuous session in preparation for the Fordham game on Election Day. The scrub opposed the first team in a light scrimmage in which no tackling was allowed. The Fordham aerial attack was used and Thorp believes he has perfected a defense for it. The session opened with a kicking drill for the backs while the line men warmed up passing the ball. The squad was divided into three teams and a short signal drill was held. Several new plays which will be used in the game with Fordham were run off with clock-like precision.

Toorock showed up well in practice yesterday and the only thing that worried Thorp is the fact that Berkwit, star tackle, is suffering from blood poisoning and it is not yet known whether he will be able to start against Fordham. The other injured men are gradually rounding into shape and were all out yesterday, occupying their regular berths.

Columbia Races Yale Today.

Columbia will open its cross-country season today by opposing Yale in a dual meet at Van Cortlandt Park. The race will be run over the regular six-mile course, starting at 10 o'clock. Captain Moore, Skeats, Schmid, Theobold, Horton and Johnston will be among the starters for Columbia.

English Tennis Body to Rule On Players Using False Names

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The practice of entering lawn tennis tournaments under an assumed name has grown to such an extent that it has come to the official notice of the Lawn Tennis Association. At the annual meeting in December a new rule will be recommended, and probably adopted, which suggests that particulars of assumed names be forwarded to the secretary by the committee of every open tournament in the country. Also it is suggested that once a player has used an assumed name, he or she shall not adopt another in the same year without permission of the council of the association.

W. & J. TO USE AMOS IN LAFAYETTE GAME

Presidents' Star Fullback Will Be in Line-Up for Contest at Polo Grounds Today.

Amos, the great athlete of the Washington and Jefferson football team, will start the game against Lafayette at the Polo Grounds this afternoon, it was learned last night, but Basista, quarterback, probably will be replaced by McLaughlin. Both of these men were on the injured list, and it was not determined until after the work-out at the field yesterday afternoon whether they would be able to get in the game. However, Amos showed up well and is slated to take his place at fullback when the game starts at 2 o'clock.

The presence of Amos in the line-up gives the Presidents a slight edge over the Easton team, but the battle should be as hard fought as that of last season, when Lafayette was beaten out in the last few minutes of play, 14 to 13. The Presidents come to the Polo Grounrs this season with an undefeated record, while Lafayette was defeated by Pittsburgh and held to a tie by Rutgers.

In Amos and West, the Washington and Jefferson team has two of the greatest all-around athletes in the country. West is the holder of the national pentathlon championship, but it is stated by those who have seen Amos perform that he is a better man at short distances and with the weights than the giant negro athlete. Amos is a freshman at the university, and it is highly probable that he will succeed to the honors held by West. He has proven the greatest scoring power for the Presidents this season.

Lafayette also boasts several stars of the gridiron, among whom are Deibel, Budd and Mittinger in the line, and Marhefka and Gebhardt in the backfield.

The line-up will probably be as follows:

W. AND J.		LAFAYETTE.
Niehaus	L. E.	Berry
Clements	L. T.	Duffy
Berrensen	L. G.	Mittinger
Crook	C.	Ackroyd
Long	R. G.	Budd
Weiderquist	R. T.	Deibel
Haddon	R. E.	Crate
McLaughlin	Q. B.	Ernst
West	L. H. B.	Chicknoski
Reese	R. H. B.	Marhefka
Amos	F. B.	Gebhardt

Referee—Victor Schwartz, Brown. Umpire—C. A. Reed. Field judge—Dean Watkeys. Linesman—D. W. Very, Penn State.

NAVY READY FOR COLGATE.

Ends Preparations With Brief Drill—Coaches Praise Tryon.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 2.—With a brief but snappy signal and formation drill and some kicking and passing this afternoon the Naval Academy football squad finished its preparations for the Colgate game tomorrow.

There is reason to believe that Colgate has pointed for tomorrow's game, and Navy scouts regard it as one of the strongest teams in the East and speak highly of its two noted backs, Tryon and Sanford. The former they regard as up to the standard of Harry Wilson of Penn State or Smythe of the Army as a running back.

It is probable that Swart, who has improved greatly in his work, will be used at right end for a portion of the time. McKee, quarterback, and Barchet, fullback, the Navy's most experienced backs, are in bad condition physically, and nearly every member of the first line-up has some disability, slight or fairly serious. McKee will not be able to get in togs for another week, but Barchet has been running through signals during the week and may get in the game at some period.

ARMY CORPS PLAYS TODAY.

Notables to See Third Area Team Meet Argonauts at Stadium.

Many officials of high rank from two countries will witness the football game at the Yankee Stadium this afternoon when the Argonauts of Canada meet the representatives of the Third Corps Area. Among the Canadian rooters will be Sir Harry Armstrong, K. B. E., Consul General at New York; the Hon. Donald McKinnon, Commissioner for Australia; W. L. Post, President of the British World War Veterans; Frederick Hull, Canadian Trade Commissioner at New York; Leslie Sutherland, President of the Canadian Club, and several other notables. On the American side will be Major Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, Major Gen. Muir and Brig. Gen. Weigle.

The Sixteenth Infantry Band also will be in attendance, while a battalion from Governors Island will go through a close order drill before the game.

The Third Army Corps team is made up nearly entirely of former West Point stars. Pat Timberlake, who will be at right halfback, caught the forward pass and scored the touchdown that beat the Navy in Philadelphia last year; Fritz Breidster, a guard, was captain of that Army team and was mentioned for All-American honors; White, end, played on West Point teams for three years; Knight and Storck, tackles, were also "A" men at the Military Academy; Greene, centre, won All-American honors when he captained the Army team in 1921, and Dodd, halfback, was one of the best defensive men the Army had last season.

Little is known of the Canadian team, but they come here hailed as a great aggregation which has specialized in the open game. Forward and lateral passes make up their strongest attack, and it is reported that they have combined the American game with English rugby, making a fast-moving combination.

More than 1,000 Toronto football fans will be at the Yankee Stadium today when the teams go into action at 2 o'clock.

Trainer Watson Declares Team Is in Good Shape for Contest Today.

CORNELL DRILLS IN SECRET

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 2.—The Cornell team, thirty-four strong, arrived here this morning on two special cars which will serve as their headquarters while they are in Hanover. They were accompanied by Moakley's cross country team, which will meet Hillman's men tomorrow morning.

Dobie had Hanover guessing this afternoon, because until after 6 o'clock it was not known whether he had held practice. He was supposed to use the secluded Memorial Field early this afternoon, before the Dartmouth-Brown freshmen game, but did not take advantage of the opportunity. It became known tonight that he had used a field some place on the Vermont side of the Connecticut river. Coach Hawley ran his team through the usual signal practice and then retired into the gymnasium, where he conducted a long discussion. He showed graphically the Dartmouth and Cornell plays.

Trainer Watson reported that his men are in better condition than they were for the Harvard game. The regulars are all in fine fettle and, with the exception of Ahlquist, second string fullback, there isn't a severe bruise or sprain in the Dartmouth camp.

The players know that tomorrow they will meet the stiffest opposition of the season. An added incentive to win the game will be that the contest will dedicate the new $275,000 athletic field and stadium.

The line-up:

DARTMOUTH.		CORNELL.
Bjerkman	L. E.	Henderson
Oberlander	L. T.	Kearney
Diehl	L. G.	Morris
Ellis	C.	McWilliams
Ashenback	R. G.	Trousdell

TIGERS EXPECT HARD GAME.

Swarthmore Has Scored on Princeton in All Recent Contests.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 2.—Princeton's football squad is promised a hard battle tomorow when the little Quakers from Swarthmore journey here for their annual tussle. Reports from the headquarters of the visitors indicate that they have the best team in years to throw into the fray.

The Swarthmore teams hold the unique record of crossing the Tigers' goal line in every contest since 1919, which is an unusual feat in so much as Princeton has had some of her greatest teams in that time. The two institutions have met five times, the Tigers winning each time.

Princeton's strongest team will take the field tomorrow, the only change in the line-up being at guard. Captain Snively will start there instead of in the backfield, where he has been playing all season.

The probable Princeton line-up follows:

Smith and Stout, ends; Howard and Emery, tackles; Mills and Snively, guards; L. Berger, centre; Dinsmore, quarterback; Beattie and Ewing, halfbacks, and Van Gerbig, fullback.

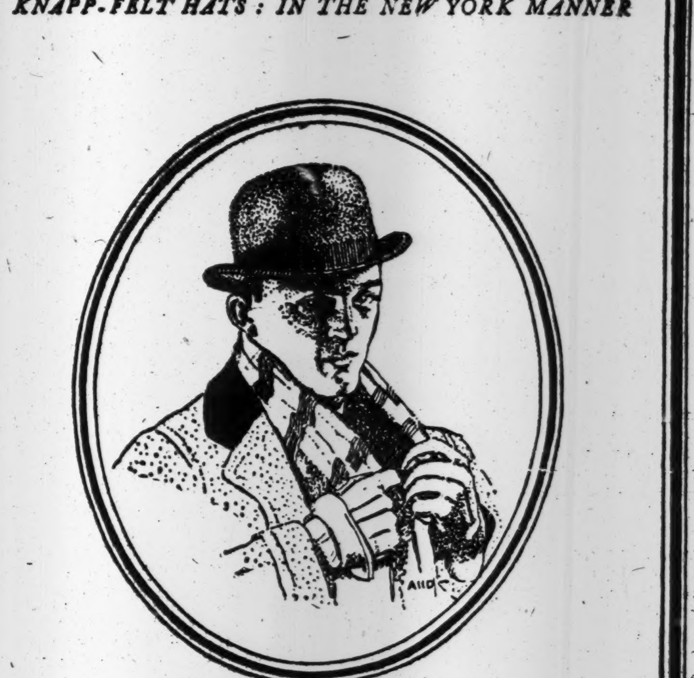
FORDHAM IN SHORT DRILL.

Will Scrimmage Today in Preparation for N. Y. U. Tuesday.

Frank Gargan gave his Fordham football team a short workout yesterday following the long practice of Thursday. The teams lined up for scrimmage, in which the men walked through the plays to be used against New York University next Tuesday. After this the freshmen were pitted against the varsity in a lively scrimmage. The varsity was always kept on the offensive and easily tore through the yearling eleven for repeated gains. The playing of Graham and Woerner featured the workout.

Smead, Fallon, Leary and Ryan kept out of the scrimmage and took part only in the light practice. Captain Lou Healey scrimmaged for the first time since the Boston College game, when his leg was injured. With Healey back in the line-up the team is expected to show an improved passing game. The team is slated to scrimmage today and will engaged in only a light workout on Monday.

KNAPP-FELT HATS : IN THE NEW YORK MANNER



The right derby on the right man

THERE are certain men who look better in a derby than in any other kind of hat. You may be one of them. One of our Knapp-Felt derbies is apt to work a startling and agreeable change in your appearance. They are of various types. The more conservative shapes are the kind older men like—but we also have some bowlers with a jaunty smartness in their lines that young fellows warm up to at once. Many are extremely light in weight, in the flexible self-conforming shape. Knapp-Felt Derbies, $6 to $20. Leeds Derbies, $5.

WOMEN PREPARING FOR SWIM SEASON

FIRST MEET ON NOV. 14

City A. C. to Open Indoor Campaign —18 Girls to Try for Mile Relay Record.

The Sports Committee of the Women's Swimming Association of New York held its annual Fall meeting at headquarters, 145 West Fifty-fifth Street, yesterday afternoon and outlined plans for the indoor season of competition. It was voted to conduct A. A. U. water carnivals each month from December to May, and co-operate also with various organizations in the city and neighborhood which have sought the assistance of the association in promoting water sports for women.

Among the latter is the City A. C., slated to open the season with a meet in its home pool Nov. 14, and an interesting addition to the program was made when it was decided to have eighteen of the W. S. A. girl swimmers engage in a one-mile relay test against time, to create a record for the event, seventeen covering 100 yards apiece, the last sixty yards.

The first open carnival under the direction of the W. S. A. will take place in the pool of the Harlem Y. W. H. A., Dec. 15, and A. A. U. sanction will be asked to feature the women's metropolitan senior championship at 220 yards free style, and 100 yards breast stroke. Another feature of this meet will be the appointment of a full staff of women officials.

The suggestion that the January carnival be staged at the municipal natatorium in West Sixtieth Street, to enable the public to attend free of charge, was voted upon favorably and the Secretary was instructed to apply to the authorities for the required permit, leaving to them the naming of the date. It also was decided to place on the month's card the metropolitan senior championship, at 100 yards free style.

It was deemed advisable, however, to postpone action on the rest of the season's schedule to avoid possible conflict of important fixtures. Work on the schedule will be resumed as soon as it is made known when and where the national indoor championships of 1924 are to be decided.

Miss Charlotte Epstein, chairman of the committee, was authorized to apply for sanction to hold in this city several senior and junior national championships as well as most of the metropolitan title tests. She also was empowered to make arrangements to send the club stars to any of the out-of-town championships in which they are thought able to compete.

The question of preparing candidates for the Olympic Games in Paris was discussed and it was agreed to list at all meets events that would tend to encourage the development of able contenders for the international fixtures in which the local girls have shown the least proficiency in the past.

DISCUSS BASKETBALL RULES

N. C. A. A., the Y. M. C. A. and A. A. U. Officially Interpret Laws.

More than one hundred basketball coaches, officials and players who are identified with the National College Athletic Association, the Young Men's Christian Association and the Amateur Athletic Union gathered at the Hotel Astor last night and engaged in a discussion of the changes in the rules which were adopted by the Joint Rules Committee representing the three organizations early in the Spring.

The major change providing that the free throw awarded for a personal foul must be made by the player against whom the foul is committed or in case of this player being injured, by a duly designated substitute, was thoroughly explained.

Another important change which came up for clear intrepretation was the clause dealing with the calling of time-out. The new rule provides that time-out may be declared at any time the ball is out of play or dead, as well as when the team requesting time-out holds possession of the ball. Considerable discussion arose as to how long the ball was officially out of play after it had gone out of bounds and it was agreed that the ball was officially dead until it had been tossed back intod the field of play.

A clearer interpretation was also given of the rule which provides for the awarding of two free throws when a player in possession of the ball is fouled. It was pointed out that this rule also applies to a player who is not only in the act of throwing the ball but that it applies until the player throwing the ball has assumed a normal position.

Mr. Irish, the paper adds, declines to divulge the price or the buyer for the present, but says he is satisfied, and that the horse will not leave England but will remain in the hands of his present trainer, Basil Jarvis. The three-year-old is said to be none the worse for his American adventure.

SHERRILL RETURNS FROM TRIP ABROAD

American Member on International Olympic Body Predicts Success for Games.

General Charles H. Sherrill of New York, one of the three American members on the International Olympic Commission, arrived here yesterday on board the Cunard liner Berengaria, after a seven months' tour of Europe in connection with the Olympic Games next year. During his stay abroad, General Sherrill visited England, France, Spain , Italy and the Scandanavian countries and, like other sportsmen who have visited Europe this year, he expressed the opinion that America will have a hard fight ahead of retain its athletic supremacy. He said he expected England and Finland to make an exceptionally strong showing and that both France and Sweden would be counted upon to win many points. He also reported that wherever he went in Europe he had found the highest enthusiasm and for this reason felt certain the games next year would be a tremendous success.

In commenting upon the rowing situation, General Sherrill stated that he had made every effort to have the original Olympic date set back and that before leaving France he had received assurances that America's request for a reasonable postponement would be complied with. It was, therefore, a surprise to him, he said, when he learned that the final decision of the International Committee only granted an extension of three days.

DARTMOUTH GETS STADIUM.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 2.—A new $275,000 athletic field and stadium was presented to Dartmouth College tonight by the committee of alumni who were in charge of the undertaking, which is to be a permanent memorial to the 112 Dartmouth men who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War. The ceremonies began at 7:30, when the Yankee Division Band of Boston and the Dartmouth College Band led a torchlight procession around the campus to the gymnasium, where the "Dartmouth Night" exercises were held.

The speakers at the meeting were Ernest Martin Hopkins, President of the college; Channing Cox, Governor of Massachusetts; Craven Lacock, Dean of the college, and Judge Nelson P. Brown of Everett, Mass.

The new athletic plant is four blocks square. It contains three football fields, two baseball diamonds, a quarter-mile cinder track, twenty-four tennis courts and a hockey rink.

STRIBLING MAY BE SIGNED.

Is to Be Alternate Man for the McTigue-Tunney Bout.

To provide against an emergency in the world's light-heavyweight championship bout in which Mike McTigue will risk his title against Gene Tunney, American champion, on Dec. 10, Matchmaker Frank Flournoy of Madison Square Garden is negotiating with Young Stribling, Georgia's schoolboy light-heavyweight, to act as substitute man. It is understood Stribling will sign a contract in which he will consent to meet either McTigue or Tunney on Dec. 10.

Under this arrangement the Garden plans to protect itself against the possibility of McTigue or Tunney being prevented because of injuhy or illness from going through with the scheduled bout. "Pa" Stribling, manager of his fighting son, admitted yesterday that such arrangements are under consideration and declared his readiness to sign for his son against either McTigue or Tunney, but added that nothing definite yet had been done in the situation.

Thanks, Mr. Gary!

THERE was a great deal more in the statement you made the other day than actually appeared on the surface.

The meaning we got from your message was that this was a time to be confident, not pessimistic; that actual industrial figures showed an advance, not a retreat; that employment conditions, finances and business activities all pointed to prosperity, and not depression.

You said, in effect, that this was a time to smile. You chased away certain mysterious glooms which have flitted about this country for a long time.

In our own business, figures show that we have made substantial gains—that our customers are increasing to a greater degree than at any other time in our history—and that, in all departments we are making most satisfactory advances.

We thank you, Mr. Gary—for your own conclusions exactly coincide with our own, and you have made plain, in a much more impressive way than we could, the actual condition of our country today.

RAILWAY RATES ON GRAIN.

The railways having refused to act upon President Coolidge's suggestion that rates should be lowered on export wheat, the Interstate Commerce Commission announces a hearing on grain rates generally. No doubt the condition of the wheat growers is worse than that of the general farm industry. But the regulation of freight rates was never designed to control prices, and is not adapted for that use. The idea behind regulation of rates is that they should be fair as between all classes of shippers, communities and commodities, and proportioned to cost and value of service. It is not practicable to make general schedules proportioned to the prices of innumerable products, and shifting with them.

Diplomacy might do more than rate reduction by removing discriminations against our flour exports. The trade complains of import duties on our flour of 100 to 300 per cent. The flour market runs the year round, but the wheat traffic is seasonal and fluctuates widely. Thus a wheat rate reduction would injure a leading industry. The railways need what they earn as much as the farmers need markets. There is no hostility to the farmer in thinking that rates should be regulated on broader principles than discriminating against others, and thus starting endless inequalities and injustices in a matter needing the highest impartiality.

FAREWELL TO LLOYD GEORGE.

The American tour of Mr. Lloyd George which ends today has been, judged by every surface test, an immense success. Wherever he has gone he has roused the keenest public interest. Invitations have showered upon him thicker than the leaves falling from our October trees. Vast audiences have hung upon his words, and have found him fully living up to the high reputation as an orator that preceded him. Doubtless he is too old a campaigner, too well versed in the pathetic fallacies of the crowd, to have misinterpreted the significance of the hundreds of thousands who have thronged in the United States to see and hear him. It is probable that he has in his composition a streak of that grim yet humorous perception of the realities which Oliver Cromwell had when he remarked amid the outpouring of the London populace as he rode past: "Even more of them would have come to see me hanged."

Beneath the superficial evidences of intense personal interest in him exhibited by Americans, Mr. Lloyd George must have been looking all the time for sentiments which are substantial and enduring. Upon these he has manifestly sought to play. If he had any "message" at all to bring to the people of this country, it was that of their common interest in the world today with the British Commonwealth. Unity of purpose between the two nations, and the desirability of their co-operation in the largest hopes and endeavors of civilization, have been the constant themes of his American addresses. If these were sometimes pitched in too warning and almost despairing a tone, latterly they have struck a more optimistic note. Even while Lloyd George was among us, the entire situation abroad, with its reflex in the United States, changed for the better. As he departs, he is warranted in bidding us all hope together as well as work together.

It cannot be forgotten that Lloyd George is, first of all, an Englishman and a politician. The effect of his American trip upon his prospects at home have been eagerly debated in the English press. His political enemies have accused him of seeking to recover abroad the prestige which he had lost in his own country, and by a sort of gigantic advertisement to bring himself prominently into public notice again. It has been scornfully said that in this way he sought like Canning by bringing in the New World to redress the balance of the Old—that is, to ride into favor once more on the strength of his resounding acclaim in America. All this is doubtless to do Mr. Lloyd George an injustice. Yet he will certainly go back to England alert to every political possibility that awaits him. It may be that he will find one big with promise in the reported determination of the Conservative Government to adopt squarely a policy of protection and to force an early general election on that issue. In that event Lloyd George might well be excused for crying out that the Lord had delivered the Philistines into his hands, and sallying forth once more to do great execution upon them as he did in the old days of the fight against free trade led by Joseph Chamberlain and Mr. Balfour.

EXAGGERATING THE LIMITATIONS.

Examination of the text of Mr. Hughes's note to Lord Curzon, and of M. Poincaré's comments thereupon, fails to disclose any great disagreement between the two Governments. Both place limitations upon the proposed committee. The American Secretary states that the committee is to be purely advisory. The French Premier says it shall not be empowered to bind the Reparation Commission nor the respective Governments. Both say that the committee shall be appointed by the Reparation Commission and shall report to that body. Mr. Hughes says that it shall be empowered to investigate Germany's capacity to pay, together with an appropriate plan of payment. M. Poincaré insists that it shall examine Germany's present capacity to pay, and the best methods of so doing. Mr. Hughes emphasizes the need of looking into Germany's fundamental recuperation. M. Poincaré asks that it examine the needed budgetary and currency reforms.

In all this there is but one real difference. M. Poincaré declares that the committee can only examine Germany's present capacity to pay. "Let "an examination be made of what "Germany can pay, now or in a short "space of time," says he.

> That is the task of the Reparation Commission, aided by the experts it may name. That the Reparation Commission fix new schedules of payments, that is the rôle given to it by the treaty. That it seek means to restore German finances and a better monetary situation of the Reich, that is its duty. But let no one ask it either to disavow the decisions it has taken on the total of our credit or tie up the future indefinitely.

It is true that in so saying he places the American Government in a somewhat embarrassing position. He emphasizes the similarity of restrictions placed by both Governments, but he says to Mr. Hughes, in effect: "Just "as you decline to permit a commit"tee to discuss the reduction of the "war debts owed to the United States, "you cannot blame me for refusing "to permit the discussion of a reduc"tion of the debts owed to France."

It is difficult to believe that this attitude is an insurmountable obstacle to the negotiations. Should the committee only be able to suggest workable plans for the four points made by M. Poincaré, it would contribute much toward a final settlement. These are, first, Germany's present capacity to pay; second, methods of paying; third, budget reforms; fourth, currency reforms. It is more than probable that in the course of the investigation there would be further concessions on both sides, permitting the suggestion of an all-embracing program. The proposed committee cannot be expected to reform Europe overnight. Its investigations can only mark a small advance toward a settlement. But they should at least prove a step in the right direction.

MR. MURPHY'S BRITISH JUDGES.

In the last days of the campaign the eminent clairvoyant whom Governor Smith calls the "editor-politician" has looked into the midst of things and seen them. Mr. Murphy's "pretended Democratic candidates for the bench" were selected by that sturdy Briton to "suit the British interests." Certain "Wall Street Re"publican leaders, who are notori"ously pro-British and well known to "be British financial agents and law"yers," are in favor of some of Mr. Murphy's candidates. How can anybody resist the clairvoyant question: "If Boss Murphy was helping the "British Government get what it "wanted in 1919, do you think he "would be above helping the British "Government now?" Surely, if Mr. Murphy "betrayed" Ireland in 1919, he is quite capable of doing it again. Indeed, it must be easier for him now than it was then. The clairvoyant has unveiled the infamous design. He says that Mr. Murphy "ought to "wear a British livery if he is going "to be the political agent of British "interests and stuff the highest courts "of the greatest city in the greatest "State of all America with Judges "that British interests can depend "upon."

Now that it has been revealed, it seems strange that everybody didn't see it before. Mr. Murphy's name shows clearly that he is of undiluted English stock. And look at the blasted Britishers on his judicial ticket! There is Justice Mahoney, who was appointed by that jovial Yorkshireman, "Al" Smith. Justice Gavegan's name smacks unmistakably of the roast beef of Old England. By some unexplained oversight, Mr. Gavegan is also a candidate on the ticket whose purity is guaranteed by the clairvoyant. Mr. Charles D. Donahue comes to us, or at least to the seer, straight out of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle; Mr. Edward J. Glennon, by the face of his name, from the heart of Sussex. Mr. Peter A. Hatting, while familiar with the German language, must be known to Mr. Murphy, if nobody else except the clairvoyant, as an Anglophile. How simple the mystery looks seen through by one powerful and penetrating eye!

Nevertheless, some close students of the editor-politician's psychology and habit will see in this appeal to "Irish-"American folks to go to the polls "next Tuesday and knock out this "British trick" a scarcely veiled confession that the jig is up. "One last "monstrous whopper and mystifica"tion," we seem to hear the illustrious medium say; "as we can't do "anything else, let's have some fun "and die happy." So the voters can renew, unperturbed, the task of selecting the best names on both tickets, "British" and Koenig-Hearstish. The men and women selected as the vehicles of this curious humor, though instant to apprehend it, may be something less than grateful to the humorist.

THE PAY OF POLICE AND FIREMEN.

Those who oppose putting to popular vote in this city the question of higher salaries for policemen and the members of the Fire Department are accused by some of hostility to those public servants. This is by no means a justifiable inference. Nor is there implied any reproach to the police force and the firemen for seeking by this method to get what they believe to be their just deserts. They cannot, like a labor union, strike to enforce their demands. They have secured the passage at Albany of bills in their favor, only to see the measures vetoed by the city authorities. Their appeals to the Board of Estimate have been rejected. Can they be blamed for grasping at what may seem to them the last resort of a referendum?

The blame in reality attaches to the City Government. It has evaded its duty in this matter. If there was a good case for advancing the pay of the police and the firemen, it should have been sustained by the municipal authorities; if not, it should have been rejected and the reasons publicly stated. But to take refuge in the decision of the voters at a city election is at once a dodging of responsibility, the setting of a bad precedent, and a possible prejudicing of the rights of these employes of the city.

Suppose the vote next Tuesday should be adverse to the proposed increase of pay—would that be conclusive against the police and firemen? It ought not to be. The obligation resting upon the competent authorities to look into the merits of the request for higher salaries would remain just what it was before the vote. If the men can make out a convincing argument to show that their rate of compensation has not at all kept pace with the advance in the cost of living, they are entitled to a hearing and to action. The merits of their plea ought to be kept jealously apart from the vicious method adopted to ask the people to pass upon it. It is so important to stop this bad system in its very beginnings that thousands of citizens who wish full justice done to the Police Department and the firemen intend to vote "No" on the question when election day comes. This will not denote opposition to the higher salaries so much as dislike of the shirking of duty by the city authorities. After the latter have been rebuked for the shift by which they sought to escape deciding under their own legal authority, it will be in order to present the case anew, in the proper manner, and strictly on its merits.

THE ONLY TEST.

It is a fair agreement that has been made by the representatives of all parties not to challenge new voters whose eligibility, otherwise unquestioned, has been in doubt simply because of the late and varying decisions of the courts as to how literacy was to be determined. But now that the Court of Appeals has made a decision that is final, the election authorities should at once take steps to notify all prospective new voters in next year's elections as to the only way of qualifying. This is by procuring certificates from the educational authorities.

It will be an obligation then, on their part, under the direction of the State Board of Regents, to make early provision for the tests on which these certificates are based, and then to provide as fully as possible for giving instruction in night school classes and in home classes for women that will enable those who are not yet able to pass the tests to prepare themselves for later examination.

It is a wholesome law, and now that it is in our statute books, with the highest court upholding it, should stay there. Its permanency will be insured not only by the efficacy of the examinations themselves in determining literacy, but also by the prompt, extensive and convenient provision for the tests. Every schoolhouse in the State should be a centre for notification and preparation. It is a notable step in the history of American education. Not only is literacy made a prerequisite for voting. Other States have made such a requirement. But the school becomes in a new sense, under this law, the vestibule to citizenship. It becomes the only way to the ballot box.

RACE AGAIN, CAPTAIN WALTERS.

Believing that he won the race with Columbia on Thursday "fair and square," and that the International Committee gave it to the American schooner on the raising of a hair-splitting technicality, Captain Angus Walters in high dudgeon sailed the Bluenose away to the home port of Lunenburg. He vows that he will race no more this year. Unless he can be reasoned with, the annual contest for the Fishermen's Trophy, which was to do so much for the North Atlantic deep-sea fisheries, may fall into abeyance. Last year, under what he considered to be as great a provocation, Captain Clayton Morrisey of the Gloucester schooner Henry Ford turned his back on the trophy, but was persuaded to race again, losing finally to the Bluenose. Cannot Captain Angus Walters be mollified by that sportsmanlike precedent, and for the honor of Canada return to the starting point to prove anew his faith in the speed of his handsome boat?

No doubt a strain was put upon the self-control of Captain Angus Walters and his crew by the Sailing Committee's decision to give a race which the Bluenose had won by a margin of 2 minutes 45 seconds to the Columbia, but rules are rules. The Premier of Nova Scotia hit the nail on the head when he observed at the "farewell" banquet to the Americans that an umpire's decision must be respected, "no matter whose bows are stove." The fact that Captain Angus did not see the shoals buoy which he failed to pass to seaward on the first leg of the race was not a palliation of his error. We may suppose that in the ardor of the moment he forgot the new rule made to avoid such a tangle of shrouds as occurred in a previous race, when the rival skippers were jockeying for the windward berth.

The shoals buoy was not a turning mark, so it might seem to be a little thing. But there was the rule! As an experienced sailing master, Captain Angus manoeuvred for an advantage in running in toward the land, though the rule went clean out of his head and he saw no buoy at all. It is salutary to have the rules heeded by these racing mariners who are so scornful of the art of yachting with its sea-lawyer conditions. Rules when lived up to make victory all the sweeter and mitigate defeat. Besides, they quiet controversy, which rankles under pilot coats when races are not sailed according to expectation. Landsmen may see comedy in the mishaps of the Fishermen's Trophy series, as when two schooners thrashed on to a finish after a recall by the judges, but Gloucester and Lunenburg take their rivalry hard. The fishermen should be friends on the Banks and hail-fellow-well-met in home ports. Race Columbia again, Captain Walters!

THE LOW-WATER MARK.

The German mark certainly touched bottom by the decision of the Swiss authorities that it is absolutely good for nothing. The Swiss exchanges have refused to deal in it since it sank to a hundred billion to the dollar, so some Swiss interests conceived the idea that it was now literally true, as had so often been said metaphorically, that the mark was nothing but waste paper. Consequently, they bought up a load of this waste paper—worth, according to the values printed on it, some fifteen billion marks—for about forty Swiss centimes.

Yet customs officers, true to the letter of the law, stopped it at the frontier, and a court duly held that it was an inadmissible import, under the law forbidding the bringing of foreign currencies into the country. People who buy marks for money find they are only waste paper; people who buy them for waste paper discover that legally they are still money, though money that is no good to anybody. It is hard to see how a currency could be more worthless than that.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Feminine Logic and Other.

Somebody said or wrote the other day, "God did not give me the strength to argue with a woman!" The implication was clear—women can not or will not argue according to the rules.

As likely as not—the chances are about even—the exclamation was made by a man just after he had been beaten in a controversy with a woman, and to mitigate the pain of his defeat he chose to deny to her whole sex all understanding of logic. It is a "protective mechanism" that men, when hard pressed, have used innumerable times, not always against women. It has served as well against men.

Quite true is it, however, that there are women as well as men who, when fault is found with them for doing or saying this, that or the other thing, seek to evade consequences by changing the subject—by raising a new issue. A brilliant example of this was presented in the letter from Miss Elisabeth Marbury, printed on this page yesterday.

At the meeting held in the Town Hall to praise the New York police and denounce their critics Miss Marbury made a speech in the course of which she declared that the "brave deeds" of policemen were the objects of scorn in New York newspaper offices as not making "copy" worth printing. That statement was gently reprehended by The Times as without justification in newspaper history.

In rejoinder what did Miss Marbury write? A retraction of her charge or a proof of its accuracy? Not at all. Apparently she forgot both what she had said and what The Times had said, and turned sternly to the quite different question whether the metropolitan press devoted as much space to "brave deeds and noble achievements" in general as it does to "notorious scandals and sensational crimes," and she hazarded the guess that it did not. She calmly assumed that a paper which ignored scandals and crimes—the revelations as to the Veterans' Bureau, for instance—would have room, now lacking, for "the authentic paragraphing of edifying actions as performed by the citizens of our city, gleaned from even the humblest walks of life." Perhaps; but what has that to do with the charge that when the New York police earn praise they do not get it from the New York papers?

News Happenings and All the Others.

What critics of newspapers seemingly never will learn is that far from all commendable conduct is news, while reprehensible conduct almost invariably is, and so is regarded by everybody.

What do these fault-finders do as they pass along the street? Do they fix admiring and exclamatory attention on the good citizen going quietly about his daily business? Do they expect to see him praised daily in the papers for his honesty and industry? And is it the bridge over which they and other people pass safely that makes news for them, or the bridge that falls with results more or less calamitous?

An editor of other days once wrote that he felt justified in printing in his paper anything that God allowed to happen. That was going far—further than that editor or any other ever did—but there was an idea in it that should give thought to the people who pretend the desire to find in their papers nothing that they can call "unpleasant."

As it chances, many unpleasant things are of great importance, and of like importance is it that they should have publicity, that being to a considerable degree what legal punishments are expected to be—punitive, deterrent and reformative. That there is any newspaper ban on good deeds and brave ones is believed only by those who would believe anything that gave them an opportunity to teach other people their business or profession.

Silence Is Not Heroic.

That newspapers sometimes fail to do their duty is only to say that they are the products of erring and fallible mortals, but these failures always attract attention in which an element of surprise mingles with the indignation. That would not be the case if their general aspirations were not laudable.

In Lowell Mellett's Atlantic article on the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana he makes a charge which will bring deserved humiliation on the newspapers of that State unless they can refute it. He says that for fear of offending the Klansmen, with loss of circulation and advertising, they either are friendly to the nefarious organization or else print nothing about it.

Probably this is a generalization from inadequate data, but it is recalled that an Indiana journalist recently here on a visit, when questioned as to what position his paper took in regard to the Klan, said that he printed neither news about it nor editorial comment on its proceedings. When told that his course was not exactly brave, he replied that, on the contrary, it was nearly or quite heroic, for there was not a little danger for an Indiana paper, nowadays, in not giving vigorous support to Klansmen and Klan ideas, and this he had not done and would not do, whatever happened to him or his paper.

Not a Matter of Weight, but of Forces.

A foreign savant was credited the other day with having discovered that ships going east weigh less than ships going west. The "discovery" could have been made by any reader of elementary books on physics, for something much like it is in them all, the difference being that the books state correctly what the savant stated incorrectly—if he said what he was quoted as having said. The chances are that he was misunderstood.

Ships weigh the same, whatever the direction of their journeys; that is, the force that tends to draw them toward the centre of the earth remains unchanged. What is true, however, is that when their course is eastward another force is brought into effective play—the centrifugal tendency of any object on a whirling globe is able to work against, and partly to neutralize, the force of gravity.

The amount of effect thus produced is variable, depending on the ship's speed, and, as that at best is minute in comparison with the motion of the earth's surface, the effect also is small. But what is true of ships on the sea is also true of men and animals on land. The pedestrian would save a little strength while walking eastward, and horses would weigh a little less and therefore could go a little faster if they raced in that direction, instead of westward, as did Zev and Papyrus.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Those newspapers which try intelligently to point out the evil of a bonus and declare that they are in favor of helpful legislation for the disabled are doing the country a real service. There are thousands of men who lost their health in the service. These men are practically wards of the Government. Let Congress turn its attention to these men who are actually in need and deserving of relief.

"FROM LIFE."

We wondered if she knew! How could it be
That, knowing, she could go upon her way
  So calmly and so quietly each day?
How could she, with such sweet serenity,
Smile on the other woman—tenderly
  Call him by name, with him be softly gay?
  But—if she guessed or knew, we could not say!
As some wear masks, she wore—a radiancy!

"Heart failure," said the doctors—to explain
Her sudden passing, and, "She felt no pain"!
"Thank God she went so peacefully!"
  we said.
They keep their counsels well—the tactful dead!
As one might go, who gracefully withdrew—
She went from life. . . . We wondered if she knew!

ROSELLE MERCIER MONTGOMERY.

BIJUR AND GAVEGAN.

Voters Should Mark Their Ballots for the Joint Nominees.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We venture to urge upon you the importance of some pointed editorial comment between now and election day that will direct the attention of the voters to the candidacy of Supreme Court Justices Nathan Bijur and Edward J. Gavegan.

Past experience has shown that where judicial candidates are nominated by both the major parties a large percentage of the voters take it for granted that their election is thereby assured and that it is only necessary to indicate on the ballot their choice among the candidates who are not thus jointly nominated.

Every voter should be made to understand that among all the candidates the ten nominees receiving the highest number of votes will be elected, and that no effect can be given to a joint nomination of both parties unless the voters take the trouble to vote for such nominees.

One of the impelling reasons why both the bar associations urged the renomination of Justices Bijur and Gavegan by both parties was that a principle is involved in retaining in office Justices who have satisfactorily served the public during the elective term of fourteen years. This principle deserves public support and would be greatly weakened if a large number of the voters, whether due to ignorance and indifference or to a feeling that their votes were not actually needed to insure the election of Justices Bijur and Gavegan, failed to vote for them. The only effective way in which the voters can show their approval of the principle of retaining in office faithful Judges who have satisfactorily performed their duties for fourteen years is by so marking their ballots that not only the nomination but the election of these candidates shall be made unanimous.

EXPORT OF CAPITAL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It was a privilege to hear the speech of Julius H. Barnes, President of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, at the luncheon of the American Manufacturers and Exporters' Association yesterday, on the occasion of its annual convention. It was a most lucid, fundamental and accurate review of the world's ills, as well as of the causes for this country's prosperity and wealth.

Mr. Barnes also developed a justifiedly optimistic view of the more distant future of America's world trade. The soundness and saneness of his prophetic vision were marred by only one weakness. He stated that, following all the laws of economics, Europe would eventually overcome her difficulties and reestablish herself economically, financially and morally, and that the European nations would once more export their capital for the development of the resources and industries of less advanced countries, and that the industries of the United States would benefit greatly thereby, through the opening up of still greater export markets.

But why should this, the greatest and wealthiest country on earth, await and be dependent upon the recovery of Europe to attain this desirable end? Are not the business men of this country as far-sighted and intelligent as those of Europe?

With one-half to two-thirds of the world's gold in this country, is it not logical that the United States should export some of this capital in order to develop backward countries and reap the benefit of these increased export markets herself more fully and much sooner?

Why wait for the recuperation of our most relentless competitors to skim the cream of this business and leave the dregs to this country?

Such an opportunity as the present will probably never come again.

ALBERT KAPTEYN.

New York, Oct. 27, 1923.

Mr. Millard's Candidacy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Millard was graduated from Columbia College in 1894 and from New York Law School in 1898. For nineteen years he was in the office of the Corporation Counsel of the City of New York and is now an Assistant United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York. He is one of those competent men whose value to the public service is such that they are retained in office whether the Administration be Republican or Democratic. Such men make the very best type of Judge.

I can testify of my own knowledge to Mr. Millard's ability and high sense of public duty, and I esteem it an honor to have been asked to serve as Chairman of his committee. It goes without saying that the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and the New York County Lawyers' Association have approved Mr. Millard as fit to discharge the duties of a Justice of the Supreme Court.

WILLIAM M. CHADBOURNE.

Dry Territory in Wet States.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Again Adolphus Busch of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Company has written to the President of the United States. The burden of this last epistle is that 50,000,000 people live in the fifteen States which had not yet adopted State prohibition at the time of the enactment of the Federal amendment. He assumes that these 50,000,000 people are opposed to prohibition. Evidently Mr. Busch is uninformed about the number of townships dry by local option in these fifteen so-called wet States.

In nine of them, namely, Delaware, Kentucky, Louisiana, Minnesota, Missouri, Vermont, Illinois, Maryland and Wisconsin, there were so many dry townships that 53 per cent. of the people were living in no-license territory before prohibition was adopted.

Mr. Busch's attention is called to his own State of Missouri, where more than half of the people lived in no-license territory at the time of the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Subway Under the Park.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Relative to the proposition to construct a subway through Central Park, there is a relevant and material point to which the writer has seen no reference in the various articles which have appeared in The Times.

While the art of subway building in New York City has been developed to such an extent that serious accidents to life and property are comparatively of rare occurrence, nevertheless potential hazards exist in a high degree from end to end of the work. This fact, I believe, is obvious and is accepted.

Contracts for subway construction provide, in effect, that "the work must be executed with the highest degree of safety to life and property." This, of course, is binding on the contractor, but would the city be doing its part toward carrying on the work "with the highest degree of safety to life and property" if, for altruistic reasons only, construction was forced into a busy thoroughfare when it might go into an open and unused space?

WALDO G. BRIGGS.

Information for Voters

I.—The Amendments to the Constitution

NUMBER ONE. This is an amendment to get around the existing constitutional provision which forbids the voting of public funds for the private use of any individual or class. The intent is to make legal the appropriation of $45,000,000 as a bonus to ex-service men, to be granted indiscriminately. The objection thus has been summarized: "Everything for the disabled, nothing for the able-bodied." VOTE NO

NUMBER TWO. This is the so-called home rule amendment. It would prohibit the Legislature from dealing with municipal affairs except by general laws. No existing charter or law or contract would be affected, and the amendment is not to apply to the administration of the public schools. The aim seems commendable, though the practical effect remains in doubt. VOTE YES

NUMBER THREE. This amendment would open the forest reserve to the development of hydro-electric power. The general fear is that, however carefully the plan may be safeguarded, it is unnecessary and would be a dangerous precedent. VOTE NO

NUMBER FOUR. This amendment is understood only by taxation experts and even they differ in regard to its construction. The purpose is to leave the debt limitation of a city or county unaffected by the repeal of franchise taxes, heretofore put under the head of real estate. Some of those who favor the general plan are convinced that the amendment is badly drawn. With such serious doubts raised, it is better not to tinker with the Constitution as it stands. VOTE NO

NUMBER FIVE. This is an amendment to extend the law respecting absentee voters to the inmates of a soldiers' or sailors' home. The plan is equitable and unobjectionable. VOTE YES

II.—The Referendums

PROPOSITION NUMBER ONE. This is a referendum on the proposal to spend $50,000,000 over a period of years in enlarging and improving the facilities of the State hospitals for the insane and defective. Every argument of humanity and of civic self-respect favors it. VOTE YES

QUESTION NUMBER ONE. This submits to the voters of this city the question of increasing the pay of policemen and firemen. It is a matter now within the discretion and power of the city authorities. They should decide it without trying to take shelter behind a popular vote. VOTE NO

III.—The Judges

Ten Judges of the Supreme Court are to be elected in this district. The voter will have to make his selection among the twenty names on the two tickets, Democratic and Republican. The choice should be determined absolutely on non-partisan grounds. Reelection of sitting Judges who have served satisfactorily should be a cardinal principle in maintaining the independence of the judiciary. It is recognized in the nomination by both parties of Justices Bijur and Gavegan. It should also have been recognized in the case of Judge Proskauer and Judge Mahoney. All four of these Judges now on the bench should be kept there. On the Republican ticket appears the name of Mr. Robert McCurdy Marsh, who had a brief service as Judge by appointment, is eminently fit for the office, and should be voted for. One of the Democratic nominees, Mr. E. P. Ingraham, comes of a judicial family, and his candidacy is favored by many members of the Bar who know him.

Thus six names are indicated. A distinct choice of the other four is difficult to make. Voters will do their own picking, but ought to select their preferences without partisan bias from among the following: Herbert R. Limburg, William J. Millard, Edward J. Glennon, Frederick W. Spiegelberg, S. A. Cotillo, Aaron J. Levy, John J. Freschi and Gustave Hartman.

WOMAN'S LEAGUE ACTS TO SAVE PARK

TO PROTEST BY PETITION

Meeting Also Goes on Record Against Opening of Forest Reserve to Power Companies.

Resolutions in regard to two important problems were adopted by the Woman's League for the Protection of Riverside Park at a meeting held yesterday at the home of one of its charter members, Mrs. William R. Stewart of 125 Riverside Drive. The league went on record in opposition to the proposed encroachment of Central Park by the new west side subway, and it denounced the opening of the forest reserve to the development of hydro-electric power as an attempt to steal the State lands for private uses.

On the possible invasion of Central Park by the new subway Mrs. John Clapperton Kerr, President of the league, pointed out that the organization was opposed to the plan because the construction of such a subway would interfere for several years with the use of the western part of the park, that it would destroy trees and make the landscape unsightly and that the ground could be returned to its original condition only at great expense. Mrs. J. W. Thompson said that in her experience as a social worker throughout the city she had discovered that the mass of the people were opposed to any destruction of their playground in Central Park and she urged the circulation of petitions that would allow the people to protest against it.

Mrs. Kerr also stated that the part of Union Square used for the erection of the arch of triumph at the conclusion of the World War, had never been restored to its former state, but was at present being used for parking space for automobiles. The same situation, she added, had resulted at Madison Square, where a grand stand had been erected for the parades of the homecoming soldiers. Mrs. Kerr remarked that this slicing down of park property was indicative of what might happen in the event of subway construction under the western portion of Central Park. She stated that New York had the least per capita park space of any city in the country, and that any move to decrease the supply of needed recreation places should be halted at once.

Edward E. Hall, Secretary of the Committee to Prevent Exploitation of the Adirondacks, told the meeting that proposed constitutional amendment No. 3 would set a dangerous precedent for forest reserve lands throughout the country if it were passed, allowing certain power interests the opportunity to secure a dangerous foothold on State properties, which would lead eventually to a monopoly on hydro-electric power rights. He also said that the amendment was unnecessary, as there was no need of granting rights for power plants in forest reserve lands when practically all the principal rivers were available as sources of power.

The Washington Heights Taxpayers' Association announced yesterday that it had submitted to the Transit Commission and the Board of Estimate an alternate plan to the routing through Central Park of the Washington Heights extension of the B.-M. T. subway.

The new plan provides for the construction of a double-deck subway under the east side of Central Park West. It probably would result in denuding Central Park West of 600 elm trees, but it meets with the favor of Park Commissioner Francis D. Gallatin, who says that the elms already are doomed by the exhaustion of the soil and by their age. The association has worked out a scheme, according to Commissioner Gallatin, which probably would enable the Park Department to replace at minimum cost the dying elms and to "extend Central Park to the west, over the stone wall." This could be done, according to Commissioner Gallatin, by planting the wall with ivy, by laying turf and planting shrubs outside the wall, and by a rearrangement of the park benches west of the wall so that Central Park West would have the same appearance as Central Park itself.

The double-deck subway advocated by the association, according to Reginald Pelham Bolton, secretary, has been discussed with the engineers of the Transit Commission and the Board of Estimate. The engineers left Mr. Bolton with the impression that they saw merit in it. The idea was worked out, according to Mr. Bolton, by George C. Wheeler. Discussing the proposed plan, Mr. Bolton said:

"The subway proposed would be of the double-deck type, the two express tracks below the local tracks, a form already adopted on the Lexington Avenue system. The total width would not exceed thirty-five feet, thus extending about eight feet under the roadway.

"The association has furnished sectional plans showing the proposed relation of the subway, the roadway and the sidewalk, and also the position of the water mains, some of which are embedded about four and one-half feet below the sidewalk. These mains are not continuous, and would form no difficult problem below Ninety-seventh Street. North of that street the line of the subway would diverge westward to the centre of the avenue, in line with the centre of upper Eighth Avenue, in which it would proceed from 110th Street to St. Nicholas Avenue."

LAUDS LEAGUE ASSEMBLY.

Jusserand Calls Results of Geneva Sessions Gratifying.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 2.—Jules J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, on landing from the George Washington today commented on the sessions of the League of Nations Assembly at Geneva.

"It is remarkable," he said, "that the League has been able to function as well as it has, in view of the obstacles placed in its path. The members of the League Assembly are sincere men who are making every effort to arrive at the end for which the League was formed.

"When one stops to consider that the League idea is centuries old and that the present Assembly is the first realization of the hope of all these years, it may be said that the results thus far accomplished are gratifying. With the unsettled conditions in Europe and the strife that has existed between nations, adjustment has not been easy to arrive at.

"I believe that things are bound to work out well for all concerned with the help of Heaven, but who can tell when it will come about! You in America must decide."

The Ambassador started for Washington by way of Boston.

COUNTESS BARS REPORTERS

Lady Warwick Objects to Treatment of Her Political Campaign.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Countess of Warwick, who is seeking a Labor seat in the House of Commons, has issued a letter "to the Gentleman of the Press," warning them that it is useless to interview her because the Sunday newspapers treated her first utterances frivolously, printing "a few slight words of piffle," while all the solid principles of her Labor platform were ignored.

The Countess tells the reporters that she desires to save them the trouble of coming near her, that she needs no publicity, and that she is satisfied with the Labor paper, The Daily Hearld, which reports faithfully the speeches of all Labor candidates.

"The press of England," says her letter, "consists of a tiny group of rich men who have bought it up. Their politics are opposed to ours, and any statements made by a Labor candidate would be adapted to suit their views."

MANY BIDS FOR ANTIQUES.

Two George Washington Chairs in Nolen Collection Go for $700.

Two mahogany chairs, once the property of George Washington, sold for $700 yesterday at the Anderson Galleries, where the sale of the William Whiting Nolen collection of American antiques has been in progress during the week. Individual affidavits attested that the chairs, of Chippendale period, had been the property of the first President.

Another item in the collection, which attracted interest because of historic association, was a dressing case once the property of Paul Revere. This small chest brought a bid of $150. The sale will end today when plated ware and china, early furniture and clocks will be sold to the highest bidder.

REICH ASKS BAVARIA ABOUT TROOP MOVES

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company. Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—One of the last official acts of Wilhelm Sollmann, Federal Minister of the Interior, who resigned today from the Cabinet with his two Socialist colleagues, Gustav Radbruch, Justice, and Robert Schmidt, Reconstruction, was to send a dispatch to Premier von Knilling of Bavaria demanding an explanation of the concentration of troops on the Bavarian frontier. It read:

"The Prussian and Thuringian State Governments have protested sharply to me against irregualr troop concentrations on the north Bavarian border. Relatively important troop formations heavily armed and having artillery have been officially ascertained. Official reports talk of Thuringian border having been crossed and Thuringian police fired on.

"The Prussian and Thuringian Governments, anxious over the menace to their States, demand the immediate protection of the Reich. There is great uneasiness throughout Central Germany regarding the military events in North Bavaria. In the Reich's interest I request immediate information regarding these irregular armaments in North Bavaria and the measures taken by the Bavarian Government against this grave internal danger."

Firing began on the Bavarian-Thuringian border today. Bavarian irregulars massed on the Thuringian border have been indulging in practice firing and target practice more and more turned in the direction of the Thuringian border just across which Thuringian State police are massed.

In the early morning hours patrols of Bavarian irregulars turned live practice rifle fire on a Thuringian police outpost near Sonneberg, Thuringia's famous toy town. The police did not answer the fire.

Sentences of fifteen days each in the workhouse were imposed on Mrs. Amelia Curtin and her daughter, Mrs. Violet Alexander, 25 years old, both of 522 West 161st Street, for the theft of dresses worth $32 from Macy's.

Others sentenced to jail or fined were Mary and Josephine Zayos, who said they lived at 121 West Ninetieth Street; Mrs. Annie Lezinsky of Jersey City and Mrs. Marie Shultz of 37 Catharine Street. Mrs. Edith Walsh of 316 West Twenty-third Street had been in the Tombs eighteen days when she received a suspended sentence for the theft of a hat worth $9.50 from Lord & Taylor's. A detective told the court that Mrs. Walsh had been under observation for two years.

MRS. M. B. SHAW PAYS FINE.

Also Apologizes in Court to Policeman She Called "Silly Ass."

Mrs. Marion B. Shaw of 55 West Fifty-fifth Street, who had a Summer home at Southampton, L. I., last season, was fined $25 in Justice Johnson's court in Patchogue, L. I., yesterday when she pleaded guilty to calling Motorcycle Policeman Preston "a silly ass." Mrs. Shaw appeared in court for the first time since last September, when she received three summonses for speeding and one for disorderly conduct. She was arraigned on the latter charge yesterday.

She apologized to the policeman in court yesterday in the presence of a large gathering of villagers and shook hands with him to the satisfaction of the policeman, the judge and all the onlookers. Justice Johnson thereupon declared that her action was "a victory for the law."

SAYS FALL ASKED SHIFT OF OFFICERS

Commander Stuart Implies Denby Ordered Transfers for Fight on Oil Leases.

SAID POLICY HIT SERVICE

Senate Investigators of Teapot Dome Will Call Secretary of Navy for Explanation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Commander Harry Allen Stuart of the navy testified today before the Senate committee investigating the Teapot Dome lease that Former Secretary Fall had demanded his transfer, and that of his associate on naval oil reserves, from Washington because he, Commander Stuart, had objected to the navy transferring its reserves to the Interior Department.

The naval officer's testimony almost directly, certainly by inference, charged that he and his colleague, Commander John F. Shafroth Jr., had stood in the way of the Secretary of the Navy acceding to Mr. Fall's demands that the navy give up the California reserves and permit them to be leased to private concerns.

Members of the committee, who did not press the witness, were surprised at the intimation in his testimony, and, following the hearing, said that if Commander Stuart's testimony were upheld it placed his chief in a position that might require some explanation.

Commander Stuart told the committee that he had been in charge of the naval oil reserves from early in 1918 until April 5, 1922, at which time Secretary Fall became active in inducing the navy to give up the reserves and consent to their lease to private companies. The officer said that he had always maintained that the navy should hold the reserves, and last year was more determined than ever that his position was right, because the navy was using more oil for fuel and, without big reserves, might find itself at the mercy of some foreign power during a war.

The witness said that he and Commander Shafroth would not retreat from their position during the conferences which were held by Secretary Denby and Mr. Fall over the proposal of the latter that the navy give up, not only the California reserve, but the Tea Pot Dome reserve. Then it was, he said, that Mr. Fall insisted that he and his colleague be detached from their Washington assignments. The officer said that he was surprised that the demand was made, and could explain it on no other grounds than their opposition to Mr. Fall's plans.

Commander Stuart further testified that while he had been in charge of the naval reserves he had not been consulted by Secretary Denby when the transfer was concluded. Several times during the brief period in which he was before the committee he said he believed that Mr. Fall had sought his transfer chiefly because of his objections. He said he did not have any knowledge that Secretary Fall intended to lease Tea Pot Dome to Harry F. Sinclair.

The testimony created quite a sensation in naval circles. Some naval officers said tonight that unless Commander Stuart could uphold his testimony in every way, he was in a position to face a court-martial. Secretary Denby will be called later by the committee to deal with Commander Stuart's testimony. Democratic members of the committee say that the Commander has placed his chief 'n a very unfavorable light.

Secretary Denby tonight declined to comment upon the testimony of Commander Stuart. The Cabinet officer replied to a question sent through his secretary that he had "no statement to make regarding the oil investigation supplementing that already made on the stand."

STONEHAM IN STOCK SUIT.

Court Rules He Must Defend Action for $150,000 Claim.

Charles A. Stoneham must defend a suit brought against him to recover stock of the Stanton Oil Company, having a face value of $150,000, by a decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, yesterday. The suit, brought by Howard Wood, a receiver of the company, was dismissed in the lower court on the ground that the complaint did not state a cause of action. The stock was issued in the name of Del Walker, but, it is alleged, never was delivered to him.

The brokerage firm of W. L. Darnell & Co. made a claim against the corporation, which was disputed, and it is alleged that thereafter the stock was delivered to the Darnell company without authority, and pledged with Stoneham to secure a debt.

The court finds that the allegations are sufficient to require an answer from Stoneham.

TWO ROADS RAISE WAGES.

Staten Island Rapid Transit and Northern Pacific Act.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Officials of two railroads today announced to the Railroad Labor Board the voluntary granting of wage increases to employes as a result of conferences with union heads.

The Staten Island Rapid Transit Railway Company, operated by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, under the new scale will give to foremen, sub-foremen and other electrical supervisors an hourly increase of 2½ cents. Clerks in the service two years or more get an increase of 2½ cents an hour, and janitors, mail clerks, freight handlers and others similarly employed 1 cent an hour.

Vice President Repelge of the Northern Pacific announced that, effective Oct. 16, that road grants a monthly increase of $2.40 to stationary engineers and firemen. An increase of 2 cents per hour was given to the fire builders and cleaners, while hostler helpers and certain classes of common labor received 1 cent an hour more.

'THE JOLLY TAILORS' LIKED.

Bores Thomashefsky Plays the Violin in His New Operetta.

"The Jolly Tailors," an operetta in three acts by Boris Thomashefsky and Joseph Cherniavsky, last night succeeded "Three Little Business Men" as the second attraction of the Yiddish season at Thomashefsky's Broadway Yiddish Theatre, formerly the Bayes. The new piece was greeted with every sign of approval by an enthusiastic audience, which found the various elements of plot and score completely to its liking.

Mr. Thomashefsky appeared at the head of his company as Yosele, a vagrant violinist, and revealed, among other things, an unsuspected ability to play the violin as part of his general equipment. Ludwig Satz was the third and most important of the jolly tailors, who gave the play its name.

Regina Zuckerberg was a handsome and sympathetic mother of what, even in the rural Russian village in which the scene was laid, was all too obviously a flapper. The flapper herself, Pola Carter, was vivacious and gracefully agile. Ella Troy, a comparative newcomer to the Yiddish stage, danced with a pert enthusiasm.

GERMAN GRAPE CURES BEREFT OF PATIENTS

Dyspeptics, Unable to Reach Bingen-on-Rhine, Go to Swiss Resorts.

BINGEN-ON-RHINE, Nov. 2.—Boppard, Bingen, Geisenheim and Rudesheim lack their usual quota of grapecurists this season, as transportation is too difficult. Consequently the obese, the gouty, the neurasthenic and the dyspeptic who ordinarily come to the Rhine from all parts of the world to go on an exclusive grape diet for several weeks, have gone to Lake Constance, to Lake Geneva or to Bozen in the Tyrol for their cure.

For centuries an exclusive diet of grapes for many weeks has been regarded in Europe as a sure cure for all possible ailments of the digestive tract and allied disorders. From six to eight pounds of grapes must be eaten daily by the dyspeptic and the gouty, who must forego all alcoholic drinks and rich food of the sort which has produced their abnormal condition.

Most of the cures have vineyards. These are on mountainsides and the patients pick their own grapes at considerable physical effort. Some of the cures are back-to-nature colonies, where the patients are required to live most of the time in the open air and lead a very simple life. Others supply the grapes in luxurious hotels and cater to those patients who will not rough it but want to sit dressed up on a hotel veranda where they can discuss their ills with fellow-victims of overeating.

Doctors who give water cures think lightly of the grape-cure, and grape-cure physicians decry Carlsbad and Kissingen and other famous springs which make the fat lean and the lean fat. But the cures all seem to get a large following. Americans have not been numerous in German cures this year, but Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, Italy and France have attracted large numbers of American patients.

CROWD SEES WOMAN PRAY.

Stirred by White-Haired Supplicant in St. Paul's Churchyard.

George Mead, sexton of St. Paul's Episcopal Chapel, Trinity Parish, Broadway and Vesey Street, while preparing for the daily noon service yesterday, noticed a white-haired woman kneeling in St. Paul's Churchyard. It was All Souls' Day, when it is the custom to pray for the dead.

In front of her she had stuck nine candles, forming a circle, in a small, soft mound where flowers had been planted. A crowd began to gather, and soon it became so large that traffic on the sidewalk was blocked. The sexton started toward the woman, but decided not to interrupt her devotions. In the meantime the crowd grew and overflowed into the churchyard, looking on quietly and respectfully. Most of the men removed their hats, and some of those who had stopped out of curiosity remained to pray.

The woman, who was hatless, paid no attention to the chilly wind. She had sheltered her candles by placing them in the shadow of a crumpled standstone shaft. Finally, when they had burned low, she arose, still telling her beads.

Intercepted as she was about to leave, the woman said she had been praying for the souls of her dead mother, father and seven children. She gave her name as Mrs. Josephine Nicoletti and her home as 82 Eldridge Street.

A little bootblack stepped up and whispered to her that this was not a Roman Catholic churchyard and that it had not been consecrated by a Catholic Bishop. But she waved him aside and said in broken English that it was "God's Acre," and that being there made her feel nearer to her dead.

Still unconscious that her simple act of faith had attracted such a large crowd, she went out of the churchyard as unconcernedly as she had entered, the crowd reverently making a path for her to pass through.

WAS 'SWIMMING TO AMERICA'

Belgian Youth From Hoboken Is Picked Up in Hudson.

Attracted by what appeared to be a man's body floating in the North River yesterday, the crew of the tug boat Meseck pulled alongside and discovered it was a Belgian youth swimming for the Manhattan shore. He was taken aboard, where he declared that, being without carfare in Hoboken, he had decided to swim the river "to come to America."

He was taken before Edward Mallen, head of the Chelsea pier detectives, where he said he was Mairjana Strilcich, 18 years old, and that he arrived three days ago on a steamer at Hoboken.

He tried to find his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. George Jalfopic of 718 Grand Street, Hoboken, but failed, owing to his inability to speak English. Finally he decided he must be in a foreign country and set out to swim to "America."

It was established that the youth was not a stowaway and later detectives found his aunt and uncle, who came and took him to their home.

PICKLENY CLUES VAIN.

Coat Found in Long Beach Proves Not to Be Missing Boy's.

Detectives working on the case of Irving Pickleny, who disappeared from the home of his aunt at 81 Orchard Street last Friday, worked all day on a number of clues furnished them by various persons, but all of them proved futile. The most promising clue was the discovery of a brown coat minus one button at Long Beach. At the time of his disappearance the boy wore an overcoat similar to it. The boy's mother examined the coat, but told the detective it was not the one worn by her child.

Acting Captain Cornelius Willemse, in charge of the case, visited Mount Vernon and Long Island City yesterday and looked at two boys answering the description of Irving, but found that neither was.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 2.—Reporting that she had seen a man forcing a small boy to accompany him on a street here last Saturday, Mrs. Frances Knight of this city identified a newspaper photograph of Irving Pickelny as that of the child she had seen.

A political broadside on William R. Hearst, giving an alleged history of his political activities since he came to New York, was issued yesterday in a pamphlet entitled "Hearst's Life. HARVEY RECEIVES LONDON FAREWELLS

British-American Feeling Is Better Than Since the Pre-Revolution Days, He Says.

DIPLOMATS SEE HIM OFF

Envoy Leaves for Southampton to Sail on the Aquitania Today.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Ambassador Harvey had a notable send-off from London this afternoon when he left for Southampton to spend the night aboard the Aquitania, on which he will sail for home tomorrow.

Before he left with Mrs. Harvey he had luncheon with Dowager Queen Alexandra at Marlborough House and the Embassy staff presented to him a large silver bowl.

At Waterloo station he found a number of friends, including a large contingent of London's Diplomatic Corps, waiting to say good-bye to him and Mrs. Harvey. Sir John Handbury Williams, Marshal of the Diplomatic Corps, expressed the formal farewells of the King and Queen and J. B. Monck represented Lord Curzon. J. B. Prince, United States Minister to Copenhagen, the Japanese Ambassador and the Chilean Minister were present. Among others at the station were T. P. O'Connor, M. P.; Wickham Steed, J. St. Loe Strachey, Sydney Brooks and J. Wilson Taylor, Secretary of the Pilgrims.

Before he entered the train Ambassador Harvey said:

"I leave, so far as I know, nothing behind me which requires adjustment. We have no difference whatever between our two countries and we have a better feeling than we have had since long before the American revolution."

Asked about the chances of the treaty settling the liquor running question getting through the Senate in Washington and danger of opposition from the Anti-Saloon League, the Ambassador replied that everything he had heard from Secretary Hughes and had observed himself during his recent visit home assured him that no serious trouble was to be feared.

A few minutes before the train started Sir Auckland and Lady Geddes came up. A photograph of Sir Auckland, Ambassador Harvey, Ambassador Hayashi of Japan, little Dorothy Thompson, the American envoy's granddaughter, and her wire-haired terries Ponte was to have been taken. They lined up but the flashlight failed.

The Ambassador seemed affected by the cordiality of the greeting from his friends and stood at the window as the train moved off amid cheers. Accompanying him to Southampton and staying tonight aboard the Aquitania were Mr. and Mrs. Post Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Sterling and Mr. and Mrs. Candler Cobb, all of the American Embassy, and Mr. and Mrs. William B. Leeds. Mrs. Leeds was Princess Xenia of Greece.

Expected to Bring Liquor Reply.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—A statement was authorized at the White House today, in reply to an inquiry, that President Coolidge expects that George Harvey, the retiring Ambassador to Great Britain, will bring from London the British Government's answer in acceptance of the principle of the proposal made by Secretary Hughes for an Anglo-American treaty by which the right of search for liquor ships will be extended beyond the present three-mile limit.

CONFERENCE FAVORS EMPIRE BUILDING PLAN

London Meeting Approves British Proposals to Aid Development Undertakings.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The system by which the British Treasury will advance money to expediate the undertaking in any part of the Empire of plans of development which would otherwise not be begun for some time, was approved today by the Imperial Economic Conference.

The condition of such advances is that the supplies needed by such enterprises shall be purchased in this country, and the form of the British contribution will be the interest on the loans raised in order to meet capital expenditure. Works to be thus expedited must come under the general head of public utilities and will include schemes for the development of communications will be laid on their initiation, control or management by public bodies or private companies, but they must be approved of the Imperial Government in consultation with the Treasury, Colonial or India offices and the Board of Trade. The British Government will pay the money it advances to the local Government of the territory in which the enterprise is carried on, and the local Government will pass it on to the management of the enterprise. The maximum grant to be made is 75 per cent. of the interest on new capital for a period not exceeding five years.

DEMOCRATAS DECIDE TO BACK GEN. WOOD

WOOD REPORTS ON MOROS

Tells Weeks That Filipino Rule Arouses Them—Manila Hears of Wholesale Murders.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MANILA, Nov. 2.—By a vote of 16 to 11, the directorate of the Democrata Party has decided to co-operate with Governor General Wood. A resolution adopted by the party says:

The week's cable definitely decided the so-called "national issue" raised by the Coalitionists; that an appeal to Congress could only have an unfavorable result for the Filipino cause; that Washington authorities have appealed for harmony and co-operation; that the so-called national issue, moreover, is fictitious because the Coalitionists continue to occupy governmental posts in co-operation with General Wood; that the coalition does not constitute a true majority, inasmuch as it is composed of fused parties that fought separately during the last election and deceived the people; that General Wood had announced that he would appoint Americans if the Filipinos would not co-operate; that the Democratas have as much right as the Coalitionists to participate in the Government, and that such participation would not necessarily mean co-operation with General Wood, but co-operation with the Filipino people.

Therefore, the resolution continues, the directorate of the Democrata Party "resolves and agrees to announce that the aggregation it represents is ready to extend its co-operation to the Government of the islands to an extent and in a manner the Governor General deems opportune and convenient for the good and progress of the public administration, in the sense that the Chief Executive shall accept the governmental program in conformity with the platform adopted by the National Democrata Convention, and extend to the Democratas every opportunity to comply with and put into practice said governmental program."

Now that the Democratas expect to occupy executive posts, a number of Coalitionists are beginning to shift their allegiance, three of the latter having already signified their intention to join the Democratas.

A report that Congressional leaders have decided to submit a plan for making the Phillippines a territory of the United States also greatly worries Quezon and his followers. Quezon is reported to be on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

Regarding the reported students' strike at San Fernando Pampanga, Division Superintendent Adam C. Derkum reports that it was not a real strike, but that many students were absent on Oct. 30, the Filipino Flag Day, on account of a huge gathering and parade of the Katipunan, a secret society, wherein 18,000 members participated.

Derkum reports that "some cadet officers marched in the parade as a school organization, without permission of the school authorities. This matter is under investigation as to who was responsible."

Wood Says Moros Fight Filipinos.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Governor General Wood of the Philippines reported to Secretary Weeks from Parana in a cable dispatch under last night's date that the objection of the Moros to being governed locally by the Christian Filipinos is the basic cause of the present uprising in Mindanao.

The situation, according to General Wood, who is on the ground, is acute but is limited to that section of Cotabato Province adjoining Lanao, where a constabulary detachment was recently massacred. General Wood's report confirms opinions previously expressed by high Administration officials that the difficulty in Mindanao resulted from the objection of the Moros to the Filipino Provincial Governors and other officials.

General Wood's report follows:

"Acute situation Moro country limited, I think, however, section of Cotabato Province adjoining Lanae, where constabulary detachment was killed. Killing of constabulary grew out of alleged grievance against constabulary and local supervising teacher, all Filipinos.

"At the basis lies old antipathy between Moros and Christian Filipinos, and the objection of the former to being governed locally by the latter. This is the principal basic cause of unrest in the Moro Provinces. To it are added minor grievances.

"Have established communication with the hostile leaders through Major Allen S. Fletcher and Captain Roy W. Heard of the Forty-fifth Infantry and Major Carter, formerly constabulary officer and Governor of Cotabato. Have had long conference with Governor of Lanao.

"No disturbances there, although Cotabato incident, combined with the Mohammedan period of religious devotion, which lasts from now until the 10th of the new moon, has served to accentuate the situation. Am now at Parang and am going from here to Lanao, via Zamboanga and Jolo. Will keep the department fully informed."

Reports of Murder and Slavery.

MANILA, Nov. 2 (Associated Press).—Governor General Wood, who is at Parang, Mindanao, investigating conditions among the Moros, has cabled to Secretary Weeks a report on the situation. The text of his report was not obtainable.

Tales of wholesale murder and slavery have been brought to Manila from Davao, one of the principal cities of Mindanao, by investigators, who say that from 200 to 300 laborers are known to have died on one plantation in Mindanao recently as a result of alleged mistreatment. In consequence of conditions Filipino managers of some of the ranches have been arrested and charged with homicide, it is reported.

W. D. Corn, an American investigator, said he recruited several gangs of laborers for the ranch where so many deaths were reported, and that out of forty-six laborers he recruited in 1923 only nine were still working there, and that of the others thirty-two were dead.

Corn said that when the manager of the place became ill and was taken to a hospital he heard of tales of cruelty and took over the management of the ranch. He said the plantation is isolated and escape from it almost impossible, and that for that reason the authorities had not heard of the cruelties practiced there.

WOULD QUIT PHILIPPINES.

Senator Walsh of Montana Believes Dominion Status Is Solution.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Statements from Manila that Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana had cabled to the editor of a newspaper there predicting that at the next session of Congress a bill would be introduced aiming to make the Philippines an integral part of the Unitd States were denied today by the Senator. Senator Walsh said he had sent no such cablegram, had not written such a letter, and that he did not favor the introduction of such a bill. On the other hand, the Senator believes in Philippine independence.

"After careful study I have been unable to find any satisfactory reason, considering our own material interest, why we should stay in the Philippines," he said.

Senator Walsh made a tour of the Philippines, China, Japan and Hawaii last Summer.

"The Filipinos want a Government of their own and are practically one in that desire," he said this afternoon. "The Philippines have been promised their independence for a generation, and the matter should be settled now.

"I am convinced from my repeated discussions with Filipino leaders that what they want is not complete independence, but full authority to regulate and control their own internal affairs—remaining under such ties to the United States as bind the units of the British Empire. The fact is that they cannot be without apprehension regarding foreign aggression, and, still more to point, they are not sure that their financial system or their industrial organization can endure the shock to which it would be subjected if they could enter the markets of the United States only on the same terms and subject to the same duties as the nationals of foreign countries."

Praises General Wood and Tells of Schools Among Tribesmen.

Mrs. C. Lorillard Spencer of New York and Newport returned from the Philippine Islands yesterday.

"My interest is chiefly with the Moros," she said last evening, "but I know many interesting Filipinos and only regret some of them, like that clever, good-looking Quezon and his charming wife, allow personal ambition to keep them from aiding General Wood in his endeavor to advance the true interests of all. We all know General Wood and we may rest assured the situation is in the hands of a man who will handle a thankless task so as to bring the greatest good to the greatest number.

"We should be happy indeed (for the Moros belong to all of us, and by us I mean every man, woman and child in this broad land) at the encouraging report I am bringing the Moro Foundation Committee. The school was started primarily to make friends with a supposedly impossible people, and we have, by the grace of God, succeeded beyond all expectation. What we have so far accomplished is only to drive in a nail on which to hang many good things. Some of these things I have come back to get, a girls' school, for instance, and I know the lovers of fair play will not fail me."

"Do you realize we have armed and trained the Filipinos while we have systematically disarmed the Moros, not even allowing them to carry, without a permit, their beloved barongs, as much a part of their dress as your cravat. When you see in the magazines and papers accounts of fights between Moros and soldiers or constabulary, always remember the Moros are without firearms and their opponents armed with the latest weapons of modern warfare. And having rendered them helpless, it looks as though we might leave them to be wiped off the face of the earth, for they will fight to the last man rather than be governed by their hereditary enemies, the Filipinos."

Coolidge Thinks Purchase of Patents Gain for Air Transport.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—President Coolidge regards the purchase by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of all patents and rights to manufacture Zeppelin dirigibles as an important step in the encouragement of air transportation in America.

Encouragement of commercial aviation, Mr. Coolidge feels, is of great importance. He believes the Government should do all in its legitimate power to promote aviation.

Are Our School Histories Pro-British?

Commissioner Hirshfield says they are and published a report to that effect.

But thereby hangs a tale. It has been learned by The Tribune that the published Hirshfield report was not the report of the original investigator employed to uncover the alleged pro-British tendencies of our school histories.

The Tribune has a copy of the original report, which was suppressed, and its revelations will surprise those who accepted the published Hirshfield report without question.

The Tribune will publish the facts next week in a series of articles, the first of which will appear in

MELLON TELLS WORK DONE FOR DRY LAW

Answers Pinchot Finally With Statement to Public About Enforcement.

DECLARES AGENTS TOO FEW

He Hopes Congress Will Provide for More Men and More Adequate Equipment.

RUMRUNNING REAL PROBLEM

Refers to Pennsylvania and Calls Further Controversy With Governor Futile.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Instead of replying directly to Governor Pinchot's latest letter relative to enforcement of prohibition, Secretary Mellon issued today a formal statement in which he recited the "supreme difficulty" of carrying out the dry laws all over the United States with an insufficient appropriation and a consequently small number of officers, and at a time when the lure of bootlegging was great.

Although Mr. Mellon reviewed prohibition enforcement work throughout the country, he gave figures concerning the work in Pennsylvania which, he stated, would show not only that there had been a sincere effort to carry out the laws in that State, but that the results were "as full as could be expected in consideration of the smallness of the force and the magnitude of the undertaking." He dismissed further controversy with Governor Pinchot as "futile."

The statement by Mr. Mellon reads:

"Governor Pinchot charges that this department has made no effort to enforce the national prohibition law in the State of Pennsylvania, and, inferentially, no serious effort generally. All persons interested in law enforcement will see the futility of any controversy between the Secretary of the Treasury and the Governor of Pennsylvania, and I shall therefore confine myself to a statement of the efforts that have been made in the State of Pennsylvania and throughout the country.

Points to Great Difficulty.

"Before doing so, let me say a word as to the difficulty of the undertaking in hand. The Eighteenth Amendment proposed a radical revision in the social habits of the people. It was evident at the time of its adoption that it could not be immediately wholly enforced, but all understood it to be an undertaking of years, and one which must necessarily be progressive in its character. That it is a task of supreme difficulty the experience of this department for the last four years has abundantly proved. This difficulty is further aggravated by the fabulous prices offered for illicit liquors and the consequent opportunities for large and easy gain. While a great deal has been accomplished, much has failed of accomplishment. Patience, perseverance and united effort are necessary to the undertaking.

"Enforcement is made a function of both the Federal and State Governments. I shall speak only of the results of the activities of the Federal authorities, although the duty is equally enjoined upon the States. While the amendment is to be enforced in forty-eight States, the District of Columbia, Porto Rico and the territories of Hawaii and Alaska, Congress has nevertheless appropriated for that purpose only the sum of $8,500,000, barely sufficient to provide an administrative unit of 700 employes and a field force of 1,522.

"Notwithstanding the large area covered, this force is less than one-eighth of the police force of the City of New York, less than one-fifth of that of Chicago and a little more than one-third of that of the City of Philadelphia. Of this force the assignment to the State of Pennsylvania at the present time is 86, while, as I am informed, the total number of the Pennsylvania State police is 260, a force more than three times as great as the Federal prohibition force assigned to that State, while there are more than 10,000 city policemen in the State of Pennsylvania.

"Notwithstanding the smallness of the Federal force available in that State, between August, 1921, and October, 1923, it not only supervised the several hundred permittees in that State, but discovered and reported 7,142 violations; obtained 1,434 convictions in the Federal courts; secured the imposition of fines to the amount of $304,064.30; seized 2,425 illicit distilleries; seized and secured the forfeiture of 280 automobiles; collected tax penalties to the amount of $837,423.36, and secured information leading to the revocation of 836 permits, these being only partial and incomplete returns. To all who are interested in facts, these figures will show thatt here has not only been earnest effort to enforce the prohibition law in the State of Pennsylvania, but that the results are as full as could be expected in consideration of the smallness of the force and the magnitude of the undertaking.

Work of Enforcement Officers.

"As to the country generally, during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1923, this little force of 1,522 enforcement officers made the inspection for and supervised 123,813 permits; seized and destroyed 12,219 illicit distillery plants, 457,365.25 gallons of illicit spirits, 4,803,872.92 gallons of illicit malt liquors, 555,443.34 gallons of wine, 8,356,696 gallons of mash; seized and forfeited 3,977 automobiles, valued at $2,101,933.50; seized and forfeited 134 boats, valued at $831,594.55; seized and destroyed property, $3,375,139.33; seized property, $8,103,138.30; arrested 66,936 offenders; secured and aided in securing the convictions of 34,067 offfenders; secured and aided in securing the impositions of fines to the amount of $5,852,491.18, which fines went into the general Treasury and were not available for prohibition enforcement.

"In these operations eleven enforcement officers lost their lives and forty-five were seriously injured. These facts will indicate whether there has been an honest effort to enforce the law.

"We have in the United States seventy-four industrial alcohol plants authorized to produce and sell industrial alcohol for non-beverage purposes; there are now no distilleries producing potable liquors in the United States; there are 492 cereal beverage plants, commonly called breweries, manufacturing cereal beverages of less than one-half of 1 per cent. of alcoholic strength, the manufacture of real beer, as formerly understood, not being allowed by law; and 963 wineries, where taxable wine is manufactured for sale for non-berevage use and sacramental purposes.

"The industrial alcohol plants are chiefly located in the Middle West, the South and the East, the breweries in the East and the bulk of the wineries in the West. All these institutions must be surveyed, bonded, permitted, supervised and controlled. I believe that with an adequate force the law can be well enforced at these plants. That the Congress should make an increased appropriation for the field force is clearly manifest.

Rum-Running the Greatest Problem.

"By far the greatest problem is that of rum-running, or unlawful importations from foreign countries. Here the violations are flagrant and notorious. I believe that the Coast Guard is the most readily available and efficient instrument for the prevention of unlawful liquor importations. It is now doing very effective service in that behalf, but the present equipment is wholly inadequate for this added undertaking with the other duties with which the service is already charged.

"This department has for some time had under consideration and careful study the necessary equipment in vessels, cabin cruiser motor boats, small motor boats and other necessary equipment, together with the number of additional commissioned officers, warrant officers and enlisted men necessary to provide for the prevention of unlawful importations of liquor into the United States by the Coast Guard, and the Congressional appropriation required therefor, and the result of this inquiry will be made known at an early date.

"I am informed that a treaty will, at an early date, be completed with Great Britain by which the right of search of vessels will be extended beyond the present three-mile limit, and I believe the addition of the necessary facilities to the Coast Guard and this extended right of search will provide for the prevention of unlawful rum-running on our coasts. A conference is also to be held with the Canadian Government during the present month at which it is hoped that a better understanding may be reached as to the prevention of unlawful importations of liquors from the Dominion of Canada into the United States.

"Despite all hindrances, I believe that with sufficient enlargement of our equipment and forces, together with more active co-operation upon the part of the local authorities, the Eighteenth Amendment and the National Prohibition act may be enforced as any other law. To this end the best efforts of this department will be directed."

Motion Picture Is Ruled Out As Evidence in Accident Suit

Motion pictures as evidence were rejected by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn yesterday in granting an appeal by Basil H. Gunn of 630 Boyd Avenue, Woodhaven, L. I., from a jury verdict of $10,000 damages in favor of William H. Gibson, an actor, who sued for $50,000 for alleged injuries caused by the defendant's auto at 114th Street and Second Avenue, Manhattan.

Gibson, whose foot was amputated some time ago, submitted motion pictures at the trial to show that he had been able to act with the aid of an artificial leg, but he contended that the second injury had further crushed his leg and prevented him earning a living on the stage. In an opinion setting aside the verdict and ordering a new trial, the Court said:

"Aside from the fact that motion pictures present a fertile field for exaggeration of any emotion or actions, we think the picture admitted in evidence brought before the jury irrelevant matter, hearsay and incomplete evidence and tended to make a farce of the trial."

POLITICAL APPEAL BY BENNY LEONARD

Lightweight Champion Calls on His Friends to Elect Charles E. Buchner to Bench.

Benny Leonard, lightweight champion boxer of the world, entered a new field yesterday and made public a letter urging his friends to vote for Charles E. Buchner, Republican and independent candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court, whom he described as a "real pal." The letter, which has been widely sent to Mr. Leonard's friends in sporting circles, follows:

My dear friend:

I am writing to let you know that an old and very dear friend of mine is a candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court in Manhattan and the Bronx. I would like everyone of my pals to give him a vote.

His name Charles E. Buchner.
Place on ballot, Group 2, 16th name.
Candidate Republican and Independent Citizens Party.

Mr. Buchner has been very near and very dear to both Billy Gibson and myself for many years. I am and always will be grateful to him for his kindly advice and help, which dates back to pre-championship days. He has done much in making me the clean-living champion that I have always tried to be, and which has gained for me the respect of all of my friends. This you know, I value as much as the championship itself.

He's been my real pal!
Help me repay my debt of gratitude to him!
Don't disappoint me in this request!
I am intensely interested.

Faithfully as ever,
BENNY LEONARD.

P. S. Won't you also please get all of your friends to vote for him. And don't forget that the ladies have a vote. Help us put him over!

HYLAN TOO ILL FOR POLITICS

Doesn't Even Know of Hearst-Tammany Fight, His Doctor Says.

Mayor John F. Hylan does not intend to take sides in the political controversy raging between William R. Hearst, the Mayor's close friend and backer on the one side, and the Democratic candidates, whom Hearst is attacking through his newspapers, on the other.

The Mayor's physician, Dr. John A. Ferguson, made it clear yesterday that the Mayor is in no physical condition, due to his long illness, to take part in the campaign this year.

"The Mayor has not seen a newspaper since he became ill," said Dr. Ferguson, "and all news of political developments have been kept from him. He is not able to take any part whatever in the political campaign, even to writing a political letter or public appeal for any candidate.

"He did dictate a short note thanking the public for their interest in his health, but he could not write any letter requiring effort or involving knowledge of recent events. He is too easily tired."

Mayor Hylan went for an automobile ride and a chair ride the entire length of the Coney Island Boardwalk yesterday afternoon. "Another fine day and a wonderful trip; I certainly feel fine," he said on his return to his home.

Although the Mayor is out of the campaign, the political organization known as the Hylan League is working energetically for the Democratic candidates. Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, is actively in charge of the league and is campaigning nightly. The league's speakers confine themselves mostly to attacking the records of the Republican Assemblymen at Albany during the last session of the Legislature.

LAWYERS VOTE ON JUDGES.

Show Their Preferences on Bench Candidates in Straw Ballot.

Justices Nathan Bijur and Edward J. Gavegan, renominated by both major parties, five Democratic candidates and three Republican candidates led in the straw vote among lawyers on candidates for Justice of the Supreme Court in the First Judicial District taken by The News and published in that newspaper this morning. Ten places on this bench are to be filled at the coming election and the first ten in The News's canvass, with the vote for each, follow:

Nathan Bijur, Democrat-Republican	4,866
Joseph M. Proskauer, Democrat	4,288
Edward J. Gavegan, Dem.-Rep.	4,239
Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Democrat	4,075
Robert McC. Marsh, Republican	3,955
Phoenix Ingraham, Democrat	3,182
Frederick W. Spiegelberg, Republican	3,056
Edward J. Glennon, Democrat	2,971
Herbert R. Limburg, Republican	2,961
Aaron J. Levy, Democrat	2,925

In its canvass, which was conducted by mail, The News requested each lawyer to consider only the ability of each candidate to interpret and administer the law and his conscientiousness in so doing. More than 5,000 lawyers responded. The ballot was secret.

ASSAILS COL. ROOSEVELT

Cites Measures for Welfare of Children Which Failed to Pass the Assembly.

Governor Alfred E. Smith received an old-time east side welcome last night when he went into the Sixth Assembly District, the political stronghold of Republican County Chairman Samuel S. Koenig and Republican Assemblyman Sol Ullman, and pleaded with the men and women he has known all his life to give him legislative support during the remainder of his term.

The Governor spoke at the public school at East Tenth Street and Avenue B. It was crowded to the doors and several hundred men and women who could not get into the building gave him a tremendous reception outside. Bands and red fire added to the enthusiasm, and when he got clear of the multitude the Governor said he was always surer of a big reception the nearer he got to his home.

Most of the Governor's speech was devoted to an attack upon Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. He began by saying that his attention had been called to a speech by Mr. Roosevelt in favor of a Democratic Assembly.

"All that I have been able to say, all that possibly could be said by any Democrat in the State in favor of a Democratic Assembly," said the Governor, "were put in a very few words by the Colonel himself when he asked the people 'to think before they go to the polls.' That is all we ask, and if that happens there is no question about the political complexion of the next State Assembly. It undoubtedly will be strongly Democratic."

The Governor went on to say that Mr. Roosevelt had appeared to be very solicitous recently about the welfare of the children, and he reminded the audience that when a bill he had drawn making provision for the care of children who were left without a father, had passed the Senate, it was killed in the Republican Assembly.

"Let the Colonel explain that," said the Governor, "if there is any explanation of it."

The Governor also declared that a bill last Winter to create a wage board to determine living wages for children engaged in industry had been passed by the Senate but had been "assassinated" in the Republican Assembly.

"What has the Colonel to say about that?" asked the Governor. He also asked why the Assembly had killed the bill extending to children in the rural sections of the State the same educational benefits given to the children in the city. He told how the bill looking to intelligent State regulation of the operation of automobiles also had been killed after it passed the Democratic Senate.

"Nobody is fooled by the glittering generalities in which the Colonel indulges," said the Governor. "I have mentioned specific things that a Republican Assembly could have done to help children. But they did not do it and he knows they did not do it and he probably knows why they did not do it, because when he was a member of the Assembly in 1920 he introduced a bill providing for the creation of wage boards to insure a living wage to children in industry and he was unable even to have it discussed. He did not have power and influence enough in a body a majority of which belonged to his own party even to bring the bill before the Assembly for discussion."

The Governor then switched his attack to Assemblyman Ullman and suggested that the latter explain why he had voted against the bill for the regulation of automobiles in the State "to prevent accident to life and limb and the destruction of children." The Governor continued:

"Assemblyman Ullman has suddenly taken a very great interest in improving transit facilities. When he had an opportunity to give to his own city the power of control over its own public utility corporations he voted in the negative. He was with the house machine as against the people of his own city. When the bill came up for the abolition of the Transit Commission, he was absent when the vote was taken."

SUPPORT HOME RULE PLAN.

State's Mayors and Other Organizations Urge Its Adoption.

A statement urging adoption of the proposed Walker-Ullman home rule constitutional amendment, which will be voted on at the election on Nov. 6, was issued yesterday by the State Conference of Mayors, the New York State Association, the League of Women Voters, the Citizens Union and the City Club.

"The demand for home rule comes from practically every city in the State," the statement read. "This means four-fifths of the State's inhabitants. The proposal has always been supported on a non-partisan basis. It was submitted to the voters this year by a Legislature one house of which was Republican and one Democratic.

"Home rule is not a novel or radical proposal. It is nothing more or less than the right of self-government with respect to purely local affairs, an old and well recognized political principle which has only come into disuse in recent times.

This proposal will free cities from much legislative interference and will free the Legislature from bondage to local affairs, enabling it to fulfill its proper function of legislating for the entire State. The Walker-Ullman proposal affords a sane, safe and practical means of a gradual transition from the legislative government of cities to local self-government in municipal affairs.

CAMPAIGNS FOR 'UNBOSSED'

S. John Block Says They're the Nominees on the Socialist Ticket.

Votes for the Socialist candidates for Justice of the Supreme Court on the ground that they were the only real "unbossed" candidates were asked last night by S. John Block, one of the Socialist judicial nominees, in speeches at meetings held by the League of Women Voters and the Socialist Party. Mr. Block said it undoubtedly was true that none of the Democratic candidates could have been nominated without the approval of "Boss" Murphy and asked if any one was so naive as to believe that the Republican candidates could have been nominated without the approval of Boss" Koenig.

"The Socialist Party, in conjunction with the Farmer-Labor Party and the labor unions in the American Labor Party, has nominated its candidates for the Supreme Court," Mr. Block said. "No bosses exist in these parties of the people."

HITS ANTI-BONUS LEAGUE.

State Legion Commander Says Its Arguments Are Unsound.

Protesting that Knowlton Durham, National President of the Ex-Service Men's Anti-Bonus League, had never offered a sound argument against the bonus and had appealed only to the passions of the public, Edward E. Spafford, Commander of the New York State Department of the American Legion, denounced the League in a recent letter to Durham, who had asked how the League votes stood on the bonus issue.

More than 85 per cent. of the legionaires, according to Spafford, were in favor of clearing up the contract between the individual and the Government. Many of them, Spafford wrote, are ready to assign the whole of their bonus to disabled men.

'Significance of Armistice Day' to Be Theme Of Wilson's Radio Message to the Nation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The voice of Woodrow Wilson will be heard by millions throughout the nation, and for the first time outside of Washington since he was stricken out West in his fight for the League of Nations in September, 1919, when the radio broadcasts his message to his countrymen on "The Significance of Armistice Day" on Saturday night, Nov. 10.

In announcing plans for the broadcasting, officials of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company stated today that Mr. Wilson has consented to talk for ten minutes, beginning at 8 o'clock. He will sit in an armchair in his S Street home and speak into a microphone.

A special trunk line will be run into the Wilson residence, equipped with necessary apparatus and amplifiers. A radio expert, stationed in front of an ammeter attached to this trunk line, will watch the fluctuations of a small needle, which, when kept pointing at a zero mark, will mean that family groups by home radio sets and crowds at city gatherings are distinctly hearing every word.

The local telephone company's portable equipment will pick up the speech, transmitting it by telephone circuits to its own broadcasting station, WCAP and by long-distance circuits to WEAF in New York City and to the country's most powerful radio stations. Among those in on the arrangement, plans for which were perfected by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, may be the WJAR station at Providence.

Whether Mr. Wilson will discuss the League of Nations and reparations in his address could not be ascertained today. The range of his subject is considered broad enough to cover both. Officials, diplomats and statesmen in Washington await with keenest interest his views on the present international situation, and friends of the former President believe he will touch on American participation in the establishment of world peace.

It is known that Mr. Wilson does not regard the present situation as one of peace, but merely a "standstill of arms," as he told the Armistice pilgrims who went to his residence last Armistice Day.

In his opinion there is a radical difference between armistice and peace, an armistice being regarded by him as a "mere negation," a mere refraining from force.

Peace he regards as a very positive and constructive thing, brought about by systematic maintenance of a common understanding and by the cultivation not of amiable phrases and hopes but of active co-operation for justice as against expediency.

SMITH AIDS WOMEN ON STEINBERG VOTE

Says Records Support Charge That Assemblyman Opposed Two Bills.

TWICE REVERSED HIMSELF

Denial by Legislator Results in Appeal to Governor for an Official Check-Up.

Governor Alfred E. Smith yesterday went to the assistance of the Women's Democratic Union, which has had a controversy with Republican Assemblyman Joseph Steinberg of the 15th Assembly District, as to whether Steinberg did or did not vote against the Minimum Wage and Eight Hour bills at the last legislative session. The Governor sent for the records, and in a letter to the Consumers' League said that Steinberg had voted against the bills.

Democratic women have been waging a bitter fight against Steinberg in his own district, in favor of Samuel Lax, the Democratic candidate, and at a meeting of the League of Women Voters at the Women's University Club, two nights ago, Mrs. John Blair, Chairman of the Women's Democratic Union, made the charge that Assemblyman Steinberg had voted against the bills. Mr. Steinberg appeared at the meeting and declared that she did not vote against them.

The women appealed to the Consumers' League and asked it to look up Assemblyman Steinberg's record on the vote. The League, through its Executive Secretary, Clara Mortenson Beyer, asked Governor Smith for the record. He did so, and in a letter to Mrs. Beyer he said:

"I am in receipt of your communication under date of Nov. 2, and I note therein that Assemblyman Steinberg challenged your statement with regard to his vote on the so-called Minimum Wage bill and the so-called Eight-Hour bill for women and children in factories. I have before me the official records of the Assembly, and according to the record you are entirely right in the statement you have made about Assemblyman Steinberg's vote.

"Mr. Donohue, the Democratic leader of the Assembly, on the 2d of May last, made a motion to instruct the Committee on Rules to report Assembly Bill, Introductory 18, print 2324, entitled, 'An Act to Amend the Labor Law so as to Protect the Health and Welfare of Women and Minor Workers by Establishing a Minimum Wage Board and Providing for the Determination of Living Wages for Women and Minors.' The record shows that Mr. Steinberg voted in the affirmative. The result announced by the Clerk of the House was 75 affirmative votes and 66 negative votes. At this point I should say to you that, under the rules and decisions of the Assembly, 76 votes are required to carry a motion to discharge a committee from further consideration of any pending bill. Thus the motion was lost by one vote.

"Immediately thereafter, Assemblyman Rourke discovered that he was not recorded, and claimed to have voted in the affirmative. Had his vote been so recorded the motion would have carried. Consequently, he moved to reconsider the vote by which the motion was lost. The Speaker of the Assembly put that question to the Assembly, and it was determined in the affirmative by a viva voce vote. The Speaker then put the original question again to the Assembly, which was to agree to a motion to instruct the committee to report the bill. That motion was determined in the negative and on that motion, Mr. Steinberg reversed his position and voted in the negative, thus taking two different positions inside of at the most ten minutes on two motions that were identical.

"I further find that the records show that on a motion to instruct the Committee on Rules to report Assembly Bill Introductory 13, Print 2307, entitled 'An Act to Amend the Labor Law in Relation to the Wages of Women and Female Minors,' the motion was lost by a vote of 74 in the affirmative to 66 in the negative.

"Upon this motion I find from the record that Mr. Steinberg voted in the affirmative. The motion being lost, the Assembly bill was declared dead by the Speaker, but a little later on the same day Mr. Donohue again moved to discharge the Committee on Rules from Senate Bill Introductory 748, Print 2336, which was identical with the Assembly bill regulating the wages of women and female minors, previously defeated. I find from the record of the roll call upon the second motion Mr. Steinberg again reversed himself and voted in the negative.

"The significant thing about the whole performance, so far as Mr. Steinberg is concerned, is that in each case the motions were defeated by only one vote, and had he remained consistent with his first action there is no doubt in my mind that these proposals would now be part of the statute law of our State.

"You may say to the members of your league that your statement of his complete reversal of himself on both of these votes is absolutely right and can be proved by the public records now in my possession."

FAVOR COTILLO FOR BENCH.

Civic and Welfare Organizations Appeal for His Election.

Officials of civic and welfare organizations sent out an appeal yesterday over their signatures for the election of State Senator Salvatore Cotillo, candidate for the Supreme Court on the Democratic ticket. Among the social workers who have signed the appeal are John B. Andrews, Edmond J. Butler, Mary Drier, Henry L. Hopkins, Florence Kelly, William H. Matthews, Lawson Purdy, Lillian D. Wald and Gaylord S. White.

Among the reasons given for their support of the Senator are these:

"He has been identified with many important measures, among them the windows' pension measure, the Workingmen's Compensation act, and the banking laws to protect depositors, particularly the foreign-born."

SHOP CRAFTS SUE THE PENNSYLVANIA

Ask $15,000,000, Alleging Refusal of Road to Obey Railroad Labor Board.

MAY GO TO SUPREME COURT

Workers Also Seek an Injunction Against Operation of the Company Union Shop.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—System Federation 90, representing shop crafts on the Pennsylvania Railroad system, today brought suit in the Federal District Court for $15,000,000 against the Pennsylvania Railroad to make up alleged underpayment in wages which resulted, according to the bill of complaint, from the Pennsylvania's refusal to abide by the rules of the Railroad Labor Board.

A statement given out by attorneys for the plaintiff stated that the suit was filed in behalf of "60,000 striking shopmen."

It was filed by David Wallerstein, Philadelphia attorney, with whom are associated in the case Donald R. Richberg, Chicago, counsel for the railway employes' department of the American Federation of Labor, and Morris Hillquit, New York. According to the statement the suit is the first action of its kind in the history of American jurisprudence and is expected to go eventually to the United States Supreme Court.

The bill of complaint asks for an injunction restraining the Pennsylvania from paying wages to members of the mechanical force on a scale below that in force June 30, 1921; from refusing to recognize seniority rights, as established by the Labor Board, from continuing the piece-work system and the present rules and conditions of work; from recognizing as representatives of the shopmen the "company union," which is established, the complaint avers, "without consent of the majority of the men," and from making any agreement with the "company union" governing wages, hours and conditions of work.

The bill of complaint contains 100 printed pages. A summary given out by the attorneys reviewed the controversy between the Labor Board and the Pennsylvania Railroad over the method of the election of committees of employes dealing with officers of the company on questions of wages, hours and working conditions. The statement said that only 5,000 of the men voted on the company ballots and of these ballots a third were blank or were marked with the name of System Federation No. 90. The federation at the same time sent out ballots and all but seven were marked in favor of representation on the committees by System Federation No. 90.

The statement showed the controversy was taken to the Supreme Court and that "when it appeared that the company had no intention of complying with the decision of the Labor Board and of the Supreme Court" the members of the federation voted to strike to enforce their rights under the law. "They have been out since July 1, 1922," the statement said. The statement added:

"According to the ruling of the United States Supreme Court the final decisions of the Railroad Labor Board cannot be enforced by court process, but must rely on publicity and the force of public opinion. The shopmen maintain, however, that the procedure established by the board to enable it to reach an opinion is mandatory on all parties of interest, or the whole machinery of the board is rendered useless. The present suit seeks to establish this point."

TO RAZE ELEVATED SPUR.

City Acts to Tear Down Extension of Sixth Avenue Line.

The Board of Estimate took formal action yesterday for the removal of the Sixth Avenue elevated railroad extension from Fifty-third to Fifty-ninth Street. Representatives of various civic organizations appeared to urge the razing of the structure and these, together with a number of property owners along the route, declared the structure, which accommodates a shuttle service, was practically useless.

A representative of the railroad declared that there would be no opposition by his company to any legal move made by the city.

At the request of the Board of Education the Estimate Board appropriated $15,000,000 for new schools. According to Acting Mayor Hulbert, the board has provided $60,000,000 for schools since the first of the year and a total of $115,000,000 in the two Hylan Administrations. In all, he added, the Board of Estimate has committed itself to an aggregate of $199,000,000 and that funds will be turned over to the Board of Education as speedily as the money is needed.

The Transit Commission's request for an apropriation of $1,725,884.10 for the extension of the Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn, subway from Eighty-sixth Street at Fifth Street, Fort Hamilton, was approved. The lowest of six bidders was the T. A. Gillespie Company. Acting Mayor Hulbert said he believed the work would cost more than $2,000,000.

After some discussion, the request of Dock Commissioner John H. Delaney for an appropriation of $825,000 with which to elevate the grade of the boulevard across Jamaica Bay was added to a special calendar of the board to be taken up prior to a meeting of the Committee of the Whole next Monday.

POLICE TAKE OVER A LITTLE COUNTESS

WAS TO HAVE BEEN ADOPTED

But Alienation Suit and Other Marital Troubles Conspire to Return Her to France.

Caught in the tangle of the marital affairs of Prince Nicholas Valdimir von der Lippe-Lipski, one time page at the Russian Court and his wife, the former Mrs. Wendell Phillips, is four-year old Countess Renee de Montesse, who was brought to this country by the Princess. The courts have been invoked in order to permit the return of the child to her grandfather in France. Pending this action, it was said yesterday, she is now under the "protection" of the police of Westchester County.

Aileen Gowans, the nurse who came to the United States with the child, is seeking her return to France and in this she is backed by the Prince. Both of the little Countess's parents are dead. The father was a French officer, and after his death the mother came to this country. She died here. The family is related to the Prince and when Renee's mother was taken ill he looked after her affairs.

Samuel Gluck of 1,482 Broadway, representing the Prince, said yesterday that when the Princess went abroad the child was in England with her nurse. She suggested that she bring the child to the United States and adopt her. The Prince consented. There was trouble with the immigration officials over admitting the Countess and the latter, the lawyer said, was brought in under the name of "Shields." There is considerable money coming to Renee, Mr. Gluck said, and Miss Gowans and the Prince desire that the Countess be returned to her grandfather, Claude Demonte, St. Bonnet de Crai, Loire, France.

Prince Tells His Story.

Miss Gowans, with others, was at the apartment of Mrs. Gertrude Schroeder, 410 West 110th Street, on the night of Oct. 19 last, just before the Princess arrived with witnesses hoping to surprise the Prince there. In a statement regarding occurrences on that day the nurse said that the Princess, she heard, wanted to place the child in the charge of others, but she did not mention who the others were.

Prince Lippe-Lipski sat yesterday in the office of his lawyers, Gluck & Pilatsky, 1,482 Broadway, and told the story of his brief married experience and its termination when his wife began suit for $100,000 against her sister, Mrs. Schroeder, for alleged alienation of the affections of the Prince.

As he told of his family tree, his coming to the United States, his meeting with Mrs. Phillips and his determination to begin a suit for the annulment of his marriage, he fingered absent-mindedly the white and black cross of the Order of the Knights of Malta, on the front of his coat.

The Prince said he was 26 years old and one misrepresentation, he alleged his wife practised, was to give her age as 32, whereas, he said, she was really 38. Another misrepresentation was, he said, the fact that the Princess told him that Ralph Kingsley Phillips, her son, an aviator who was killed this year at San Francisco, was her stepson, the child of her sister Edith.

In the lawyers' outer office while he talked was Mrs. Schroeder and Charles Lee Phillips, the first husband of the Princess. Prince Lippe-Lipski said that he came here three years ago intending to remain only a short time. He met Mrs. Phillips in 1922 through Russian friends. He said that when he married Mrs. Phillips he believed that her first husband had died in the Philippines.

Her Divorce Questioned.

According to a statement by Mr. Phillips, he questions the divorce his wife was alleged to have obtained in New Jersey. While he was living in Reno in 1914 he said he heard that his wife had obtained a divorce. He expressed his opinion that the marriage of Mrs. Phillips to the Prince was not legal as he was never served with a summons. He gave his wife's name as Sarah Ellen Phillips and holds that "Wendell," the name she used before her second marriage, is fictitious.

They were married, he said, at Asbury Park and in the next year their son was born. He told of the various places they lived until they separated in 1908. Mr. Phillips went to Mexico and then out West. He returned to New York in 1917 and became a Captain in the Ordnance Department. In 1910 he was served with a summons in a divorce action, but alleged that that suit was thrown out of court. He next saw his wife in Washington at the funeral of his son, but they did not speak.

The charge of the Princess, her sister, that she had stolen the affections of the Prince was indignantly denied by Mrs. Schroeder. She added that she wanted to warn the newspapers against printing the "outrageous story" that the Prince had been found in her apartment. The Prince's clothing, alleged to have been found scattered about the apartment, she said, was all packed in a box and left there with his wife's consent. "In fact, the entire matter must in all justice be regarded as a vicious attack of a master schemer," she said.

For several years she said she did not see the now Princess von der Lippe-Lipski, although she contributed to her support and sent her son to school in Virginia. She declared emphatically that the Prince was not in her apartment when the Princess and detectives visited her, after forcing the door.

Another Family Difference Recalled.

When in 1921 Mrs. Phillips was director of the Carry-On Association, and that organization was under investigation by District Attorney Swann, the question of Mrs. Phillips's family tree came up. Mrs. Lydia A. Stoever, then housekeeper of the association home, said that she was Mrs. Phillips's mother. Mrs. Phillips asserted that the housekeeper was her stepmother. She said that her mother's maiden name was Lydia Blair, which Mrs. Stoever, said happened to be her maiden name. Both, Mrs. Phillips said at the time, were at different times married to John Betts, her father.

Mrs. Stoever came to the defense of her daughter, Mrs. Schroeder, yesterday and through the lawyers she made this statement repeating her claim that the Princess was her daughter:

"I am the mother of both Mrs. Schroeder and the Princess. With reference to these vicious attacks made by my oldest daughter, the Princess, against her sister, Mrs. Schroeder I can only say I am convinced there is not even a shadow of truth in all these outrageous newspaper reports. In fact, Mrs. Schroeder has always held a position of respect and esteem which I am sure she still merits. Mrs. Phillips, or the Princess, has also atttacked me in reference to the Carry-On Association, but I am sure in reference to both these cases that right will predominate and vindicate both Mrs. Schroeder and myself."

EDITOR GUILTY OF LIBEL.

Jury Convicts Lucius Russel of Charge by Newark Prosecutor.

Lucius T. Russel, editor of The Newark Morning Ledger, was convicted by a jury last night of criminally libeling Prosecutor John Bigelow of Essex County in an editorial which referred to the Prosecutor's office as a "menace to society rather than a protection." The jury was out an hour and a quarter.

On the witness stand Russel said that his editorials were a legitimate criticism of the Prosecutor's office, but that he could not directly substantiate his accusations. Bail was continued at $1,500 until the date for sentence, which has not yet been fixed.

70 Per Cent. of the Criminals Here Come From Other Cities

In discharging the three October Grand Juries in General Sessions yesterday Judge Mancuso declared that 70 per cent. of the criminals arraigned in the courts of this city were natives of other cities. He added that there was a belief throughout the country that this was "the worst city in the universe."

"Such a statement is a positive libel on the fair name of our city," he told the jurors. "Those born in this city are proud of their birthplace and are quick to resent any blemish or aspersion that is cast upon it. The police records prove that the real, vicious violators of the law are really men from out of town."

The foremen of the three Grand Juries reported that they had considered 1,464 cases during the month, the record for the court. In 1920 there were 1,068 cases. The foreman told Judge Mancuso that it was the belief of the jurors a law should be passed compelling persons with criminal records in others cities to report immediately to Police Headquarters on their arrival. The Court agreed.

District Attorney Banton submitted statistics showing that the three Grand Juries disposed of 635 complaints brought under the defunct Mullen-Gage law. No indictments were returned on these. When the November Grand Juries are sworn in on Monday complaints against 252 alleged violators of this law will be laid before them.

FILIPINO CONVICTED OF NURSE'S MURDER

Chef Strangled Blossom Martin in House Where Both Were Employed.

REACH VERDICT AT 2:20 A. M.

Jury Out 10 Hours and 35 Minutes —Lozado Pleaded He Did Not Mean to Kill.

Eulogio Loado, formerly Filipino chef in the home of Dr. George B. McAuliffe, 26 West Eighty-seventh Street, was found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury in Judge Rosalsky's part of General Sessions at 2:20 o'clock this morning for killing Blossom Martin, a nurse. The jury was out ten hours and thirty-five minutes, during which time salient testimony introduced at te trial was read over to them by a stenographer at their request.

Lozado strangled the nurse in the kitchen of Dr. McAuliffe's home on the evening of June 8 last. Then he wrapped the body in portieres which he pulled down from a closet in the physician's office and carried it in taxicabs to the ferry at Howland's Hook, S. I., with the intention of throwing it into the Arthur Kill.

A chauffeur who had driven him from the Staten Island ferry at St. George became suspicious and notified a deck hand on the boat, who seized the Filipino as he was about to throw the body overboard.

At his trial Lozado declared that the nurse attacked him with a knife, after they had quarreled over a ring which he was about to give her. He declared in a confession that it was not his intention to kill her.

POLICEWOMAN USES GUN.

Miss Barnes, Major in Reserves, Chases Bandits in Her Auto, Too.

Miss Jean Dean Barnes of the advertising staff of the Standard Oil Company, motoring east on Dyckman Street about dusk last evening, suddenly assumed her alternate role of Major of the Women's Police Reserve. Speeding to the assistance of two police flivvers, she helped in the pursuit of a pair of delicatessen bandits.

As the flivvers and Miss Barnes' sport car gained, the two hold-up men struck out across lots toward the Harlem River. Seeing the two police sergeants and their two patrolmen abandon their machines and follow afoot, Miss Barnes nothing daunted followed suit. Revolvers were brought into play. Miss Barnes produced hers. Perhaps forty shots were fired at the two men. The Major fired a few of them herself. But the fugitives got away.

The robbers held up the delicatessen store of Samuel Kaufman at 8 Post Avenue, near the Dyckman Street subway station. Cowing Kaufman and Max Elsman, a customer, with drawn pistols, the pair took $70.

ELECTION BETTING BRISKER.

Many Large Wagers Placed on Judiciary and Assembly.

Betting on the outcome of next Tuesday's election was more active in the financial district yesterday and a number of fair-sized wagers were placed. W. L. Darnell & Co. yesterday had $4,000 to place against $1,000 that District Attorney Dodd of Brooklyn would be re-elected. The firm has an additional $6,000 to place at odds of 3 to 1 that Edward Glennon and Aaron J. Levy will be elected to the Supreme Court bench.

J. S. Fried & Co. yesterday announced that they had $1,000 to place at odds of 6 to 5 that the vote on increased pay for firemen and policemen would be in the affirmative. The firm also has $6,000 to bet against $5,000 that the Republicans will keep control of the Assembly.

Frieda Hempel Back From Europe.

Madame Frieda Hempel, lyric soprano and for many seasons with the Metropolitan Opera Company, returned yesterday on the White Star liner Majestic after spending the Summer in Europe. She brought with her a pekinese with a long pedigree which she had named "Jenny Lind." The dog suffered with cold and sniffed sadly as its mistress stroked its long silky hair. Madame Hempel said that she would give her first concert this season in New York on Nov. 27 at Carnegie Hall. Mme. Hempel said she would not appear in opera this year, but probably would in the season of 1924-1925.

Fined $10,000 for Diverting Coal.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 2.—A fine of $10,000 and costs was imposed today by Federal Judge Westenhaver on the United Alloy Steel Corporation of Canton, Ohio, charged with violation of a coal embargo. It was alleged that the corporation had diverted ten carloads of coal from a public utility concern to its own bunkers.

Campaign for Levy in Harlem.

Harlem residents of both political parties have organized a Harlem non-partisan committee to support Aaron J. Levy, Democrat, for Justice of the Supreme Court. Headquarters are at 84 Lenox Avenue.

FIND NO REMEDY IN WHEAT CRISIS

Investigators' Report on Western Trip Brings Little Hope to the White House.

FARMERS FOR FEDERAL AID

GERMANY IN THE PROBLEM

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Eugene Meyer and Frank Kondell of the War Finance Corporation who went West to investigate the wheat situation, returned today and presented their report to President Coolidge. This will be made public Monday.

There was little optimism at the White House over the report which the President received verbally. Officials who have been studying the situation say that the investigators learned little at first hand that was not known before. The report, however, recommends a plan for emergency aid and contains several suggestions which will require legislative action.

Senators from wheat-growing States said today that prompt action was necessary by the Federal Government if the farmer were to be assisted materially. They declared that if assistance was not given until after Congress meets, such aid would be of little value, as by the middle of December most of the farmers would have been forced to dispose of their wheat to meet their obligations.

These Senators hope that the investigators have found a remedy, which will be applied by the end of this month. They are told at the White House that the Government is working upon a plan, which, some believe, contemplates buying wheat and selling it to Germany on long term loans. The War Finance Corporation has authority to make such loans for such a plan, but they must be made to Americans. These Americans, however, might arrange to extend credits to German buyers.

The investigation of the wheat situation by officials has really developed no feasible plan to aid the farmer. It is asserted that nothing short of Government purchase of the surplus at a rate beyond the market value will be acceptable to the farmers, and this the Government is not disposed to do.

As railroad officials have declined to reduce the freight rate on wheat voluntarily, it was announced at the White House today that the only recourse was to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Explanation was made at the White House that the President had suggested voluntary action by the railroad heads if they thought this could be done, since the change could be made quickly in this way without going through long procedure before the commission. The President has not indicated what he thought the commission cught to do in the rate cases.

Administration officials hoped the railroads would reduce the rates on wheat intended for export and possibly other commodities. In that case, they say, demands of radicals in the next Congress for changes in the Esch-Cummins law would have lessened and efforts of conservatives to protect the interests of the railroads to the extent of seeing that their revenues were not reduced below a proper figure would have been strengthened.

The American Farm Bureau Federation said in a statement issued tonight:

"The decision of the railroad executives that of their own volition they will not grant a reduction in rates for the transportation of wheat intended for export in no way alters the determination of the American Farm Bureau Federation to insist before the Interstate Commerce Commission that rates be lowered.

"Six weeks ago the federation petitioned the commission for a reduction and has been working on its brief ever since. Among other things the federation intends to ask is why the Canadian railways can haul wheat so much cheaper from Saskatchewan and Alberta to the head of lake navigation than can our railroads, just across the line."

G. S. ROCKEFELLER NOW ALBANY BANK CLERK

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 2.—After he had worked for a nine-hour day in beginning work as a clerk at the National Commercial Bank and Trust Company today, Godfrey S. Rockefeller of New York went to his home, 137 South Allen Street, tonight, and busied himself unpacking furniture. Earlier in the day Mrs. Rockefeller, bride of the grand nephew of John D. Rockefeller, had swept their apartment and prepared for their furniture. She was Miss Helen Gratz of St. Louis.

The place which Mr. Rockefeller holds at the bank in the transit department. He was not assigned as an office boy as he had thought he might be when he came to Albany a few days ago.

Officials of the bank said tonight that the fact that Mr. Rockefeller was wealthy made no difference. He would go through the same course of training that other young men had taken, they said. Several of the men who started at the National Commercial Bank and Trust Company are now prominent in the world of finance.

The wealthy bank clerk will not have union hours. He begins work at 8 A. M. and is not free until every detail in the office has been cleared up. His salary is about $20 a week.

Mrs. Rockefeller, after toiling all day with the broom and dust cloth, found time about 6 o'clock to get into the new roadster and run down to the bank to pick her husband up and take him home. After a quick dinner the millionaire clerk took off his coat and went to work uncrating furniture.

The family was without a telephone today. The instrument has been delivered but was not connected. The line is a "party" line.

Liquor Bribe Charge Dismissed.

Judge Robert A. Inch, in the United States District Court, in Brooklyn, yesterday dismissed the charge made in open court by Joseph S. Thomson, an attorney, that two men had approached his client, Thomas Howley, the proprietor of a hotel at Rockaway Beach, with an offer to have an indictment against him for selling liquor dismissed if he paid $600. Part of the money, according to the complaint, the men told Howley, was to go to an Assistant District Attorney. Judge Inch exonerated Special Deputy Attorney General Patrick Mason and Thomas P. Mackey, an attorney, who appeared voluntarily before the Court when they learned that an investigation was to follow the charges of Thomson.

MAJESTIC ARRIVES AFTER BUCKING GALE

Ports Smashed, Lifeboat Swept Away in 60-Mile Wind Outside Channel.

The White Star liner Majestic arrived yesterday from Southampton and Cherbourg with 2,625 passengers after being delayed several hours by a 60-mile gale soon after leaving the English Channel. From noon Saturday to noon Sunday the liner steamed only 402 miles. A huge wave came over the port side early Sunday morning, broke half a dozen ports on "F" deck, startling sleeping passengers, and swept away the emergency lifeboat. The Majestic must be ready by noon today to leave again for Cherbourg and Southampton.

Among the passengers on the Majestic was Eddie Rickenbacker, who returned from a business trip to Europe with his wife. He said that with the transplantation of the Zeppelin works from Frederickshaven to Akron, Ohio, America in twenty years would be the dominating world power in aviation.

"There are three steps in aviation in the next ten years," he continued. "First, the small plane, to be used like the small automobile is today; second, the large dirigibles, which will cross the ocean in two days, and, third, the heavier-than-air feeders, or tenders, which will load and unload the dirigibles." The former army aviator predicted that Zeppelins of the future would be 2,000 feet long and carry 150 to 200 persons. As the voyage would be above the storm area, there would always be fair weather, he said.

Brig. Gen. A. C. Critchley, another passenger, who was head of the British Army Aviation Corps during the war, was not so optimistic as Rickenbacker about the dirigibles, and said that it would be a long time before the Atlantic liners were discarded. The newest thing in aviation in England, he added, was a one-seat plane which could fly at sixty miles an hour for seventy hours on a consumption of a gallon of gasoline for every sixty miles. The cost of the machine is about $1,200.

Another passenger was General Cornelius Vanderbilt, who left New York on April 14 for a Mediterranean cruise in his yacht Atlantic. The General said he left the yacht at Southampton and added that Mrs. Vanderbilt and their daughter, Miss Grace Vanderbilt, would return on the next voyage of the Olympic. During regatta week at Cowes the King was entertained by General Vanderbilt on the Atlantic.

R. F. Deterding, General Manager of the Royal Dutch Petroleum Company, arrived on the Majestic on his way to Tampico, Mexico, to inspect Company property.

Mrs. Robert W. Goelet returned with her son, Robert Goelet, after ten months abroad, which she spent chiefly in Italy. Mrs. Goelet said Premier Mussolini had asked her to help organize the Fascista movement in the United States as a weapon against radical foreign groups.

Lord Francis Vernon arrived to take charge of the estates of his mother, the late Dowager Lady Vernon, daughter of the late Francis C. Lawrence of New York.

C. R. Crane, formerly American Ambassador to China, returned with Mrs. Crane after being abroad since August. Another on the Majestic was Percy Burton, formerly manager of Forbes Robertson and Sir Herbert Tree, who will be associated with Morris Gest in the tours of Eleonora Duse and the Moscow Art Theatre.

Others arriving were Brig. Gen. Sir Percy Sykes, Admiral Sir Montague Browning, Professor B. R. Baumgart, Dr. R. E. Pearse, Mrs. John W. Mackay and her granddaughter, Miss Ellin Mackay, and Mrs. Marshall Field.

PROPOSE SUGAR TAX FOR SOLDIER BONUS

Association Says 2 Cents a Pound Sales Levy Would Raise $104,042,674 a Year.

SUBSTITUTE FOR TARIFF

Statement Asserts That 42 Per Cent. Consumed in This Country Escapes Assessment.

A flat sales tax of 2 cents a pound on all sugar consumed in the United States, as a substitute for the present tariff, is advocated by the United States Sugar Association as a means of providing revenues sufficient to meet a possible soldiers' bonus. The association yesterday sent out letters to members of Congress and other public officials stating that the proposed tax would increase the Government's revenues $104,042,674 a year, or enough "to discharge the entire obligations to be incurred under the bonus bill, without further increasing the cost of sugar to consumers."

The recommendation of the association is based on the fact that 42 per cent. of the sugar consumed in the United States "not only escapes taxation under the present tariff, but the purchasers of this sugar in Hawaii, Porto Rico, the Philippines, Louisiana and the domestic beet sugar areas take advantage of the tariff rates imposed on other sugar to raise the price of their product to the full cost of these rates." Thus, according to the association, those producers "exact for themselves an annual subsidy amounting to $104,042,674," or the equivalent of the amount which the sales tax would raise for the Government.

"Consumers, therefore," the association says, "are forced through this form of tariff extortion to pay on the imported portion of our requirements a tariff tax of $124,112,384; in addition, the domestic producers collect an indirect subsidy of $104,042,674, so the cost to the people is the same as though a sales tax, equal to the amount of the tariff rates, was levied alike upon domestic and duty-free sugars. Allowing for shrinkage in the process of refining, we find the cost of the tariff of 1.76 cents per pound upon Cuban raw sugars, 96 degrees test, is equal to 2 cents per pound, or $228,155,558 annually, upon the refined sugar consumed by the country. This additional cost above the 'in bond' price remains constant whether the selling price of sugar, for other reasons, happens to be 10 cents or 6 cents a pound."

The association points out that for revenue purposes the United States is the only important country in the world that exempts from taxation sugars of domestic consumption. The association is composed of both producers and refiners.

To Present United Front.

Formation of a retailers' national council, composed of leading retail trade associations of the country, aside from the primary purpose of co-ordinating their efforts on mutual distributing problems, is interpreted as a step that will enable retailers to present a united front on all issues of national importance in which they are interested. It is pointed out that, in the event of their interests being challenged by radical legislation or otherwise by political groups or blocs, the retailer can do far more to make his voice count strongly through such an organization. The necessity for such a step has been recognized for some time by leaders in the retail field, but progress has not been as rapid as was desired by some.

Dyckman Apartment Sold.

In the Dyckman section William Keys Jr. and Mrs. Elinor E. Bertine sold through Byrne & Bowman to a client of Stoddard & Mark the five-story tax-exempt apartment house at 573 Isham Street, at the junction of 211th Street and Broadway, on a triangular plot 136.7 by 166.9 by 95.8.

To Produce Woolen Fabrics.

An increased amount of machinery is being put on the production of woolen cloths by the United States Worsted Corporation, according to a statement made yesterday by F. K. Nixon, selling agent. A mill at North Chelmsford, Mass., will be used exclusively for the production of these fabrics, which include woolen coatings and suitings for both the men's and women's wear trades. Lines of sports coatings for Spring will be shown shortly, including a series of new worsted weaves by the women's wear department of the corporation. Preparations are also under way to show plaid back overcoatings at the next heavy weight openings.

Gray Goods Sales Large.

The sharp advance in cotton which followed the release of the Government's report on the condition of the crop resulted in the most active trading the local market for gray goods has seen for some time. Large sales of 38½-inch 64-60s were made at 10⅝ cents, this price having been accepted for contracts in the morning and for spots only later on. Only a few spot lots of 64-60s are apparently available at that figure, as sellers were asking all the way from 10¾ to 11 cents for them at the close. The same was true of 30-inch 80-squares, which sold at 14¼ cents. Sales of 39-inch 72-76s were made at 13 cents, 39-inch 68-72s at 12 cents and 38½-inch 60-48s at 9 cents, all for spot delivery, with a minimum of a quarter of a cent a yard more asked for spots now by most sellers. In the sheetings there was some trading in 36-inch 5 and 5.50 yard goods at 10¼ and 9¼ cents respectively. Sateens business included sales of 37-inch 4.37-yard goods at 16¼ cents.

Spring Hose Moving Slowly.

Excepting in the South, where the high price of cotton has put retailers in an optimistic and expectant state of mind, buying of recently opened Spring lines of silk hose has so far shown little snap. This was attributed yesterday to the fact that many buyers are still uncertain about the Japanese raw silk situation and are not willing to commit themselves to any extent until after the turn of the year. Whether the fine hand of the merchandise manager is to be seen in this uncertainty is not problematical, but probable. The bulk of the current buying, what there is of it, is for immediate delivery goods. Stores seem to be well stocked now, but the number of sales that are being run off and the light replenishment that is being done are likely, it was said yesterday, to result in a scarcity of merchandise before the holiday season arrives. This is truer of the high-grade goods, it was said, than of the lower-end lines.

Dress Goods Continue Quiet.

Cutters continue to show small interest in Spring dress goods, their interest being mainly concerned at present with the Fall garment developments. Insistence on price is noted in the trading being done, as is the case in men's wear. The belief seems quite general, however, that the tone and activity of the market will improve within the next few weeks as more cutters swing into their Spring preparations. The demand for coatings of the sports variety is expected to be the first to show strength. The lustrous worsteds are scheduled for a big run, and good sales of the regulation twills are expected. Velours and flannels are not in large supply now, the latter being considered as a leading sports cloth. Serges and tricotines are moving in limited quantities, largely for cheaper garments and over-the-counter purposes. Wool jerseys are still wanted quite strongly.

Underwear Demand Lags Here.

The demand for knitted underwear continues to lag in this market. Wholesale buyers apparently cannot get out of the belief that current prices are too high, with the result that the reorders for Fall goods are not only few but small. Interest is shown only in goods that can be shipped at once. The same buyers are also holding off on Spring lines, and for the same reason. The sharp rise in cotton yesterday which, if sustained, will doubtless mean still higher prices for Spring, may put wholesalers in a more liberal frame of mind as to buying. Mill agents and commission men, however, are not certain that this will be the case.

Reasons for Dullness in Silks.

Monthly raw silk figures that will be issued by the Silk Association of America in the early part of next week, it is expected, will show stocks on hand to be quite satisfactory and that the imports last month amounted to at least 65 per cent. of normal. The trade is fast forgetting the earthquake and, according to some manufacturers here, it is impossible as yet to point out the actual effects of the disaster. They said yesterday that the dull wholesale business and curtailment of production is by no means entirely due to the earthquake but in large part to the vogue for woolens and mixtures. One manufacturer stated he expected to see a scarcity of silk goods in January or February because of the curtailment. The outlook for silks for Spring, he believes, is good.

Against Fraudulent Bankruptcies.

For the purpose of taking more effective action in bankruptcy cases where fraud is indicated, an amendment to the constitution of the National Wholesale Men's Furnishings Association has been passed. Previously, the costs of an investigation into the affairs of a bankrupt who is believed to have defrauded a member were apportioned only among those who were directly interested. The amendment provides that "all expenses incidental to such investigation and proceedings may be charged, pro rata on a percentage basis of the amounts, to all members of the association whether interested or not in the debtor so involved, if the Board of Directors may so determine, but not until all such expenditures shall have been passed upon, approved and ordered by the Board of Directors." It is believed that the amendment will emphasize co-operation in the handling of the fraudulent cases at proportionately less cost.

Holiday Hits Coal Production.

Anthracite production has been curtailed this week by the celebration of Mitchell Day. All of the collieries were idle on Monday, Saward's Journal will say today, and most of them were short-handed for a day or two after that event. The consequent loss of tonnage had some effect on the market, if only to steady the independent domestic sizes. Prices have not changed much one way or the other for several weeks, to the surprise of many in the trade, who had looked for an easing off before this. The bituminous trade is undergoing a process of downward revision, both in tonnage and price.

Cotton Yarn Orders Light.

Individual orders for cotton yarns during the past week have been very limited in size and for immediate delivery, according to the special bulletin of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers. Very little knitting yarn has changed hands, most of the buying having been done by weavers. Brokerage houses, in the light of the precarious condition of the raw material market, advise buying yarns enough to last for months if any recessions take place. It is reported, according to the bulletin, that commission houses are accepting prices for cotton yarns that are lower than the mills are asking, the difference amounting to two or three cents a pound.

THE WEEK'S PRICE TREND.

An Especial Feature Were the Advances in the Foodstuffs.

Although the current week's revisions in wholesale commodities prices, as reflected by Dun's list, were fewer than last week's, the excess of declines over advances was virtually the same. This week there were thirty-eight declines in sixty-nine changes, against forty declines in seventy-four fluctuations last week. One of the present week's features was the high percentage of changes in the general list that was shown in the foodstuffs. At least 40 per cent. of the revisions were in that branch of the list and, contrary to the general trend, an excess of advances over declines was shown.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

†Nominal.

No changes were seen in flour in the local provisions list this week, but Middle Western lard and bacon were higher. Hams were lower. At Chicago advances were seen in short ribs and live sheep, with live hogs lower and live beef and mess pork unchanged.

All the changes in dairy products were upward this week. They were featured by a rise of 8 cents a dozen in first quality fresh-gathered eggs. This brought them to a point equal to the corresponding price of last year. Nearby fancy eggs went up 2 cents a dozen, but they are still 10 cents a dozen below the 1922 level. Advances in the listed butters ranged from a cent to 2½ cents a pound, according to quality. All of them are higher than they were at this time last year. Cheese was unchanged.

No changes were shown in the dried fruits this week, and the only revision in the listed fresh fruits was a drop of 50 cents a barrel in common apples. Changes in the vegetables were fewer than for a long time, and the list showed in them only a drop in choice pea beans.

A rise in No. 4 Santos coffee and a decline in fair Formosa tea marked the week's fluctuations in the beverages. All of the changes in the spices were upward, and they took place in mace, nutmegs, Cochin ginger and white Singapore pepper. Fine granulated sugar in barrels broke 50 cents a hundred pounds, and there was also a drop in 96-test raw sugar.

In the list for grains all of the changes were downward, declines being seen in wheat, corn, oats and malting barley. The leathers continued quotably unchanged, but in the hides were declines in branded cows, No. 1 buffs, No. 1 kips, No. 1 extremes and in No. 1 and Chicago city calfskins. Tallow declined.

The lumber list was more unsettled than for some time, showing declines in poplar, Adirondack spruce, basswood and redwood bevel siding, and advances in Tonawanda white pine, cypress, maple, Douglas fir timbers and pine air-dried "roofers." Spelter supplied the only advance in the metals, four of the five list varieties of pig iron being lower, as well as tin.

In the combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils there were eight changes, of which five were advances. A further rise in Norwegian codliver oil and another drop in menthol in case lots were among the few features. Changes in naval stores were lacking. Miscellaneous revisions included a decline in the best Brazilian crude rubber and rises in Eastern crude rubber and No. 1 old paper mixture pulp.

The week in the textiles, more particularly in the cottons, was more varied than for some time. In the cottons, lower prices for certain chambrays and ginghams contrasted with advances in bleached muslins and denims. Gray cottons were also higher, and a large business was done in them yesterday after the release of the Government cotton crop report. Burlaps eased off a little under a continued lack of demand.

British Figures Reveal Loss by Australasia—South America Gains.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Point was given to the statement made by Premier Bruce of Australia, before the Imperial Conference on Oct. 9, that it was imperative for his country to find markets for its products, and similar remarks by Premier Massey of New Zealand, concerning his country, by the publication today of Smithfield market figures for the ten months of 1923. These reveal a striking decline in imports from Australiasia and a big increase in imports from South America.

Of a total of 218,345 tons of beef handled by this market, the largest meat market in the world, 156,572 tons came for South America and only 12,409 tons from Australasia, being an increase of 18,000 in the South American imports and a decrease of 9,239 in the Australasian.

Of a total of 114,161 tons of mutton, 73,105 tons came from Australasia and 21,460 from South America, an increase of 5,619 tons in the South American imports and a decrease of 11,282 in the Australasian.

Pork importations from North America showed an increase for the period of 1,685 tons.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Generally Higher After Irregular Movements—Weakness in European Exchange.

Interest shifted in very considerable degree from the stock market yesterday to the cotton market, which was somewhat wildly excited by the Government's sweeping reduction of its crop forecast, and to the foreign exchange market, which was much depressed, apparently because of the hair-splitting with Poincaré over the scope of the expert report on Germany's capacity to pay. To the banking community it seemed reasonably probable that the French Foreign Office will yield in this matter; for the Paris Government would in no sense be coerced or committed by a report which should place the German capacity below the conventional figure.

To insist on limiting the experts' work in this way would be to repeat the similar mistake which official Paris made in asking the bankers' commission, last year, not to report what total of reparations they considered compatible with the granting of a foreign loan to Germany. Whether wholly for this cause or for others, francs declined almost to last week's low rate, and sterling, which touched $4.45¾, got down exactly to the price of a year ago—27 cents below the high price of this year. The German mark continued rapidly to "discount" annihilation; at yesterday's low price it required nearly 1¼ billion marks to buy one cent.

There were somewhat numerous further advances of a point or more on the Stock Exchange and the "averages" rose to a figure only ½ point below the highest of last month. But the day's changes were irregular; the market was evidently subject to numerous speculative cross-currents. Business was large enough, however, to make the third "million-share day" in succession, and the general trend of the market was not unfavorable. In the week-end mercantile trade reviews it was noticeable that signs of immediate business revival were mostly discovered on the Stock Exchange, and not in the week's trade.

The Department of Agriculture's greatly reduced cotton estimate was not altogether a surprise; the revised figures agree closely with the general run of recent private estimates. Best opinion in the cotton trade has for some time held that the Government had greatly overestimated both acreage and probable yield in its earlier forecasts. The affair is most unfortunate, especially as following the episode of 1921, when the bureau's forecast was cut 497,000 bales in October, only to be raised again 1,803,000 in November. No doubt we shall now have something of a clamor from Congress and the cotton trade associations. The demands already made, for abolition of cotton estimates from the Agricultural Department, is merely the foolish outburst of angry people. But that the bureau gravely needs reorganization, in methods if not in men, can hardly be disputed.

The extremely violent advance in cotton prices which followed publication of yesterday's estimate probably meant that, although the market considered the revised figure approximately correct, it had not supposed the bureau would cut its official forecast down so far. It may now be assumed, however, since the trade and the Government agree on the estimate, that a cotton crop of ten to ten and a quarter million bales is likely to be picked. The mathematical problem which remains is to add such a yield to the 2,500,000-bales "carry-over" estimated last August, and then calculate how supply and demand would be adjusted if the 12,278,000 "spinners' takings" of the past cotton season were to be duplicated. Thus far in the season, such takings have as a whole been actually larger than in 1922, and stocks at home and foreign distributing points are unusually low. This cannot continue long without influencing the cotton situation decidedly, one way or the other. The alternative, not yet clearly settled, lies between an all-around victory of producers over consumers in the matter of prices, and a decision by the consuming world to exercise the most drastic economy in buying textiles.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Prices Again Advance in Active Market.

With trading on the Stock Exchange again far above the million-share mark, prices again advanced, and many substantial gains were reported at the close. The rise in prices, however, was not as uniform as was witnessed on Wednesday and Thursday, largely because of spectacular profit-taking sales in many sections of the list. In the majority of stocks, however, the trend was again upward, and, where reactions were reported, the declines were generally confined to fractions. Although the advance of Wednesday affected most of the active stocks, there were numerous issues, including certain of the oils and railroad shares, which were at first neglected. These were taken in hand yesterday, when interest slackened in the leaders which started the rise. Those stocks which attracted attention yesterday included the Standard Oil issues, Pan-American Petroleum, General Electric, American Woolen, Westinghouse Electric, the sugar stocks and numerous of the independent oils. Some of the independent oils advanced on "merger rumors," which evidently were being circulated for stock market purposes.

Absentees Again Reported Present.

Several investment bankers reported yesterday that the names of clients which for more than a year had been off their books were again reappearing, and judging from their expressions of gratification there is something in the adage that absence makes the heart grow fonder. "We have received inquiries and orders this week from a number of men who ceased buying new securities a year ago," was the frequent remark.

Scoffing at a Market.

There is still a goodly number of people in Wall Street who have not deserted the "bear party," who look upon the present upturn in the stock market as an artificial one, and one which they call "tailor-made to order." Both of the developments which turned the market about this week are characterized by these bears as "artificial props" placed under the market at the psychological moment when short sellers were overcrowding that side just a bit. The action of the market after the first day's rise, they point out, tends to bear out their theory, they claim, that the advance is an artificial rather than a natural one. They point to the fact that the market staggered a bit in the last hour of trading on Thursday afternoon until heavy buying orders in railroad stocks revived it, and that it gave evidence of staggering yesterday afternoon in the closing hour until some exceptionally good orders for "pivotal stocks" reached the floor of the Exchange. About the only thing that the confirmed bears will admit about the present market is that those who have recently become friendly to it are willing to back their judgment with their money.

Sterling and the Ruhr.

Sterling bills broke rather sharply yesterday at the opening of the London market, a recovery setting in later which made fractional recovery, but the closing of the market found the quotation near the low for the day, which was lower than at any time since Nov. 11, 1922. The most obvious explanation for the heaviness, which was apparent in other foreign exchanges as well, was the Washington report regarding this nation's unwillingness to go into a reparations conference with its hands tied. Subsequent cables from Paris indicating an eagerness on the part of France to have American participation and a relaxing of earlier restrictions mentioned by Poincaré seemed to exert little change on the speculative mood. A second factor which appeared to have considerable weight in back of it as support was that London and other foreign capitals had been buying rather heavily of American stocks following the recent price decline, a process that would involve the selling of considerable sterling to provide for acquisition of desired securities.

A Test for the Bond Market.

Selling $100,000,000 of bonds of a single company is a proposition of such size and major importance that it looms up in the nature of a very thorough test of a market to absorb new securities, and in this regard the offering to be made on Monday of $100,000,000 of American Telephone and Telegraph Company is given an additional significance. Inquiries made yesterday in banking circles indicated that this big issue would go quickly, this prediction having been made on preliminary requests from large investors who have heard recent rumors of telephone financing and have expressed a desire to take a part. A point made yesterday, which further strengthened the belief of the dealers who will pass the bonds out to the public, that the offering would be readily absorbed lay in the coupon rate of 5½ per cent. This is higher than recent telephone issues, the higher interest yield being due to higher interest rates in the money market as compared with some months back, and also, it is to be assumed, to the size of the issue, which the bankers naturally desire to place well and quickly.

The Psychological Change.

One had only to make a trip around the principal banks and brokerage offices in the financial district yesterday to get the impression that there has been a considerable change in market sentiment since the middle of the week. Advancing prices are traditionally the market's best advertisement, and it has had plenty of first-grade advertising since the middle of the week. The results are evident on the surface. Brokerage offices are once more filling up with customers and in all parts of the country, wire houses report, interest in the day-to-day fluctuations has increased greatly. The general run of out-and-out speculators in the Wall Street district is always inclined to be bullish. Most of them are willing to drift along with the tide whichever way it is going, but from developments of the past two or three days they figure that the line of least resistance is upward.

Cotton at Highest Price Since August, 1920.

Publication of the Government's cotton crop report yesterday, estimating the size of this year's cotton crop at 10,248,000, a total much lower than had been expected in the trade, caused a sharp advance of $10 a bale in the price of cotton. The top price for the day was established about 2:30 P. M., and were it not for the fact that the 200 point trading limit for a single day is still in existence, opinion of the trade is that the price would have gone still higher. Spot cotton yesterday went to the highest price since August, 1920, 6 cents a pound above the high price reached in 1922 and more than 20 cents above the low price reached in 1921. Opinion in trade circles varied as to the possible effect the current high prices for cotton will have upon trade in general. That it will be beneficial to the South was not denied, but it is expected to have an unfavorable effect on the textile industry.

A Merry Christmas.

The change in market conditions in the last few days has cheered up Wall Street and those who man the machinery in Wall Street in very remarkable fashion. Brokerage and banking office employes have been facing a rather lean Christmas because of the fact that most of the brokerage employers, at least, have been barely making expenses, some of them not that. Under these conditions the usual year-end bonuses were not anticipated. With the market reviving and broadening out some of them now hold the opinion that Santa Claus will come to Wall Street after all.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Rates Sharply Lower on Political Developments and Purchases of American Securities.

European exchanges worked sharply lower yesterday, the declines running through the entire list. The weakness was plainly the result of offerings of cotton bills, and the possibility that the reparation conference might develop a snarl through French restrictions. An additional factor was the belief that Europe has been making heavy purchases of American securities which would involve the accumulation of dollars abroad and the sale of sterling, francs and other bills in this market.

Sterling was weak from the start, following up Thursday's heaviness, and sold down to $4.45¾, an overnight decline of 1¾ cents, a new low for the year and in fact, since Nov. 11, 1922. Paris checks were offered down to 5.75 cents, off more than 10 points from Thursday's final, while Italian exchange sagged 4 points to 4.44¾ cents; Belgian 6 points to 4.94½ cents, and the Scandinavians, Swiss, Spanish and Holland remittances sympathetically lower.

Although no actual trades were reported in German marks, the quotation dropped to a new record low at 85 cents per trillion marks, or at the rate of 1,176 billions for one dollar, compared with 55 billions a week ago and 3,500 a year ago.

PHONE CO. ISSUES $100,000,000 BONDS

New American Telephone and Telegraph Securities to Be Offered to Public Monday.

PRICED TO YIELD 5.63%

To Retire $40,000,000 Notes Due Next February — $60,000,000 to Finance Operating Companies.

To meet the steadily expanding demand for telephone service, the American Telephone & Telegraph Company has sold an issue of $100,000,000 bonds to a syndicate of bankers who on Monday will make public offering of the securities. It is the largest piece of corporate financing undertaken this year with the lone exception of that in connection with the Anaconda-Chile copper merger, when two bond issues aggregating $150,000,000 were sold.

In a statement issued yesterday, W. S. Gifford, Vice President of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, said that $40,000,000 of the new money would be used to retire $40,000,000 of five-year 6 per cent. notes due on Feb. 1, 1924. The balance of $60,000,000 will be used to finance operating companies which have been hard pressed to keep pace with the growing population of the sections which they serve and the even faster growing demand for telephone service.

In marketing the issue, which is the first authorized by the parent telephone corporation since it became this year a billion dollar concern, a large syndicate of bankers will take part, J. P. Morgan & Co. heading the group.

The bonds will bear 5½ per cent. coupons and will be sold to the public at 98½, which will yield 5.63 per cent. The financing will not be connected in any way with issues of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company and the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company which are expected within the next six months. These issues may total $100,000,000.

Bankers said last night that many inquiries had been received from prospective investors, and that they expected no difficulty in placing the entire issue. The interest yield, they said, had been placed slightly above the market rate for telephone securities in order to quicken the sale, the size of the issue having made this move advisable.

Rumors of the impending issue had been heard for several days in the financial district and several smaller bond issues are being held back until the completion of the telephone financing. Bonds of telephone companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange showed a fractional decline yesterday due to the nearness of the big offering, but this decline was described as merely a ripple.

In connection with the present transaction, Mr. Gifford said yesterday:

"The American Telephone and Telegraph Company announces its first long term financing, other than through the issue of stock, since 1916. It has sold to a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. $100,000,000 twenty-year sinking fund 5½ per cent. gold debenture bonds dated Nov. 1, 1923.

"This issue will provide the Bell Telephone system with funds for additions and betterment to meet the steady demands of the public for increased telephone service, and to retire $40,000,000 five-year 6 per cent. notes due Feb. 1, 1924. With this new financing the funded debt of the company will be $37,000,000 less than it was in 1920, while the capital stock since that date has increased by over $300,000,000.

"For the last ten years the company's net earnings averaged over four and one-half times interest charges and for the current year it is estimated that the net earnings available for interest will be nearly seven times the annual interest charges after this financing is fully effective.

"The company has an unbroken dividend record extending over forty years and it has in each year earned its interest charges, its dividend payments and something for surplus, a margin of safety. It pays 9 per cent. dividends to over 276,000 stockholders."

For the first nine months of this year the company reported a total income of $102,955,751, comparing with $90,194,015 for the corresponding period of last year. Surplus after dividends and all expenses was $14,485,403, against $10,372,713. The departure from the more recent method of raising new money through the sale of stock was explained by the company as due to its desire to keep the funded indebtedness and capital in a fair proportion.

NEW SPURT IN DRY GOODS.

Current Sales and Road Orders Compare Better With Year Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the wholesale dry goods trade say:

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods exceeded materially that of a week ago and considerably ahead of that of the same week last year.

"Road sales continue to increase in volume, the total for the week showing a good increase over the week previous, although still being somewhat less than the figure of a year ago during the corresponding period.

"There were more customers in the market than in 1922 during the same week.

"Collections were somewhat slower than last year for the corresponding period."

To Build Federal Reserve Branches.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The Federal Reserve Board has informed the San Francisco and St. Louis Federal Reserve Banks that it will consider new bids for construction of branches at Salt Lake City and Little Rock. Both projects were ordered held in abeyance by the board last March, when it pronounced building costs too high.

Amer. Telephone Income Increases.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company reports operating income of $2,521,290 in September, compared to $2,469,427 in September, 1922, an increase of $51,863.

WEEK'S NEW BONDS TOTAL $13,493,000

Less Than One-fifth of the Previous Week's Aggregate of $73,404,000.

$3,615,000 FOR UTILITIES

State and Municipal Issues Form the Largest Group, With $8,500,000.

The current week in new financing was a sort of vacation period due to the absence of many investment bankers who were in Washington attending the association's annual convention the first three days of the week. Few issues of more than $1,000,000 were brought out. The largest was placed on the market yesterday. The weekly total was $13,493,000, less than a fifth of the previous week's total of $73,404,000.

By groups this week's offerings compared as follows with the previous week:

	This Week.	Last week.
State and municipal	$8,500,000	$10,364,000
Public utility	3,615,000	32,290,000
Industrial	600,000	18,250,000
Railroad	545,000	12,500,000
Foreign	233,000	....

A test of the prices that investment houses might be willing to bid for new issues was afforded in the opening of bids Thursday on $5,000,000 of State of Missouri 4½s. These bids were a shade higher than bids received for issues of similar strength one or two weeks previously. This higher bid price was reflected in a moderately higher offering price, which in turn meant a slightly lower interest yield. The price to the public was 100¼ and 100½, comparing with previous corresponding prices of par and in one or two instances a fraction under.

The open market was active, semi-speculative bonds advancing in sympathy with stock price movements. The effect of Judge Gary's optimistic statement backed by an extra dividend on United States Steel common and coupled with other developments, including the rosy forecast made by Jesse Livermore, market operator, was not confined to stocks, but included the second grade bonds. Gilt edged bonds also moved up moderately, a feature being the advance of some of the railroad issues, notably the Union Pacific bonds. The recently marketed issue of $20,000,000 of first lien and refunding 5s crossed par for the first time since they were placed on the market. The fundamental factor in this advance, which was shared by all bonds of the same class, was a moderating tendency in money rates which are now one-quarter to one-half of 1 per cent. less than they were a week or two ago.

NEW ALBERTA BOND ISSUE.

$9,000,000 Offering Is to Refund Maturities Soon Due.

Offering of $9,000,000 Province of Alberta 5½ per cent. refunding bonds will be made on Monday by a syndicate headed by Dillon, Read & Co. and including the Canadian houses of Wood, Gundy & Co., the Dominion Securities Corporation and A. E. Ames & Co. The proceeds of this loan will go entirely toward refunding $11,000,000 of maturities coming due in the next five months. The issue will be offered publicly at par.

Sale of the $5,000,000 issue of State of Missouri 4½ per cent. highway gold bonds, offered yesterday, is announced by Estabrook & Co.

The American Chicle Company plans to pay off approximately $200,000 of its five-year 6 per cent. notes and bank indebtedness soon, according to a report yesterday.

WOOL STRONG ABROAD.

Prices Only Steady, However, in Home Market.

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—The Commercial Bulletin will say tomorrow:

"The market has held steady during the week, generally speaking. Fine wools are no more than firm but medium to low wools and especially medium quantities are very firm. Further purchases of quarter and three-eighths combing wools for knitting mill account are reported at fully firm prices. The woolen mills have been buying more or less regularly of medium to low descriptions at good full rates. Worsted descriptions still drag.

"The foreign markets are all buoyant and London has shown an advance on merinos, which are now 5 per cent. generally above the last sale, and crossbreds are all firm, with tops in Bradford up another half penny for the week, all around. The primary markets are fully firm. England is the big buyer of crossbreds abroad and France of merinos.

"In the west there is little new. The fall sales in Texas are to be held. Generally the growers continue to hold above the parity of the seaboard markets."

INCREASE IN FRENCH BANK CIRCULATION

Large Discounts in Past Week—Loans to the State Unchanged.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes, in francs:

Gold in hand	increased	201,000
Silver in hand	increased	112,000
Notes in circulation	increased	178,172,000
Treasury deposits	decreased	30,889,000
General deposits	increased	354,276,000
Bills discounted	increased	889,378,000
Advances	increased	925,000

Advances to the State remained unchanged at 23,400,000,000 francs, as against 23,800,000,000 a year ago this week. Largest amount ever reached by these advances, 26,700,000,000, in May, 1921; smallest during the last three years, 21,200,000,000, in March, 1922.

The principal items in the statement compare as follows with the same date one and two years ago, in francs:

	Gold.	Silver.	Circulation.
1923	5,539,322,425	295,652,000	37,848,181,000
1922	5,533,159,925	287,827,495	36,696,634,000
1921	5,523,865,962	278,421,175	37,154,458,915

The highest point which the Bank of France's outstanding note circulation has ever reached was 39,645,896,000 francs, on Nov. 8, 1920. The lowest point in 1922 was 35,281,890,295, on March 23, which was the lowest of any week since Aug. 28, 1919. Highest this year was 37,824,852,000 francs of April 5, the lowest the 36,388,138,000 of May 24.

The bank's official discount rate remains unchanged at 5 per cent., to which it was reduced on March 11, 1922.

TEXAS OIL BOARD TO MEET.

Directors Will Discuss Advisability of New Financing.

Directors of the Texas Oil Company will meet on Nov. 15 when, it is understood, the advisability of new financing will be discussed. Until then there will be no definite announcement on the subject, which has been the cause of rumors recently that the company contemplated selling an issue of bonds.

Inquiry yesterday among bankers who for several years have figured in financial transactions with the Texas Company brought forth a definite statement that the company had approached no bank to discuss the possibility of raising new money through the sale of bonds, and this fact was interpreted by bankers to mean that new financing, if any, would not be done in that way. It was pointed out that the company's policy in the past has been to raise new money through the sale of additional stock and there is no reason for bankers to believe that the company would deviate from that policy.

Reports current this week following the heaviness of Texas Company stock to the effect that a new bond issue was being considered were discredited. The company, in addition to cash on hand, has a bank line that is good for $60,000,000, and its total bank indebtedness amounts to less than $25,000,000.

It was regarded as probable that the company might find it sound policy to raise new money through the sale of additional $25 par stock to its stockholders on the basis of one new share for each seven now held, proceeds thus raised to pay off bank loans.

DIVIDEND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Manati Sugar, Loew's and Standard Oil Declare Payments.

The Manati Sugar Company directors declared four quarterly dividends of $1.25 a share each on the common stock, placing the issue on a $5 annual dividend basis. The first dividend is payable Dec. 1 and the others on March 1, June 2 and Sept. 1.

Directors of Loew's, Inc., resumed dividends on the capital stock by declaring a quarterly payment of 50 cents a share, payable Dec. 31 to stock of record Dec. 15. This is the first payment by this company since the middle of 1921.

The regular quarterly dividend of 35 cents a share was declared on the capital stock of the Standard Oil Company of New York, payable Dec. 15 to stock of record Nov. 23.

New Flurry in Yellow Taxi Stock.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—There was a new flurry today in stocks of the Yellow Cab and the Yellow Manufacturing Companies. Stocks of both were offered freely on the Chicago Stock Exchange and broke to new low levels. The manufacturing stock dropped $7.88½ a share compared with yesterday's closing price. It reached $87.50 against $96.37½. The taxi stock fell $6.25 a share to $112.75. Much of the selling was of a speculative character, but there was also a great deal of forced selling resulting from increased calls for margins.

Rumania to Issue New Currency.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 2.—The Rumanian National Bank has decided to issue 2,000,000,000 lei in new currency in an attempt to relieve the financial crisis. The present circulation is 17,500,000,000 lei. (This increase, at the normal exchange, would approximate $386,000,000, bringing the total circulation to $3,763,500,000.)

Beginning March 22, the Stock Exchange officially quotes Liberty Bonds in units and fractions, the fractions being 32ds of a unit, and the quotations after the decimal point representing one or more 32ds. In the above table, therefore, the figures of highest and lowest prices during 1923 and since date of issue are reduced to the form now used in the Stock Exchange quotations.

NEW YORK STANDARD TO LIST ITS STOCK

PRAIRIE CO. MAY FOLLOW

Only Four Others of Standard Group Are Now Listed on the Big Board.

The Standard Oil Company of New York is understood to have arranged to have its $225,000,000 capital stock listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Official announcement of the listing, it is said, will be made soon, probably next Wednesday. Thus far only four Standard Oil companies have listed their stocks on the New York Exchange, but it is expected that the step taken by the Standard of New York will be followed shortly by the Prairie Oil and Gas Company and others of thirty-two organizations formerly included in the old Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Up to the present there has been listed on the Stock Exchange a total of $1,083,019,297 of securities representing Standard Oil concerns. The listing of the stock of the Standard of New York and the Prairie Oil and Gas Company would bring the total up to $1,312,822,697. This does not include the shares issued in payment of stock dividends declared by the Standard Oil companies in 1922. As a result of those stock dividends, there are now outstanding more than 100,000,000 shares of the numeorus companies.

Upon approval of the listing of the stock of the New York and Prairie companies, the following Standard capital stocks outstanding will be represented upon the big board:

Standard Oil Co. of N. J. com..	$498,587,125
Standard Oil Co. of N. J. pf....	199,972,900
Atlantic Refining..............	50,000,000
Standard of California.........	204,787,272
Union Tank Car Co. com........	18,000,000
Union Tank Car Co., pf........	12,000,000
Tide Water Oil Co.............	49,672,000
Standard Oil Co. of N. Y.......	225,000,000
Prairie Oil & Gas..............	54,803,400
Total.....................	$1,312,822,697

In addition to the above there are thirty-two other Standard Oil organizations with stock outstanding approximating $1,158,000,000.

For many years the stocks of the Standard Oil companies were dealt in only over the counter, the market being made by specialists who devoted most of their attention to this group of securities. They were also traded in on the New York Curb market, but were never officially listed on the Curb. The stock of the old Standard Oil Companies of New Jersey was also traded in on the Curb prior to the split-up in 1911.

The first break in the ranks, was in 1920 when the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey made a public offering of preferred stock, following which application was made to have the shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange. At the same time the outstanding common stock of this company also was listed on the big board. Since then the Atlantic Refining Company, Standard of California, Union Tank Car Company and the Tide Water Oil, which is recognized as affiliated with the Standard Oil organization have had their shares listed.

In the case of the Prairie Oil and Gas Company, it is expected that the company will split up its present capital stock of $54,803,000 of $100 a share par value into shares of $25 par value each, before application is made to have the stock listed.

The drift of Standard Oil stocks to the New York Stock Exchange for a market place indicates a change of policy in the past of the heads of these companies. According to Wall Street stories, John D. Rockefeller Sr., when he was active in the management of Standard Oil interests, would not permit the shares to be traded in on any of the large exchanges, because such "listing" would have required furnishing to the exchanges statements of earnings and other data, which he did not desire to reveal to his competitors. For many years no statement of the earnings of Standard Oil was made public until long after it could have possibly had any market effect. Under the present regime practically all of the Standard Oil units now make regular semi-annual statements to stockholders and make public announcements of these figures, as do practically all of the so-called independents in the oil industry.

RUSH FOR CONTRACTS IN COTTON MARKETS

Prices Rise $9 a Bale on Government's Report of Low Crop Outturn.

The special report on cotton from Washington giving an indicated crop of 10,248,000 bales proved so much lower than the majority had anticipated that one of the wildest markets experienced in many years resulted. Though a general impression had prevailed that a drastic downward revision was foreshadowed by the decision to issue an extra report at this time and in less than two weeks prices had advanced over 2 cents a pound, when it came to actual figures of less than 10,250,000 for this year's production effects proved far reaching. Buying became so aggressive that in ten minutes prices rose $9 a bale and in less than three hours after the report had been received trading limits were reached in several months at an advance of 2 cents a pound. December sold above 32¼ cents, with all active months higher than any level reached last season. The market closed at a net advance of 162 to 184 points.

Just before the report, uncertainty over the showing led to considerable profit taking. This caught several stop-loss orders when January broke through 29¾ cents. A line of contracts carried that month to 29.60, compared with an opening figure of 30 cents. But the instant Washington figures were posted, a stampede followed and it became virtually impossible to obtain contracts necessary to fill buying orders. Prices rose quarter of a cent at a time, a situation that has not developed in the cotton market in a great many years. From 29.60, January rose to 30 cents, to 30¼ cents, to 31 cents and in eleven minutes was changing hands at 31.40. At this point a sufficient supply of contracts was offered to start a quick half-cent reaction, which was followed by a slow, steady advance. Trade and speculative interests poured a constant steam of buying orders into the ring, taking all cotton for sale at rising figures. Brakers bid for blocks of 5,000 and 10,000 bales and shortly before 2 o'clock a 2-cent advance had been recorded in several months and the gong sounded to prevent transactions above trading limits.

Similar events occurred both in New Orleans and in Liverpool. The foreign Exchange remained open to receive the Washington figures, and prices there jumped about 50 English points, or nearly a cent, before the close. Though New Orleans had ruled relatively easier than New York during early trading, the rise that followed carried January there up over 180 points, with sales above 31½ cents.

The last hour brought all months to the full 2-cent limit with the exception of October. This left the market with cotton wanted and an accumulation of buying orders that could not be executed resulted. Finding that limits on later months had been reached, those wanting cotton purchased December, though this represented an excessive premium over January and March as soon as December touched 32¼ cents. Other buyers took July, since January, March and May could not be secured. The ring was full of unfilled buying orders at the close, with virtually no cotton changing hands owing to the absence of sellers at a 2-cent advance.

Week-end figures showed spinners' takings of 326,000 bales, compared with 372,000 last year, and for the season 2,740,000, against 3,460,000 last season. The amount in sight aggregated 515,000, against 608,000 last year, making 4,664,000 for the season, against 5,162,000 last year. The visible supply increased 189,000, against 236,000 a year ago, bringing the supply to 2,794,000, compared with 3,670,000 a year ago.

TRADE CONDITIONS FOUND IRREGULAR

A FEW GAINS ARE NOTED

Dun's Review Records "Many Conflicting Phases," With Conservatism Ruling.

Business of the country on the whole continues "irregular" and "spotty" according to Bradstreet's summary of reports received from all sections of the United States. "Taken as a whole, both jobbing trade and industry seemed to quiet down in the latter part of October," says the paper, "while retail trade, affected by rainy weather in some sections and sharply lower temperatures in others, was variously retarded or stimulated."

A great deal of apparent confusion visible in trade reports, however, "seems to be due to the changing basis of comparison" it is added, "while some of it appears to have had its inception in the psychological effects of some not altogether well-advised ventures in the stock market. October a year ago, it must again be recalled, was in many respects the best month of the year, and this year's sales in many lines naturally did not show anything like the gains noted in earlier months. Industry has undoubtedly slowed up in enough lines to make them look reactionary, but in both trade and industry, current operations which would look active in other years appear to be or are actually disappointing set over against the apparently more swiftly moving pace of some earlier months. The cotton and silk trades, iron and steel, soft coal and oil, and, to a lesser extent in some sections, the shoe, furniture and building trades, show perceptible recessions.

"To a greater extent than perhaps ever before, however, immediate or nearby needs govern purchases, and it is a tribute to the aggregate volume of this sort of buying that trade and industry both continue to show many gains and to swell the totals of car loadings, bank clearings, mail-order sales and other indicia, as they manifestly do. October clearings were much larger than for the three months preceding, and while slightly below a year ago, the falling off in aggregate volume is mainly at the largest city, the rest of the country continuing to gain over a year ago."

Dun's Review says in part:

"The week has been marked by some confident statements on the business outlook, an extra dividend declaration by the principal steel interest, a sharp recovery in stock prices, and a quickening of retail demand under the stimulus of lower temperatures. Yet it has also brought reports of steel buying little in excess of 50 per cent. of producing capacity, another decline in pig iron prices, a further restriction of textile output, and statistics showing an increased commercial mortality. Hence the situation remains highly irregular, with many conflicting phases, and conservatism still governs most commitments."

Huge Order for Tin Plate.

The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, has a contract calling for the delivery of approximately $23,000,000 worth of tin plate, according to advices received in the financial district from Pittsburgh yesterday. The contract was placed by two of the largest industrial corporations in the country. It approximates between 220,000 and 230,000 tons. Deliveries are to be made during the first half of 1924.

Great Northern Loadings a Record.

The Great Northern Railroad Company reports loadings of revenue freight in October totaling 128,004 cars, the largest number for any one month in the company's history and an increase of 31 per cent. over October, 1922. Loadings for the year to the end of October totaled 912,582 cars, or 60,632 in excess of the 851,582 for the entire year 1922.

767,000-BALE CUT IN COTTON ESTIMATE

WORLD'S STOCKS VERY LOW

Decrease Is Ascribed to Bad Weather, Weevil Damage and Abandoned Acreage.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—A decrease of 767,000 bales in the prospective cotton crop as compared with a month ago was shown today in the Department of Agriculture's forecast of 10,248,000 bales, based on conditions prevailing Oct. 25. The report, the first of its kind ever issued in November, had been awaited with interest by the cotton world in view of the diversity of opinion as to the exact size of this year's crop.

The forecast was based on the condition of the crop on Oct. 25, which was 47.8 per cent. of a normal, compared with 49.5 on Sept. 25 this year, 52.6 on October 25 last year, and 43.2 on that date in 1921, indicating a yield of about 128.9 pounds per acre.

Commenting on the cotton report, the crop reporting board said:

"The change in forecast since Sept. 25 reflects the change due to weather and other factors since that date as ascertained by the board from all information at its command.

"Generally unfavorable weather and heavy rains in the Southwest, exceptional damage to grown bolls by the weevil, result of leaf worm ravages, coupled with the heaviest abandonment on record resulted in a forecast of about 767,000 bales below last month. This is the third short crop in succession though somewhat above the two preceding years.

World stocks of cotton at the close of the cotton year, July 31, were very low, the Department of Commerce reporting holdings at 6,400,000 bales compared with 9,536,000 bales on July 31, 1922. Ginnings in the United States from this year's crop totaled 6,400,579 bales to Oct. 18, according to census bureau reports.

The Department of Agriculture provided the cotton trade with the greatest surprise of the season yesterday by estimating the crop at only 10,248,000 bales. At 11 o'clock yesterday the report was posted on the Board of the Cotton Exchange and proved of such a nature that a stampede followed. January contracts had been selling at 29.60 an instant before the flash came over the wires, but in a second all selling offers were withdrawn. A rush to buy started from representatives of various cotton interests on the floor, but it became virtually impossible to execute them.

Prices soared a quarter of a cent at a time until tens of thousands of bales were changing hands at an advance of a cent or more. One block of 10,000 bales of January was offered at 30.90 and the broker having this line for sale was swept from his feet in the rush to secure these contracts. In eleven minuets January had risen from 29.60 to 31.40, an advance of $9 a bale, and representing one of the most extensive upheavals ever recorded after a Government report. Speculative and trade interests outside the Exchange became active on the buying side and found comparatively little cotton for sale.

The rise had been so rapid that a reaction of half a cent took place following the first wild, upward rush. But around 31 cents for January various brokers bid for 5,000 bales or more and lines of as much as 20,000 bales were taken from the ring as the afternoon advanced. When the gong sounded, May had touched 31.60, higher than any figure reached during the big market last year. The last hour of the day found December above 32¼ cents, a price not touched since the Fall of 1920.

Edward E. Bartlett Jr., President of the Cotton Exchange, said on the estimate:

"As a result of the disaster caused to the American cotton crop by the boll weevil, the world today faces a cotton famine more nearly than at any time since the Civil War. The crop estimate of the Government means that, with a carryover of only 2,500,000 bales from last season, the world's total supply will be but 12,750,000 bales, barely enough to meet the demands of the trade until the next crop, and leaving no margin to carry over next August. Last year the world, it is estimated, consumed 12,631,000 bales of cotton.

"Not only is the supply dangerously scarce, but storms have lowered the grade of the raw product to an unusual degree this Fall, which places the manufacturers of high-grade cloths in a serious predicament.

"The advance in raw cotton is expected to start heavy buying of all kinds of cotton goods in American markets, but conservative cotton men express great concern about the shortness of the crop and fear that prices must reach much higher levels. Old-time cotton men who for the best interests of the under 20 cents a pound fear that the price this Winter will mount to 35 cents, and possibly higher.

"The problem now before the American cotton trade is: Can the South again produce a crop in excess of 10,000,000 bales until the Government makes a determined effort to check the boll weevil?"

Adding yesterday's condition percentage and the condition given out by the department as of this date in 1922 and 1921, the comparison of condition by months is as follows:

	May 25.	June 25.	July 25.	Aug. 25.	Sept. 25.	Oct. 25.

LULL IN PARLEYS OVER RAIL WAGES

But Jersey Central Officials Deny There Is Any Rupture With the Brotherhoods.

OTHER ROADS NEGOTIATE

Employes of Hocking Valley Said to Have Refused to Submit Figures With Demands.

Further conferences between the Central Railroad of New Jersey management and local officers of the four train service unions on wages and working conditions will await digestion by each side of the facts brought out at the hearings this week, C. H. Stein, general manager of the Central, said yesterday. Asked if there had been a rupture, Mr. Stein said there had not, and that additional meetings would be arranged in the near future, either at the call of the union representatives or the railroad company.

Local union chairmen, who attended the first hearings will communicate the attitude of the road to their national officers and will be guided in their actions by the advice of their superiors. The men are seeking increases of from 12 to 39 per cent.

Other Eastern railroads that have conferred with their employes recently include the Baltimore & Ohio, Hocking Valley and the Maine Central. The Hocking Valley management met with representatives of the engineers and firemen on Oct. 29, it was learned yesterday, and in support of their demands the employes were said to have cited the increased cost of living during the past year and stated that in their opinion the decreases established by decision 147, effective July 1, 1921, were not justified.

The Hocking Valley management is said to have furnished its employes with a statement showing the earnings of these classes of employes as of October, 1915; October, 1917; March, 1920; July, 1920 and July, 1923, as compared with the changes in the cost of living during the intervening periods. No statements were submitted by the representatives of the employes in support of their specific request and the management suggested to the workers' committee that additional time be allowed them to prepare figures justifying the request. According to one in close touch with the situation, the committee was not agreeable to doing this, stating that they were not empowered to deviate from their request as submitted to the management.

Loans, Investments, Deposits and Borrowings Show Declines in Member Banks' Reports

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—An aggregate decrease of $39,000,000 in loans and investments, together with reductions of $109,000,000 in net demand deposits and of $21,000,000 in accommodation at the Federal Reserve Banks, is shown in the Federal Reserve Board's weekly consolidated statement of condition on Oct. 24 of 771 member banks in leading cities. Loans secured by Government obligations declined by $28,000,000; loans on corporate securities increased by $8,000,000, and all other, largely commercial, loans decreased by $21,000,000. Holdings of United States securities show a reduction of $8,000,000 for the week, while holdings of corporate stocks and bonds increased by $10,000,000.

A reduction of $28,000,000 in loans secured by United States securities reported for the member banks in New York City is offset by an increase of like amount in loans on corporate stocks and bonds. "All other," largely commercial, loans declined $23,000,000. Investments of these institutions increased by $12,000,000, Treasury notes showing an increase of $8,000,000 and corporate securities an increase of $4,000,000.

Net demand deposits of all reporting banks declined $109,000,000, banks in all Federal Reserve districts, excepting those of Philadelphia and Dallas, sharing in the decline. For the New York district the decrease amounted to $52,000,000; for the Cleveland, $13,000,000; for the San Francisco, $12,000,000, and for the Boston, $9,000,000.

Time deposits increased $10,000,000, while net Government withdrawals of funds amounted to $24,000,000.

Reserve balances maintained at the Federal Reserve Banks decreased $59,000,000. Cash in vault shows but a nominal change. For the New York City members, a reduction of $29,000,000 in reserve balances and a nominal increase in cash are shown.

Borrowings of all reporting institutions from the Federal Reserve Banks declined from $582,000,000 to $561,000,000, or from 3.5 to 3.4 per cent. of their total loans and investments. Borrowings of the member banks in the Boston district decreased $14,000,000, those in New York $10,000,000, while in the Kansas City district member bank borrowings increased $4,000,000.

Following is a statement of changes in the principal assets and liabilities of reporting members, as compared with a week and a year ago:

COURT STOPS SALE OF ANOTHER STOCK

Physician's Complaint Leads to an Order Against Advanced Motors Corporation.

OFFICES ON FIFTH AVENUE

Former Mechanic President of a $5,000,000 Concern—Sherman Here for New Drive.

Supreme Court Justice Robert F. Wagner yesterday issued an order restraining the Advanced Motors Corporation of 522 Fifth Avenue from selling any more of its capital stock. The injunction was granted on the application of Attorney General Carl Sherman, who came to New York yesterday to launch a new campaign against bucket shops and fake stock selling schemes. According to Deputy Attorney-General John J. Dwyer, the public might have been defrauded of at least $5,000,000 had the corporation been allowed to continue business.

The Advanced Motors Corporation was known as the Barbarino Motors Corporation until a short time ago. Its President is Salvatore Barbarino, a former auto mechanic who used to race with Louis Chevrolet, and later invented a motor for a four-cylinder car described as a device that would revolutionize the automobile industry and make its backers as rich as the original Ford stockholders. Barbarino did business on a modest scale until a few months ago, when he became associated with promoters with big ideas, incorporated his concern in Delaware for $5,000,000 and blossomed out in luxurious Fifth Avenue offices.

Physician Made Complaint.

The complaint against the corporation was made by Dr. Robert E. Kinloch, a practicing physician and surgeon, of 222 Hancock Street, Brooklyn. Dr. Kinloch in an affidavit said that he had lost $10,000 in stock of the Carlisle Tire Corporation of Stamford, Conn., and that the Barbarino Motors Corporation had heard of him through that concern. According to the physician, he received a letter from the Barbarino Motors Corporation saying that the Barbarino concern was going to buy the old Carlisle factory in Stamford and manufacture automobiles there.

Later, Dr. Kinloch said, a man named Connor called at his office in Brooklyn and told him that the Barbarino corporation owned a $75,000 plant at Lenox Road and Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn; that it had several cars nearing completion; that it had been turning out seven or eight cars a week; that it had had no trouble selling cars, and that it had a floor in a New York City building for making engines for taxicabs.

Then He Investigated.

Dr. Kinloch said he gave an order for $10,000 worth of Barbarino Motors Corporation stock, accompanied by a deposit of $100 in the form of a check. Meanwhile, he was told he would be made a director. Then he investigated. He said he found that there was no factory at Lenox Road and Flatbush Avenue, and that he discovered the Barbarino Motors Corporation doing business in a room 30x40 feet, leased from a garage.

It was stated at the Attorney General's office that the concern had sold only $47,544 of its stock. Acting under the Martin anti-bucketing statute, Deputy Attorney General Wilbur W. Chambers examined the concern's books and found that it charged $42,792 for organization costs and that the commissions and salaries paid salesmen amounted to $12,252, although the company had received from the sales of its stock only $47,544.

The application for an injunction showed that five million shares of a par value of $1 were to be issued by the organization, of which 1,500,000 were to be issued to Charles Beadon for forming and promoting the company, and the remainder to Barbarino. Barbarino was to turn over 1,000,000 shares to the treasury and the balance of 2,500,000 shares was to be placed in the hands of two of the voting trustees for five years.

OATS ALONE DROP IN GRAIN MARKETS

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—A meeting of millers was held here today with representatives of the Department of Agriculture at which the question of selling wheat and flour to Germany on credit was said to have been discussed, the millers urging that, if it be done, the credits be in the shape of flour.

This, with a garbled report which credited to the Department of Agriculture a statement to the effect that the United States raised only sufficient good milling wheat this year for home requirements, but really issued by the Agricultural Commissioner of the State of Washington, and the bulge in cotton combined to offset all bearish conditions and the close was ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher on wheat, while corn was up ⅜@⅝c, oats ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower and rye ⅛@¼c higher.

Trade was not large and the market easily influenced. Exporters have bought around 4,000,000 bushels of Manitoba cash wheat at Winnipeg in the past two days, and the buying of November there has been on a big scale, the finish being ½c higher on that delivery, which was one cent under the May at the last. It is figured that there is an immense open long interest on the part of farmers in the Canadian Northwest who have bought the futures and many have their cash wheat yet to dispose of at the head of the lakes.

Talk of stopping trading in wheat for future delivery was current but the Board of Trade officials issued a denial.

Owing to the widening of the spread between Minneapolis and Winnipeg, no fresh business in Canadian wheat was reported. Chicago handlers have sold around 125,000 bushels to mills in the last two days, largely Manitobas from Eastern points.

The millers' conference was called with the idea of impressing the Government that if $50,000,000 in wheat is going to be given to Germany it should be in the shape of flour.

In the corn market the buying today was largely for local account, and with a light trade the advance was easily attained. Old cash corn was unchanged to 2½ cents higher, with a good demand for yellow and white, while new corn was off 1 to 3 cents. A car of new No. 2 yellow was received from the Northwest which sold at 94 cents. New sample grade has dropped to the December price and under, and farmers in consequence are not selling freely.

Cash houses were good buyers of December oats while the Northwest sold May. The East was the best buyer of rye.

Primary arrivals of wheat were 1,464,000 bushels, week ago 1,186,000, last year 1,464,000; shipments were 575,000 bushels, week ago 649,000, last year 1,029,000.

Corn receipts were 593,000 bushels, week ago 592,000, last year 1,084,000; shipments 364,000 bushels, week ago 307,000, last year 521,000.

WAS HELD AT $300,000

New Owner for St. Nicholas Place House—Operator in Many Deals.

The Vosgro Building Corporation, a syndicate consisting of S. Rosenberg, J. Vogel, Jacob Schultz and M. Glicken, sold a new five-and-one-half story apartment on a plot 100 by 100 on the south side of 176th Street, 150 feet west of Broadway.

This is another one of the group of buildings that this company is erecting on the block bounded by Broadway, Fort Washington Avenue, 175th and 176th Streets, the Broadway front of which was sold by the same broker to Ennis & Sinnott about two weeks ago. This building rents for about $45,000 and was held at $300,000.

The buyer bought for investment. M. I. Strunsky was the broker.

The Ibsen Realty Co., Benjamin Bernstein, President, purchased from the St. Nicholas Place Corporation, S. Levy, President, the six-story elevator apartment house at the northwest corner of St. Nicholas Place and 153d Street, on a plot 164 by 77.8.

Sixty families are housed in the structure, which returns an annual rental of about $90,000. William S. Baker & Co. negotiated the sale.

SAY FIRM UNLOADED AS CRASH NEARED

Deery Admits He Sold $4,878,000 in Customers' Securities for Ruskay & Co.

$10,000,000 IS INVOLVED

Bankruptcy Witness Says Transactions Occurred Within Ten Weeks of Failure.

Stanis J. Deery, who described himself at the McMasters & Co. bankruptcy investigation last Summer as a "broker's hockshop," admitted yesterday at the bankruptcy investigation of S. S. Ruskay & Co. that within ten weeks of the failure of that brokerage firm for $10,000,000, in the Spring of 1922, he sold $4,878,000 worth of securities for Ruskay & Co.

His testimony came about through the statement of Herman J. Hayes, an accountant, to Federal Referee Harold J. Coffin that the securities were the property of customers of the firm and were sold almost immediately after being received by Ruskay & Co. in the period from Nov. 22, 1921, to Jan. 31, 1922.

The accountant added that at the same time Ruskay & Co. made insignificant purchases of securities from Deery, but Referee Coffin remarked that these transactions evidently were for the purpose of quieting customers of the firm who demanded them. The firm appeared to have indulged in such practices with other brokers whom they had used in unloading their customers' securities on the market when Ruskay & Co. was about to crash, he added.

Hayes also informed Referee Coffin that examination of the Ruskay books revealed that the customers' securities were sold to firms holding membership in the Stock Exchange and that investigation of the books of two other brokerage firms, Sartorious, Smith & Loewi and Morris & Smith, revealed that they also had sold securities for Ruskay & Co. shortly before the collapse.

Deery was called as a witness at the finish of the accountant's testimony. He told Referee Coffin that he ended his business with Ruskay & Co. shortly before the failure when Burrill Ruskay, head of the defunct firm, demanded $4,000 more in connection with the sale of stock of the Gulf States Steel Company. The witness said he was a member of the Consolidated Stock Exchange at the time and that his dispute with Ruskay started when Ruskay said he ordered Deery to sell 1,200 shares of the stock when the market was declining instead of 1,000 which meant a loss of $4,000 to Ruskay.

"Their business was of a tremendous volume," testified Deery. "It was larger than I could handle on both sides of the market. When the dispute arose, I was damned glad to get rid of the Ruskay account."

Deery admitted under questioning of S. Marshall Kronheimer, counsel for the Ruskay trustees, that for a week after the failure he had employed Eugene Greenhut a member of the bankrupt firm, in his office.

"I had been out of the brokerage business and was going back," exclaimed Deery, "and I took him in because he said that he could get me a lot of business."

"You were getting back to the source of supply?" asked Mr. Coffin.

"I was getting back where the money was," replied Deery with a smile.

Deery declared that he was not aware that Ruskay & Co., were illegally disposing of their customers' securities at the time they dumped almost $5,000,000 worth of them on the market through him. He said, however, that he had since learned the securities belonged to customers.

Under pressure from Mr. Kronheimer Deery admitted that he lent money to Burrill Ruskay on securities received from Ruskay & Co., and declared that he pledged these securities in banks. He said Ruskay borrowed the money because Deery gave him more for the face value of the securities than he could get elsewhere in the financial district. He declared he suffered no loss in this respect, however, because he always got the same amounts on the securities from the banks.

Referee Coffin, in asking Deery to appear at the resumption of the Ruskay inquiry on Nov. 16 next, said:

"You'll not be afraid to appear without a subpoena. You always do put up a brave front."

"Well, if I have nothing to conceal," retorted Deery, "there is no reason why I should not present a brave front."

"And you could add," interposed the referee, "if you did have anything to conceal, a brave front would be so much the better."

THREE BROKERS ARRAIGNED.

Held in Bail—Four Others Indicted for Fraud Are Missing.

George W. Field, Louis T. Hall and Charles J. Anastasia, three of the seven men indicted on Wednesday by the Federal Grand Jury on charges of using the mails to defraud in bucketshop operations, were arraigned yesterday before Federal Judge John C. Knox and pleaded not guilty. Bail for Field was placed at $5,000, as he was regarded as the main factor in the transactions. Hall and Anastasia were released in $1,000 bail each. Field's son, Leon A. Field, George W. Morse, his brother, Ralph L. Morse, and Wilfred A. Creighton, the other defendants, did not appear for arraignment.

Immediately after his arraignment before Judge Knox, George W. Field was subpoenaed to testify forthwith at 271 Broadway before Referee Harold P. Coffin in a hearing into the bankruptcy cases of Hall & Co. and George W. Morse & Co., two of the four brokerage houses through which the indicted men were alleged to have swindled thousands of customers out of many millions of dollars.

Referee Coffin asked Field if he knew the whereabouts of $300,000 in canceled checks of the two firms. On advice of his attorney, Ely Rosenberg, Field refused to reply on the ground that an answer would tend to degrade and incriminate him. On motion of Francis M. Fallon, attorney for the creditors, the proceedings were thereupon adjourned, without date. Field was served again with a subpoena, this one directing him to testify Nov. 16 before Referee J. J. Townsend at 299 Broadway, in a hearing in the bankruptcy of Field Brothers.

Field is a resident of Milford, Conn., and had been sought for months by process servers of attorneys for creditors.

Limburg Says Tammany Leaders Gained at Expense of Followers.

The assertion that salary increases for Tammany favorites had been voted by the Board of Estimate in the budget, "as soon as Mayor Hylan's back was turned," was made last night by Herbert R. Limburg, Republican and independent candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court, in a speech at the First Assembly District Republican Club, 236 East Broadway. Mr. Limburg cited the increases of the Borough Presidents of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx from $10,000 to $15,000 a year and of the Borough Presidents of Queens and Richmond and the President of the Board of Aldermen from $5,000 to $15,000 and other increases for heads of departments as instances of what had been done.

"The budget as now adopted contains salary increases of friends of the leader of Tammany Hall amounting to half a million dollars," Mr. Limburg said, "but nothing whatever is done for the rank and file, the real workers, who have no political pull."

TELLS HOW ROOSEVELT WON HIS FIRST DEBATE

His Sister, Mrs. Robinson, Recalls Victory When, at 22, He Defined Americanism as Patriotism.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—The circumstances of the forensic victory of Theodore Roosevelt when, as a 22-year-old first termer in the New York Assembly, he carried the day in a public debate before the Nineteenth Century Club in New York City against one of the most famous publicists of the day, were revealed here by the former President's sister, Mrs. Corinne Roosevelt Robinson.

Speaking before the Woman's Roosevelt Republican Club here, Mrs. Robinson told of the attempt of a great New York editor to banter "Young Roosevelt, reformer of the Assembly," by engaging him in a club debate against a famous publisher, renowned for his argumentative bent.

Invited to select his own theme, the young Assemblyman launched enthusiastically upon an exposition of Americanism, which he defined as "unstinted activity for the national welfare."

Faint applause was accorded the youth's arguments, and as the famous editor arose to begin his fifteen-minute rebuttal to Roosevelt's half-hour argument, the laurels rested with the opposition.

Americanism, the rebuttal set forth, was only one of a thousand "isms"—all of them the creations and fads of zealous after-dinner speakers. Indeed, Americanism was a topic hardly worthy of debate "in these circles."

"I watched my brother with some misgivings as his vigorous appeal was effectively torn to shreds by the dignified address of the great editor," Mrs. Robinson said. "Then in an instant his face lighted and I saw the faint marks of a smile which later we learned to hail as the mark of victory."

Rising amid the applause for his opponent, young Roosevelt steeled himself for his final rebuttal.

"Gentlemen," he said, with winning earnestness, "my distinguished opponent has condemned 'isms' most ably. I am granted five minutes to reply. I shall not consume that time. I shall not require a full minute.

"Gentlemen, I commend to your thoughtful consideration but a single word—Patriotism."

A thunder of applause greeted the reply, and thus, with Americanism—the theme of his first and last public address to America—was Roosevelt acclaimed victor in his first public debate.

"That was when I was 18," Mrs. Robinson concluded.

We Succeed as Our Clients Succeed

WORKING for the client and with the client perhaps is not an exclusive virtue of this organization, but by practising that principle for 33 years we have had no difficulty in getting business, and developing business after we get it.

Many of our clients "cried small" when they started with us; today their advertising voices are strong and lusty. And we have grown with them; our success has paralleled theirs.

There are about 2000 daily newspapers in the United States. We do business with most of them. This paragraph from a letter from The New York Times may be of interest to manufacturers who would like to become acquainted with an advertising organization cognizant of markets and media.

"We offer you our congratulations on the striking progress made by your agency, demonstrated by the volume of advertising placed in The New York Times in 1922,—$231,089.00"

We shall be pleased to discuss your advertising with you.
